FORTY-SIXTH ANNUAL MEETING

OF THE

American Missionary Association.

The Forty-sixth Annual Meeting of the AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION opened in the First (Centre) Congregational Church in Hartford, Conn., on Tuesday, Oct. 25th., at 3 P.M.

The Association was called to order by Rev. F. A. Noble, D.D., of Chicago, the First Vice-President, in the absence of the President, Rev. Wm. M. Taylor, D.D.

After singing "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name" the Scriptures were read by Rev. W. S. Palmer, D.D., and prayer was offered by Rev. Geo. R. Merrill.

The following Resolutions, presented by E. B. Monroe, Esq., Chairman of the Executive Committee, were unanimously adopted by rising vote:

The American Missionary Association convened in the City of Hartford, Conn., in its annual meeting, has received with profound sensibility the intelligence of the recent departure from this life of Mrs. Harrison, wife of the President of the United States.

To the beauty of a lifetime, distinguished by wisdom, kindness and Christian grace, she has added the holy loveliness of patience, fortitude and Christian resignation in meeting the pain of a prolonged sickness, and the assault of the last enemy, setting thus the noblest example to the nation, which honors her memory and mourns her loss.

We bow in reverent submission to that Providence of God, which has laid upon our honored chief magistrate the weight of this supreme sorrow, but which has also enabled him in the midst of public duties and excitements to watch so tenderly and so constantly by the bedside of the sufferer, sustaining her own by his constancy and faith in the Divine presence and grace.

On behalf of the Association, and of the large constituency which it represents, we offer to the President and his household the assurance of our deepest sympathy and of our fervent prayers to Almighty God, the "Father of mercies, and the God of all consolation," that He will encompass them with His sustaining strength in this time of their grief.

Resolved, That this resolution be entered upon the minutes, and a copy sent to the family of the President at Washington.

On motion, Rev. Geo. R. Merrill was chosen Secretary, and Mr. H. Porter Smith, Assistant.

The Roll of the Association was made as follows:

Whereas*, Since the last annual meeting of the American Missionary Association, its most munificent friend has passed from this into a better world, therefore,

Resolved*, That the American Missionary Association recognizes the goodness of God which put it into the heart of Daniel Hand to offer the wealth which he had acquired in the South, to the extent of more than a million of dollars, as a fund, the income of which should be devoted to the primary and industrial education of the Negroes of the South; and we shall hold his memory and his benefaction in lasting gratitude, and we trust that his example may inspire men and women of wealth to support or endow institutions for the higher education of the youth of whatever race, for whose elevation this Association exists, and for the building up among them of pure churches of our Lord Jesus Christ.

After singing "America," Mr. J. W. Davis read the report of a special Committee appointed at the last annual meeting, "in view of the probable withdrawal in the near future of government appropriations to the schools maintained by religious societies among the Indians," and supplemented the same by remarks.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE TO CO-OPERATE IN RAISING FUNDS FOR INDIAN WORK.

The report is hereby submitted by the committee appointed under the following resolution:

"In view of the probable withdrawal in the near future of the government appropriation to the schools maintained by religious societies among the Indians: Voted, that a committee of five be appointed to co-operate and advise with the Association in raising funds for this important work in order that it may be carried on and maintained in the wisest way without abatement, and, if possible, with enlarged efficiency."

The committee are of one opinion as to the urgency of the need of enlarged religious and educational work among the Indians on the part of the American Missionary Association at the present time. They are also deeply impressed with the importance of making this urgent need felt among the churches.

As to the method of appealing to the churches, a majority of this committee have been decidedly of the opinion that it would be best to appoint a special secretary for the Indian work. It seems to them that thus the churches can be best informed as to the needs of that work, and stirred up to larger gifts.

Conference had with the Executive Committee of the American Missionary Association has not been so full as was anticipated and desired by your committee. At the single conference, called by the Executive Committee on the 28th of September last, they expressed their feeling that the appointment of such a special secretary was unadvisable. In view of this expressed opinion your committee, although they have not seen reason to change their opinion, do not feel justified in pressing for such an appointment.

They especially regret, however, that while objections to the appointment of an Indian secretary have been raised, no other plan to enlarge the work among the Indians has been proposed by the Executive Committee.

It seems evident to your committee, however, that some form of special effort must be made by this Association if even the present interest and benevolence of the churches toward the cause of Indian enlightenment is to be maintained, and still more if this work is to be increased. Your committee expresses the hope that during the coming year, by methods which may commend themselves to the Executive Committee, the needs and the claims of the work among the Indians may be more definitely and forcibly presented to a far larger number of our churches in all parts of our land.

JOSHUA W. DAVIS,
ANNA L. DAWES,
EMILY S. COOK,
MERRILL E. GATES.

REPORT OF THE MINORITY.

The figures of receipts for Indian work for some years past submitted by the Executive Committee at our conference satisfied my mind that the employment of a separate Indian secretary could not reasonably be expected at present to produce such an increase over the present rate as to justify the expense.

I think it should be added that as one step toward the object before your committee the Executive Committee requested the preparation of an address to the churches stating the present exigency. AUSTIN ABBOTT.

STATEMENT MADE BY THE CHAIRMAN.

It is due to say on the second point named by Mr. Abbott that when four of the Executive Committee of the Association and four of the special committee were together the strong division of opinion in the special committee as to the issuing of a circular was stated to Mr. Elbert B. Monroe, the Chairman of the Executive Committee, and he deemed it advisable to relinquish all thought of issuing one, and it was mutually understood as a waiver of the request of the Executive Committee referred to.

J. W. DAVIS.

The report was received and referred to the Committee, for publication.

On motion of Rev. E. Horr, D.D., it was voted that the address of Mr. Davis be printed with the report.

The Rev. A. E. Dunning, D.D., presented the following resolutions, which were unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That we express our hearty thanks to this committee for the service it has faithfully rendered in the matter which the Association at its last meeting committed to its hands.

Resolved, That it is the sense of this meeting that the work of the Association among the Indians is now in a condition of special and pressing exigency. We urge upon the Executive Committee the necessity of taking measures to make special appeals to churches and individuals for the enlargement of this work, and to plan for that end in expectation of enlarged receipts, while we leave the methods to be adopted to the wisdom of the Executive Committee.

The following resolution, reported from the Business Committee, was unanimously adopted:

Whereas, An invitation has been received by this Association from the Faculty of the Hartford Theological Seminary to attend prayers or any other exercises at the Seminary, during its session; it was

Resolved, That while it is impracticable for the Association to accept in a body, it is suggested that individuals avail themselves of this courteous invitation whenever practicable.

After singing the Doxology, recess was taken until evening.

The Association was addressed on the matter of the report by Mr. F. B. Riggs, Hon. H. L. Dawes, and Hon. T. J. Morgan, Commissioner of Indian Affairs.

The resolutions presented with the report, after discussion, were adopted, as follows:

Whereas, The system known as "Contract Schools" in connection with Indian work is open to very serious abuse; and

Whereas, Government schools have now reached a position as to equipment, methods and general efficiency, where the common school education among the Indians may be safely and wisely entrusted to them; therefore

Resolved, First—that public money expended upon the education of Indians ought to be expended exclusively by Government officers upon Government schools.

Resolved, Second—that the practice of appropriating public money for the support of sectarian schools among the Indians ought henceforth to cease.

Resolved, Third—that it is wise for the A. M. A. to join in the purpose expressed by other great ecclesiastical bodies: the Methodist General Conference, convened at Omaha, May 9th, 1892; the Presbyterian General Assembly, which met at Portland, Ore., May 23d, 1892; and the Episcopal Convention, at Baltimore, Md., Oct. 19th, 1892, to decline to seek or accept any subsidy from the Government, and that henceforth this society act in conformity with this purpose.

The Business Committee reported the following recommendation, which was adopted:

The invitation from the Comptroller for the members of the Association to visit the capitol building is greatly appreciated, and the Business Committee recommend that all the members who can do so avail themselves of this opportunity to inspect one of the finest and most beautiful buildings in the country, which was built, strange to relate, for a less sum than the appropriation made for its erection.

The following resolution, offered by Rev. R. R. Meredith, D.D., was unanimously adopted by a rising vote:

Resolved, That the representatives of the Congregational churches here assembled in the American Missionary Association, pledge themselves to do all in their power to increase their contributions at least 12½ per cent., to meet the deficiency arising from our refusal, on principle, to accept a Government appropriation for Indian work, and recommend the same to all Congregational churches throughout the land.

After a Jubilee Song, Rev. W. E. Park, D.D., presented a report on the Mountain Work, and made an address upon the same.

Prayer was offered by Rev. B. F. Hamilton, D.D.

Rev. Cyrus Hamlin, D.D., in behalf of the committee appointed to wait upon Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe, reported that they had presented to her the following address:

Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe:

It is proper that the American Missionary Association, in coming to the city which you have for many years made your home, should pay the tribute of its honor to you who have done more than any other one person now living to arouse the conscience of our nation to the sin of slavery, and to secure the emancipation of that race among which this Association has its chief field of labor. To you, honored Madam, was given a heart to feel for the degradation and oppression of our brothers and sisters of a deeper color than ours. Others shared with you the full intensity of that feeling. Many others devoted their best energies to the brotherhood of this service, and their names will ever be held in honor with yours. But to you alone did God give that special intellectual power, that imaginative and dramatic faculty by which only you were able to picture to the world the barbarities of human bondage, and to compel those to read and hear who had shut their eyes and ears against the wrongs of their fellow men. We honor you because you devoted your genius to such a holy purpose. We thank God for the great work He enabled you to do; and we feel that we are, in the work of this Association, only carrying out what you inaugurated, or completing, by the agencies of the school and the church, the task which the emancipation of the Negro made possible. While the gratitude of this emancipated people shall ever bless your name, and while all who admire the achievements of literary genius shall hold you in special honor, may the God of the races of men give you His peace in the evening of your life until there shall rise for you the dawn of the life above.

Upon the resignation of Rev. W. M. Taylor, D.D., as President of the Association, the following was presented by Rev. A. J. Lyman, D.D.:

The American Missionary Association, convened at its annual meeting in Hartford, Conn., hereby makes record of the deep regret with which it has learned of the resignation of its honored President, Rev. Dr. Wm. M. Taylor, who has served the Association in this office for a number of years past, and whose letter of resignation leaves no alternative but to comply with his wish forestalling a re-election. The Association submits with great reluctance to this decision of its President, and regretfully accepts his resignation.

We record our special appreciation of the distinguished services which have been rendered the Association by its retiring President. In manner most genial, in suggestion most apt and sagacious, in spirit most inspiring, he has, by the wisdom of his counsels and the elevation of his character signally commended and strengthened the work of the Association, and by his presence added dignity and charm to its public anniversaries. He has always most earnestly and faithfully maintained the fundamental principles of the Association, and has met the special exigencies of administration with a fearless application of these principles and sure faith in their triumph.

In view of the occasion of illness, which has constrained Dr. Taylor to withdraw from this public office, we extend to him the warmest assurance of our personal love, remembrance and sympathy, trusting that by the blessing of Divine Providence he will be ere long restored to the public service of the Church of God. For this we pray, and we invoke evermore upon him and his the best blessing of that Divine Master whom he has so faithfully served and devoutly honored.

Voted that the minute be adopted and entered upon the records of the Association, and that a copy be forwarded to Dr. Taylor.

The report of the Finance Committee was made by S. R. Heywood, Esq. This report was received and adopted.

A letter was read from Mrs. Abbott explaining the detention by illness of Rev. Lyman Abbott, D.D.

The Association was addressed by Charles Dudley Warner, Esq., and after singing "Jesus shall reign where'er the sun," was also addressed by Rev. R. R. Meredith, D.D.

A statement was presented by Rev. Geo. R. Merrill for the Committee on Mountain Work, as follows:

The Committee on Mountain Work had committed to them a difference in details of administration that had arisen between the Executive Committee of the Association and the Rev. A. A. Myers. The Committee held a protracted session, at which the most full and complete opportunity was afforded for all parties interested to present the matters at issue between them.

The Committee have drawn up the following report:

The Committee on Mountain Work, on reporting for duty, had brought before us one definite matter to which it seemed to be our duty to devote our time and thought.

The subject which was presented for our consideration, and on which our fraternal assistance was desired, was concerning a misunderstanding which appeared to exist between the Rev. A. A. Myers, of Cumberland Gap, Tenn., on the one hand, and the Secretaries and Executive Committee on the other.

After a full, frank and courteous statement by those interested on either side, with the fullest opportunity of question and answer, and with copious extracts from correspondence, your Committee unanimously reached these conclusions.

1. There is no question or difference of opinion in any quarter with regard to the energy, zeal, persistence and Christian consecration of Brother Myers and his devoted wife. Their labors for many years in that interesting and important region have been abundant and fruitful. The sacrifices which they have made, the trials which they have endured, and the perils which they have braved, in the service of Christ and the cause of humanity are too well known and too highly appreciated to require any extended eulogium from us.

2. We are satisfied that there has been no intentional injustice, unfairness or unkindness toward Mr. Myers on the part of the Executive Committee or officers of the Association. We have the fullest confidence in their desire to discharge impartially and wisely the extensive, complex and delicate duties which rest upon them. We do not believe that they have meant to cast any reflection upon Mr. Myers' integrity or Christian character in any particular. The misunderstanding has arisen primarily through the enthusiasm and consuming zeal of the missionary on the one hand, and the necessity of wise and orderly administration of the business of a great missionary society on the other; and secondly through misconception of some unfortunate phrases occurring in the correspondence of the administration.

3. We recommend the continued employment of Mr. Myers by the Association, on condition of his adherence to the provisions of the Manual, as is expected of all the missionaries of the Association as the necessary basis of associated work.

GEORGE R. MERRILL, Chairman.

It is understood that the Executive Committee heartily accept the same, and on the part of Rev. Mr. Myers, the following statement is submitted.

HARTFORD, CONN., Oct. 27th, 1892.

To the Executive Committee of the American Missionary Association:

DEAR FRIENDS.—After consideration, following the report of the Committee read to us this afternoon, we heartily thank you for the kind opinions expressed, and accept the burden of work demanded of us, not only by the field itself, but also by your command. In accepting this work all past matters with us are forgotten. Our strong hope is for a more splendid future for Congregationalism in the mountain region as represented by the American Missionary Association.

Please be frank with us in all matters relating to the field.

A. A. MYERS.
MRS. A. A. MYERS.

Voted to receive and refer to the Committee, for publication.

The Minutes were read to date and approved.

Resolutions of thanks were presented by Secretary Beard as follows:

A year ago at Cleveland, Ohio, the American Missionary Association received a cordial invitation from churches in Hartford to hold its next Annual Meeting in this city.

We knew about Hartford. The Association had been here once and again in former days. There were memories of pleasant sessions, of hospitable homes and noble churches. We knew of Hartford; its ancient history, its present prosperity. We knew that we should meet at Hartford many steadfast friends who reside here, generous givers, whose sympathies and sacrifices have followed us in this work. We knew that we should meet the hospitality of churches which have rejoiced in pastors, identified for many years with the strength and honor of our Congregational communion; ministers whom all the land knows to admire and to honor. We have no doubt that the courtesy of these who invited us was fully matched by the eagerness of our acceptance.

When the time drew near for us to arrange for our coming, two secretaries met the chairman, Mr. Rodney Dennis, and several pastors in a preliminary conference. The greeting was so hearty and free, and the acknowledged burden of work so readily and generously accepted that we returned to our part in the preparation cheered not only with kind words, but assured of the success of this meeting also, by the acquaintance of those who promised to devote themselves to further its interest. We could quite well understand the love of the Hartford churches for their pastors.

We have come. We have had our abode with you, and we are about to depart.

The hospitality which we gratefully acknowledge, has been large and free. Can we say more than this, that it has been characteristic. Your beautiful homes in this city of rich inheritances, charming with the refinements of long-time and Christian culture will be remembered. Especially do we wish to express also our appreciative gratitude to Chairman Mr. Rodney Dennis, and Chairman Rev. W. DeLoss Love, and to Rev. Frank Shipman, associate pastor of this church, for their most constant and laborious services in our behalf. This Association has had many pleasant gatherings in the past—year by year with churches and pastors — but we think in strength and high thoughtful and able presentation of our work, no Annual Meeting of the American Missionary Association has excelled this one. Certainly in the perfectness of the arrangements, in the smoothness of their execution, in wise anticipation of every want, we recall no experience superior to that of this meeting, through the wise thoughtfulness, the patient fidelity, and the most courteous execution of all plans on the part of these chairmen, our beloved brethren, and the pastors and others who have assisted them.

We desire to thank this First Church and Society of Hartford for the use of this spacious sanctuary and its chapel, the singers who have delightfully led us in our worship; and all those who have contributed much to our happiness.

We thank the daily newspapers for their highly appreciated favors; the railway companies for the reduction of fares, and everybody with whom we have had to do for pleasant faces and for good cheer.

You are now willing to speed the parting guests, but as they return to their own homes, they will take with them that which will enrich them and will not impoverish you, the grateful memories of good days here spent in the service of the Lord; and these memories will make the name of Hartford for many a day a pleasant word to us whenever it shall be spoken.

A response was made by Rev. W. D. Love, Jr.

Thanks were voted to Rev. A. H. Bradford, D.D., for the Annual Sermon and a copy requested for publication.

The presiding officer addressed the Association in closing words and, after prayer and the benediction by Rev. N. Boynton, D.D., declared the Association adjourned.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

BY REV. W. E. STRONG, Chairman.

It is the splendid commonplace of missionary efforts in these times to say that the year under review has been one of progress. The triteness of the phrase is an eloquent testimony to the success of modern missions. It is a matter of course with us that the work should grow.

We cannot, however, pass so lightly over the record of enlargement in the Chinese work of this Association during the past twelvemonth. It is as surprising as it is gratifying, for the report of a year ago indicated a decrease in the numbers being reached and influenced, a fact which was at once explained as due to a corresponding decrease in our Chinese population, because of the harsh attitude of our Government toward it. Since that time Congress has tightened the screws of restriction to worry out the patience of those who yet remain, and to strengthen, by a deeper sense of injury, every prejudice that the Chinese mind could cherish against the religion of this Christian land.

And so it is a cause for grateful rejoicing that this year's report comes to us, as it does, with the story of advance: more teachers, more schools, more scholars, too, and gains in the number turned from idolatry, in the zeal and efficiency of the converts, and in the gifts of these our fellow Christians. Every department of labor, and each aspect of its accomplishment, seems to call for thanksgiving. It would be good news in any year. It is doubly precious this year.

Your committee desires to express its pleasure at the evident purpose of this society to press, rather than to slacken, this branch of its work. Whatever our Government may do, let not our Association take one backward step in its treatment of the Chinamen. If their numbers dwindle, if their prospects darken, let this body show to those that remain the tender and painstaking love which our Lord Jesus gave to the needy and oppressed. We urge that an unstinting support be accorded this Chinese mission, and that prompt advantage be taken of every fair opportunity to strengthen or increase its enterprise.

The motives to this purpose are not few or feeble.

The character of the results being attained is in itself a powerful plea for the undertaking. There has been plenty of cheap scepticism as to the possibility of Christianizing these despised foreigners. Public opinion has been heavily impregnated with it. We have been told, over and over, that the Chinaman was either too dull of mind or too bad at heart to become a Christian. Sometimes it was the language he was after, sometimes it was the acquaintance of the lady teacher, but never, so we have been assured on every hand, has this sordid emigrant from Asia shown any real appreciation of the Christian Gospel, or any noteworthy fruits of the Christian life. His willingness to be taught in the Bible school was only another evidence of his proneness to "ways that are dark and tricks that are vain." It is worth much to us, in view of such flippant or malicious talk, to learn that on the Pacific coast there are now over 2,000 Christian Chinese who have been received as members of evangelical churches, and that it can be said by those who know them, and who live in the midst of the hot hatred which surrounds them there, "by every practical test of character, by their steadfastness, zeal and honesty, liberality and growing knowledge of the truth and increasing efficiency in teaching the truth to others, they give, on an average, tokens of true conversion as clear as can be found in the Christians of any land." And a survey of the work being done substantiates this testimony, for it reveals the hearty response of these new converts to the spirit of the Gospel. There is the reinforcement they are giving to the mission by their own efforts in it; there is the fervor with which they enter into evangelistic work; there is the quickening impulse to self-government as well as self-help, and beyond that, their noble giving to the cause of Christ. Over $6,000, the report shows, was the amount of their offering for Christian work the past year. That was the gift of the Chinamen connected with our missions, the most prosperous of whom get only the cook's wages of from thirty to thirty-five dollars a month.

When one looks upon these tokens of regenerate Chinese character, and contemplates the patient and shrewd persistence with which this race is pushing out its colonies and slowly working up into the larger branches of trade and commerce, he begins to sympathize with the ardent faith of those who labor for them, that here is a people worthy to be ranked for capacity and force with our own Anglo-Saxon race, and likely in its "sure and silent Oriental way" to become, ere long, as loyal and efficient a servant in the harvest field of the Lord.

The missionary enterprise of the converted Chinamen on our Pacific coast is only one of these evidences of their real Christianity. But it calls for special mention as furnishing another and weighty argument for pressing our work among them. For this mission in California is proving a direct and important feeder of the foreign missionary enterprise in China. Many who are converted in America are led to go back to preach the gospel to their countrymen, while those who remain here have joined in supporting and directing a mission there. In co-operation with our American Board, and under the care of its missionaries, they have established themselves in Southern China, whence most of these emigrants have come, and there they are seeking to focus the effort of returning Christian Chinamen to proclaim the gospel. Of the fidelity and worth of these men we rejoice to hear such recent and strong testimony. A work which so cements Home and Foreign Missions, and leads the disciple to promptly and faithfully fulfill his Lord's last command, lays claim to our abundant support. And that claim is made direct and urgent when we are assured that if the funds could be supplied it would be possible to place an unusually large number of efficient Christians in such missionary service here as would be their best possible training for missionary work in their native land.

But it will seem to many, we feel sure, that the obligation which now bears heaviest upon us in this branch of the Association's work grows out of the present attitude of our country toward these brother men of ours. We counted it a proud achievement when our Commodore forced open those unwilling ports and broke through that wall of silent centuries, till at last we got a treaty that would protect our commerce and bring wealth to our coffers. And then we toled over these strangers to build the railroad that was to bind East and West, and to develop some of the vast properties that we had not hands enough to handle. We have used them in one way and another with our changing needs, but always regarding them as aliens and outcasts, and burdening them continually with new and ugly restrictions. And now, after numerous vain attempts, we have made a last and impetuous effort to repair that crumbling wall, and to thrust back behind it these unwelcome human beings, bidding them understand for themselves and repeat to those who are peering out, "Never dare to set foot henceforth on the Christian soil of the United States of America."

The strongest reason, to many minds at the present hour, for re-enforcing our Chinese mission, must be the thought of the shameful abuse to which we have subjected this race as it has dwelt among us, with the impulse which that thought engenders, to do all we can to show that American Christianity has a mind broad enough to be just, and a heart soft enough to be kind.

REPORT ON CHURCH WORK.

By Rev. G. W. Grover, D.D., Chairman.

Mere numbers are always poor factors by which to judge of spiritual consequences —they may mean much or little, according to a large number of modifying conditions. Judged by figures only there have been other years when greater advance has been made. Estimated by intensity of interest, by that large, anxious outlook upon the future, that desires to see, and then to act, the year has been one of marked success.

We are told in the Gospels that the work of the leaven is positive and sure, but nothing is said as to the longer or shorter time, before its results shall be visible, that must always depend upon the nature of the leaven, and the character of the lump; each must influence the other in the way of hastening or hindering.

Then, too, leaven has a qualitative as well as quantitative action; it sweetens and purifies as well as pushes itself and its power through every waiting cell of the lump with which it is brought into contact.

For many years the American Missionary Association has been wisely, patiently endeavoring to leaven the lump of ignorance, superstition—all those shadowy necessities—that stood before it and stimulated it into existence a generation ago.

Each succeeding year may now be expected to tell us a story whose features shall vary more or less every time it is retold. The leaven has had time to work, and its higher qualitative results may now be sought for and expected. There are many indications along this line that it gives your committee gratification to point out, as we know it delights the Association's great constituency to see. The gradual change of speech, tone and look upon the faces and voices of the colored brethren who come to our meetings year after year, as representatives of the churches and schools under the auspices of the Association are demonstrations which no man can gainsay of the high type of the intellectual and spiritual culture which is revolutionizing the character of the Negro and making him the peer of any man on earth.

Your committee would call especial attention to the underlying tone of the report of the Executive Board, so far as its church work is concerned, indicating that the observant gaze of the Secretaries and Executive Committee, has with greater clearness and accuracy discerned a growing change in the life and character of the churches, which had in less degree been evident to us all whose thoughts and hearts follow them in their yearly labors.

"Three churches planted and for a long time sustained by this Association, now rejoicing in self-support."

"Our efforts are to develop the churches, not only to self-support, but to self-control."

"Several churches are more cohesive in their membership, and are coming to a better understanding of their duties and privileges."

"It is a satisfaction to us to know that we are constantly introducing a better educated ministry among the colored people, and that many church customs and practices detrimental to an intelligent church life are passing away."

We would call particular attention to the very promising work in eastern Kentucky, another door evidently opening wider, within whose portals there would seem to lie opportunities for most promising labor.

Owing to the removal of six churches which were reported last year, the entire number stands to-day at 140, with a membership of 8,485, with an addition during the year of 986, of which 733 were by profession.

Brethren, what of the future—as judged by the past and the present—the future of the mission work of the A. M. A.? We hear a great deal in this nineteenth century about its being a "transition epoch," a transition time—I wonder if Noah and Abraham and Solomon thought they lived in one, too—as though the whole fabric of life around us was taking on new conditions, offering new problems—calling for change of form of labor and efforts and being gradually reconstructed.

How is it, brethren, do the facts justify the statement? I should not be surprised if we found that like most other assertions persistently and repeatedly made by men of intelligence, there was a modicum of truth contained within it, as to the inference that methods of work must promptly and speedily change with change of circumstance or condition, that is something surely that calls for most careful and prayerful consideration. To be sure we may call it true in religion, as in other labor, your man of efficiency, your society of efficiency, must be a man, a society of adaptation; but then, you men of success must know not only how to take hold of new things, but when to let go of old ones; it is possible to let go too soon, and to find that we have only crippled instead of strengthened ourselves by the attempted change.

The time comes when the boy that you have thought for, planned for, worked for, lived for, must plan and live for himself. If he does not he will be an old boy instead of a young man. But if the boy runs away from home before his education is complete, or before his self-reliance has become a garment that he has learned to easily wear, he is apt to come back with torn clothes and a splintered self-esteem. The wise father is he who watches the moment when the boy ought to go. The grateful boy is he who when he goes does all that he knows from the moment that he starts.

I utter no dumb or whispered secret when I say that the constituency of the American Missionary Association has been anxiously considering, especially during the past two years, whether a good many boys of the Society household are not ready to push out for themselves, to act, to think and decide more for themselves; whether their relations to the heads of the household should not take on more and more the quality of advice and counsel that the boy always wants from father and mother, rather than the use of the indicative or imperative, in which tone they used to speak during the boy's childhood and when he resided under the home roof.

I said, brethren, that we had all been thinking of this broad question. It is very evident, by the report of the Executive Committee, that they have been thinking of it, too.

We should—and I doubt not we do—remember that our boy was not only a boy when the Society took him in charge, but he was a boy that had never been to school at all—he was ignorant, untrained; he must be sent to the primary school and built up from the very foundation. This was what the Association had to do. You and I know how nobly and well they did it; how they spent of their care and time and life energies for their boy until now the boys—not one but scores—can come to the great gatheringtime and mount this platform, and by fluent speech and gentlemanly, courteous bearing, show that the boys have become men.

And now that the boy has grown mature, and away from the necessities of those details of oversight and supervision which he needed at the start, the question is, shall he now be given a larger liberty and be dealt with on the plane of his approaching manhood?

I do not wonder that the officers see it plainer; for who are they? They are and always have been, men of whom we may be, and of whom we are, proud indeed. The Society has always, brethren, been singularly fortunate as to its officers.

With such an equipment, friends, what can there be for the grand old A. M. A. but larger opportunities, fully and adequately met, a development in the future, worthy of the record of the past—a continued labor that shall constantly tend toward making facts of words as we utter the sacred desire, "Thy Kingdom Come."

REPORT ON EDUCATIONAL WORK.

By Rev. C. E. Harrington, D.D., Chairman.

That part of the paper presented by the Executive Committee relating to educational work abounds with evidences of wisdom and is both inspiring and suggestive. It is true, it does not tell of decisive battles and cities taken by storm. It rather presents signs of a siege laid against the powers of darkness and ignorance, and compels hope that the siege will not be raised until there is an unconditional surrender to intelligence.

Your committee recognize at the outset that it is impossible to tabulate the results of educational work for any twelve months. The peculiar character of the schools of the Association make it much more difficult to express in mathematical terms than the achievements of the ordinary school.

We can repeat the summary which the Executive Committee has published to the world, and call attention again to the fact that the Association has under its care 6 colleges, 28 normal schools, doubled in 6 years, and 50 common schools, with a total of 384 teachers and 13,062 pupils. We can call attention to the enlargement of the work as exhibited in three particulars, viz: the multiplying of schools, the increase of teaching force and the raising of the standard of scholarship. But there are important factors which refuse to be hemmed in by figures and elude every attempt to grasp and reduce them to exact quantities.

The Association pursues its course with a lofty aim. It holds the school to be a great deal more than a place for mental development. It is a place where boys and girls can be trained in all things essential to manhood and womanhood. It makes the spiritual force dominant. It holds that the fear of God is not only the beginning of wisdom, but the crown also. It honors the body as the instrument through which life is to be expressed, and so teaches the hand to be skillful. In short it combines industrial, intellectual and spiritual training, and its products are men and women equipped for the duties of American life.

It is gratifying to note that the Association, while aiding the needy, does nothing to encourage idleness or to lead to a habit of dependence. It rather stimulates to efforts for self-support, by transferring aid as soon as the people can go alone, and by withdrawing aid whenever the people do not show a readiness to do their part to sustain the schools. The administration is equally wise in regard to encouraging State aid and winning the sympathy of those in power. It is scrupulously careful to offer no least impediment to free schools supported by taxation.

We believe the policy of the Association is worthy of commendation when it gives special attention to the development of normal and high schools. The only hope we can have of reaching the masses of people in the South is by means of the few who can be gathered into such schools as the Association has planted and supported. We know the Macedonian cry may come up from multitudes of places, and there may be strong temptations to multiply schools. It must be a difficult thing for Christian men to turn away from imploring communities. But our aim is to reduce the ranks of illiteracy, with all it drags behind it and, in the end, we believe it will be found to have been the best policy to strengthen the things which remain, to build up, to make more efficient the schools already planted, and seem to be deaf to many cries rather than try to cover too wide a territory. Sufficient aid to the few who are to affect the many is better than a little aid to the many who cannot lift up even a few. We rejoice, therefore, that the colleges are strengthened. We believe it was wise to strengthen the theological department of Talladega, and add a two years' Biblical course. We take pleasure in the appointment of a Biblical instructor in Tougaloo and in the dedication of a new theological building in connection with Fisk University. We think it encouraging that more and more instruction is given in the industries, and that the quality of student life is improving. If we cannot have more students and better, let us have better students without having more.

The only suggestion of the paper which takes anything from our complete satisfaction is that which shows that with the utmost care in administration our means are unequal to the needs of the work. It may be one of the ways God takes to discipline the world in righteousness to keep the demand always in advance of the supply. But let us not take refuge behind this thought. Possibly we are here greatly mistaken. At all events the call comes with increasing emphasis for more generous contributions. The schools of the Association are crowded to overflowing; students are turned away because they cannot get in. More teachers ought to be employed; more schools opened. But there are no funds. We need another Daniel Hand, and another; and we need a multitude of givers to fill our treasury and make it possible to reach and raise the great mass who are waiting and watching for deliverance. It is with continued pleasure that we call attention to the aid furnished by that princely giver who loved the Association, had confidence in it, and thanked God for the inestimable privilege which had been conferred upon him by being made the channel of blessing to his needy fellowmen.

Schools have been opened where there would have been none but for Daniel Hand. Hundreds of students have been aided who would have dwelt in darkness but for his gifts. They will be the Andrews to seek out Peters; the Philips to call Nathaniels. But we ought to remember that there were conditions under which this munificent sum was given, which limit the Association in the use of it.

If the churches should conclude that a million dollars, given by one generous man, relieves them from their wonted contributions; they would prove unworthy of the gift providentially bestowed upon the cause they seek to aid. Rather should they be inspired by this example, and see in the gift the signal for an advance, and, encouraged with the hope of greater achievements in the future, make more liberal contributions.

REPORT ON INDIAN WORK.

By Rev. F. A. Warfield, Chairman.

Your Committee on Indian Work recognize the deep importance of the action relating to the Indian work unanimously adopted by the Association yesterday afternoon.

They also unanimously approve and emphasize the line of action already taken.

The importance of the movement already in process to transfer the "contract schools" of the several denominations into the charge of the government which furnishes the funds for their support suggests the following resolutions, upon which they recommend action by the Association:

Whereas, The system known as "contract schools," in connection with Indian work, is open to very serious abuse; and

Whereas, Government schools have now reached a position as to equipment, methods and general efficiency, where the common school education among the Indians may be safely and wisely entrusted to them; therefore

Resolved, First, that public money expended upon the education of Indians ought to be expended exclusively by government officers upon government schools.

Resolved, Second, that the practice of appropriating public money for the support of sectarian schools among the Indians ought henceforth to cease.

Resolved, Third, that it is wise for the A. M. A. to join in the purpose expressed by other great ecclesiastical bodies, the Methodist General Conference, convened at Omaha, May 9th, 1892; the Presbyterian General Assembly, which met at Portland, Ore., May 23d, 1892, and the Episcopal Convention at Baltimore October 19th, 1892, to decline to seek or accept any subsidy from the government, and that henceforth this Society act in conformity with this purpose.

REPORT ON MOUNTAIN WORK.

By Rev. W. E. Park, D. D., Chairman.

The class of individuals termed "Mountain Whites" numbers about two million. They are the natural inhabitants of the Alleghany mountains, and form a large part of the population of West Virginia, Eastern Kentucky and Tennessee, the western part of North Carolina and northern Georgia and Alabama. For a period of seventy years in our history they were forgotten and passed nearly out of sight until the war of the rebellion and the development of their country since the conflict brought them into great prominence. Some mystery attaches to their origin, the greater number showing signs of Scotch-Irish descent with an occasional trace of the Huguenot, but this strong stock has been mingled with some baser elements. From this race, before its northern migration sprang probably Andrew Jackson and John C. Calhoun, but Abraham Lincoln is the noblest product of the mountain white stock. This population, so powerful for good or ill, which promises to wield such great influence in a section of our country naturally controlling, has been labored for by other denominations, but in our opinion its future rests largely with the American Missionary Association. The work carried on among them has been mainly educational. The intellect of the race, naturally strong, has been stimulated by the influence of Berea College, Ky., also by the institution at Williamsburg, Ky., where elementary English is taught, and instruction given in the mechanic arts, a tuition of inestimable benefit in so crude and uncivilized a community.

An important Academy is maintained at Pleasant Hill, Tenn., besides many normal and graded schools in which there are being educated thirteen hundred pupils, destined, we believe, to exert an immense influence throughout these Highlands of the South. During the past year the work in this department has increased beyond the power of the society to meet it. In localities where the public schools were found to be good, the institutions of the Association were moved to spots where education was poorer. A primary building has been added to the Williamsburg Academy; the schools upon the Cumberland Plateau have been enlarged. The increasing number of scholars has made necessary an enlargement of the building at Bending Oaks, Ala. During the year the mountain whites themselves have shown an extraordinary interest in the work, contributing building materials for school edifices. The Christian Endeavor movement has done a great work for the young people of this section. The work of women has during the past year been marvelous in elevating this race, which, from its native ability, wealth, territory and geographical position between North and South, may yet hold the balance of power in our country.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON FINANCE.

By Samuel R. Heywood, Esq., Chairman.

At the Annual Meeting held last year at Cleveland, a committee was appointed and instructed to examine and report upon the financial affairs of this Association. During the past week a majority of your Committee met at the office in the Bible House in New York, and Mr. H. W. Hubbard, the Treasurer, gave us free and full access to the books. We were more than pleased with the intelligent manner in which they are kept. The entries were full and yet brief. The cash-book, perhaps the most important in the list, is a model record. Here we found daily entries of all moneys received and paid out, giving the source and disbursement. From this fountain head the various items are carried to the journal and thence posted to the ledger. These books are admirably arranged for giving information. It is not too much to say that the system of bookkeeping in operation in the treasurer's office is the embodiment of simplicity and comprehensiveness. A monthly statement is laid before the executive committee, together with a list of all receipts and disbursements for the month preceding, which must be approved by the committee on finance. Quarterly examinations of the financial affairs are made by two auditors elected annually by the Association. These examinations appear from certificates on record to have been carefully and intelligently made. For example, all checks that are out are listed, giving date, number and amount, thus making it certain that such checks must pass before them at their next meeting.

All funds received are promptly deposited in banks approved by the executive committee and all money is paid out by checks signed by two officers. The Association has a large list of securities representing investments that are kept in a safety deposit vault which is only accessible to the treasurer and an associate officer, neither of whom can open the box except in the presence of the other. A portion of the Association's funds are loaned on first mortgages, not exceeding 50 per cent. of a conservative valuation.

We find a careful and full record of all the property, both real and personal, held by the Association. The receipts for the year are $430,568.49, which includes $610.12 balance brought forward from former year. The treasurer's report shows expenditures $429,949.37. We take pleasure in calling your attention to the fact that the fiscal year closed without a debt, with $988.15 in the treasury. Let us thank the Board of Management for this happy result.

The report of the Executive Committee has told you the extent of the educational work. 84 schools are maintained in the South, with 884 teachers and 13,062 pupils. Add to this the church work, and that among the Indians and Chinese, and we see the great demands made upon the society. Some eminent writer on arboriculture has said that when a tree ceases to grow it begins to die. Thank God our Association is growing and has no elements of decay. The growth of the work demands more funds. Your Committee, in going over the financial affairs of the Association, is convinced that more money can be used to great advantage. To use a commercial term—our plant is large. Our administrative department is well organized. Why should we not increase our work. Business men are wont to say that the only way to reduce expenses is to increase the business. With this idea before us why not make an effort to raise at least $100,000 more this year than last year. This means larger giving by both churches and individuals. We see by the year-book that in forty-nine states and territories there are 4,987 churches. We can with our reports reach the ministers, and they can solicit aid from the membership. In the name of God and humanity we make the appeal for additional aid.

The Daniel Hand Fund is still yielding a large income which is complimentary to his foresight and sagacity in making his investments. The securities held on account of this fund are entirely those he turned over to the Association. Many of them will not mature for from twenty to thirty years, and the rate of interest is much higher than prevails to-day. His gift, made in 1888, was $1,000,894.25. The income for the year ending September 30, we found to be $52,721.17. The securities representing this fund are kept in a separate safe deposit vault. This is a trust fund. All the transactions connected with it are entered on a set of books specially provided for it. The bank account is also separate from all other accounts. Nothing but the income can be expended, and this must be in accord with the terms of the donation.

The by-laws wisely provide for a committee on appropriations. The committee is made up of the chairman of the executive committee and the chairman of the three standing committees, and is required to present either in May or June to the executive committee a detailed statement of the amounts required in each department of the Association work for the year. We wish to thank the Committee for their arduous labors. Their prophetic eye has seen the wants of the extending field. Their listening ear has heard the urgent appeals for aid. The results for the year show the wisdom of their recommendations.

Forty-one states and territories have contributed in donations and from estates the funds to carry on this noble work. We are glad to notice that the State of Connecticut has furnished toward the amount $103,814.98 during the year. In this connection we take additional pleasure in telling the people of this flourishing and important New England State, what they have done for this society since 1871; twenty-one years. For convenience we give the figures in three periods of seven years each.

1871 to 1878 the donations and from estates amounted to	$172,619.01
1885 " 1892	418,757.05
Total	866,172.86

We cannot forget that Daniel Hand and John F. Slater were both Connecticut men by birth.

Your Committee wish to emphasize the faithful and constant attention which the auditors, executive committee and officers generally have given to the financial affairs of the Association.

We close our report by praying that God in his mercy grant us to act well our part so as to meet his approval when called to answer for the trust in our hands.

EXTRACT FROM ADDRESS OF S. R. HEYWOOD, ESQ.

I want to say a single word about Daniel Hand. It may not be known to the stockholders of this corporation just what kind of a man Daniel Hand was. He went down South many years ago and made a good deal of money. When he was eighty-eight years old he sat down and wrote to the various missionary societies and asked them for a copy of their by-laws and their plan of disbursing money. He received reports from the various missionary organizations, and among them he got the constitution and by-laws of this Association. There he saw that the great State of New York had given them a charter, did not charge them any tax, and he said: "Here is the place for me to put my money. I will put in a million dollars before I die. No sharp lawyers in Connecticut, or anywhere else, shall undertake to trip up my will and say that I did not give this." Hence he gave over a million dollars in trust to the Society. Now, if that does not inspire confidence, Mr. President, in you and in the stockholders of this Association, I don't know what will. If you wish to compare what Daniel Hand did with what millionaire Stewart didn't do, you can. It showed great wisdom.

The last thing I want to say to this audience is this: You must have received inspiration here; I hope you will carry it home. If I were going to advise you, I would advise a good many of you to go home and write a codicil to your will, remembering this Association. I would advise the clergymen here to go home and plead in a more earnest manner than they ever did before, for this Association. I would advise the Sunday-school superintendents here to get a contribution for these national societies out of their schools. We must teach our Sunday-schools something about this work, and if they can't give but a cent apiece let us get $4.00 out of every school that has 400 members. I wish that every Sunday-school in this land would start the present year with giving something to this Society.

FORTY-SIXTH ANNUAL REPORT
OF THE
EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE,
FOR THE YEAR ENDING SEPTEMBER 30TH, 1892.

GENERAL SURVEY.

In accordance with the custom of the Executive Committee of the American Missionary Association, they report to the Annual Meeting a summary of the work accomplished during the past year, and of the plans for the coming year.

Immediately after the Annual Meeting at Cleveland the Executive Committee met and incorporated the instructions of that meeting in their Manual. This Manual revised we have cordially and faithfully observed.

The work with which we have been intrusted has not changed in its characteristics, nor in its most pressing demands. As the years add to themselves, and our work multiplies itself, we are painfully impressed with the inadequate provision for the unreached and needy people with whom we have to do. We engaged less than a generation ago to do our part in the redemption of four million negroes just emancipated from slavery. This colored population has become now seven million in the old slave territory. A million and a quarter are in schools, but more than the half of seven million cannot read. In view of the increase in population, the needs in the South at the present time are almost as appallingly great as they ever were aforetime. We speak first of because our missionary work has been and must be very largely in our schools. The experience of all the missionary societies is emphatic that it is well-nigh impossible to save ignorance. Men's souls will not come under the power of truth without knowledge, and Christian life cannot be made with vacant minds and vacant hearts. A Christianity which does not hold the reason and the thought exercises but little moral influence upon the life.

The end which we have in view, namely, to bring these people into the power and exercise of a worthy Christian faith, which shall govern and elevate the life, is sought most directly in an education which both develops their intellectual powers and directs their religious natures. Hence, our schools are more than schools. They are schools conducted and taught by those who have consecrated themselves and their work to Christ. They are missionary centres under the domination of an abiding missionary spirit, where religious truth sits in empire over all truth, and where every science taught is made to lead the mind upwards to God. In every school one of the lessons of the day is from the Bible. With this mission in hand, our real work cannot be measured by figures, nor told in the tables of statistics. The accomplishment is something which cannot be mathematically multiplied, but is one which is subject to all the laws of Christian growth. Statistics of achievement do not give the prayer, the work, the persistent purpose, the patience and the aspiration which are a part of the grace of God. It has ever been the thought of those who have been intrusted with the direction of this Association to ask how they might find themselves worthily working together with God in harmony with His evident providences; to plant and cherish into life both principles which are everlasting, and institutions which shall be a part of the growth of the kingdom of God.

Our schools at the present time number 84 — 28 of these in the Southern states are normal schools, whose ultimate purpose is to prepare the most capable and worthy students to go forth as teachers. These normal schools are situated—1 in Virginia, 5 in North Carolina, 2 in South Carolina, 5 in Georgia, 1 in Florida, 4 in Alabama, 6 in Tennessee, 2 in Kentucky, 1 in Mississippi, 1 in Arkansas. In the year 1886 the number reported in the General Survey was 14.

The extension of the work may be seen in the number of new schools opened and in the enlargement of those already established. Within the last six years the following have been added to the list: Beaufort, All Healing, Blowing Rock, Saluda, N. C.; Thomasville and Marshallville, Ga.; Selma, Marion, Fort Payne, Nat, Ala.; Pomona, Pleasant Hill and Crossville, Tenn.; Meridian, Jackson, Moorhead and Mound Bayou, Miss.; Orange Park, Fla.; Cappahosic, Va.; and Helena, Ark.; besides several schools which are smaller, in destitute places, and several schools upon the Daniel Hand foundation. Most of our schools have both largely increased the teaching force and advanced the standard of instruction. We give a few illustrations.

Among our later schools, the Gloucester Normal and Industrial School, opened in Virginia a year ago, has been greatly prospered. It began with two teachers and now has five.

Washburn Seminary, at Beaufort, N. C., which began with two teachers, enters upon this year with five.

Lincoln Academy, at All Healing, N. C., has had an exceptional growth. Extensive additions have been made to its capacity during the past year.

Avery Institute, at Charleston, S. C., has advanced its course of study sufficiently to receive a charter from the state, and is hereafter to have its immediate interests cared for with a full board of trustees. The work done in Avery Institute is thorough, and the graduates are in demand for teachers.

Brewer Normal School, in Greenwood, S. C., which was lately enlarged, opens this year with the Rev. J. M. Robinson, of Detroit, Michigan, as Principal.

We regretfully announce the resignation of the accomplished Principal of Ballard Normal School, Mrs. L. V. Shaw, who is now in Europe. The history of this school since it was enlarged through the generosity of Stephen R. Ballard, Esq., of Brooklyn, has been remarkable. It now numbers thirteen teachers in its corps of instruction.

Dorchester Academy, in McIntosh, Ga., which five years ago had but two teachers, is now enjoying great prosperity with eight teachers.

The school at Orange Park, Florida, opened a year ago, was overcrowded with students, and enters upon the new year with great hopefulness and enthusiasm. It has now nine teachers in its corps of instruction.

Trinity School, Athens, Ala., is deprived of its former able and devoted Principal, Miss M. F. Wells, who had taught in this school for more than twenty-seven years. Miss Wells began to teach in a deserted church before the war was closed, and has been the inspiration and history of this school until now. She bears with her the gratitude of hundreds who owe their elevation and Christian life to her personal instruction and character.

A boarding and industrial school-building has been erected at Moorhead City, Miss., in the densest part of the Black Belt, and is now in session. Another school is approaching completion in Mound Bayou, Miss., in the heart of the Black Belt.

Daniel Hand.

The giver of the noble fund called the Daniel Hand Fund, died, full of years, December 17, 1891. He had lived to see in some measure the working of his great gift to needy colored students. In frequent conference with him through correspondence it was our great satisfaction to have the expressions of his absolute confidence in the Association, and his gratitude that God had spared him to inaugurate and behold the beginning of his great charity. It need not be said that this fund is wholly outside of the work which the Association has been and is doing. It is cared for and administered upon by the Association for work and aid that would else not be done. Several schools, where the darkness is dense, have been planted, and buildings erected, as Daniel Hand schools. Many hundreds of youth who would else go untaught have been aided just enough, so that together with their own struggles, they have availed themselves of educational help which must else have been denied them. Those who will be saved to their race and to the cause of Christ, through Daniel Hand, will praise the grace of God in him down the ages.

MOUNTAIN SCHOOLS.

Just now we are opening very interesting missions in the Mountain country, in locations almost inaccessible to Christian work until recently. In some localities in Kentucky the people themselves are self-denyingly giving labor and material to aid in building for school and church work. We are seeking to withdraw the support of outside funds from those localities which are now able to carry on their own schools, in order to use the missionary means in more destitute regions. It is no part of our intent to provide common schools permanently for the Mountain people, but simply to awaken them to such a sense of their needs and of their own powers that they will themselves carry on the educational work after it has once been introduced. The awakening among these people, hitherto passed by and isolated from the incitements of our modern civilization, is remarkable. Their response to endeavors in their behalf often shows that they have not lost the fibre and morale to receive and assimilate educative influences. These mountaineers must not be confounded with the "poor whites" of the more Southern states. They are strong and vigorous, and are likely to develop powers which will be important factors in our national life. Situated midway between the North and the South, they will doubtless hold the balance of power and influence in many important issues between the tendencies to progress or regression. What can be done for them now will be an immense influence upon the immediate future of the Republic.

Our work among the mountain people has increased throughout the year beyond our resources for meeting it. In addition to sustaining schools which we have planted, we have transferred aid from places where schools should now be locally cared for, or where they are not sufficiently supported, to points of greater need, where new schools have been planted. We have explored needy sections in connection with evangelizing efforts—regions which we hope soon to enter with educational work.

A primary building has been added to the Williamsburg Academy, and enlargements to the schools on the Cumberland Plateau. Such growth has attended the year's work at Bending Oaks, Alabama, that an addition to the building has been made necessary, as the rooms were crowded beyond their capacity by pupils. In some of our mountain schools, we have experienced the benefit of the Christian Endeavor movement; societies having been organized, and the devotion and activity of the young people so developed that they have been a very important aid in our evangelizing work for the community.

The principal efforts of the Association have been directed in its educational work to the development of its normal and higher schools. It is not our purpose, in any case, to do what the state can do. We agree with the well-known educator and philanthropist, Dr. J. L. M. Curry, that "our educational charity would sadly fail of its purpose if the least impediment were placed in the path of free schools." When our schools of a common grade are in the vicinity of fairly good public schools, it is our policy to transfer our work to where the need is imperative. At the same time, the life of many of our churches, and the general moral welfare of a vicinity, make the school in connection with a church a necessity.

OUR COLLEGES.

TALLADEGA COLLEGE, in Alabama, during the last year took upon itself a thorough college organization and course of study. Strengthened by the addition of three new professors, the year has been reported the most successful of any in its history. The industrial departments in the mechanic arts and agriculture have received large attention. Many applications for admittance were refused on account of lack of room. The theological department has been greatly strengthened by the appointment of Rev. Carroll Cutler, D.D., to one of its chairs. A two years' Biblical course has been added for those who are too far advanced in years or not sufficiently advanced in their studies, to make advisable longer theological study.

ATLANTA UNIVERSITY, in Georgia, received its usual grant of $3,000 from the Association this year. During the year, also, the Association executed to the University a deed of valuable land—a part of the college campus—owned by the Association, and freely cancelled a mortgage of $3,000 held by the American Missionary Association on contiguous property. They also relinquished representation on the Board of Atlanta University Trustees, and responsibility for further appropriations from the Association. The trustees of the University notified the Association that they received with great pleasure and satisfaction this action of the Association in thus enabling the University to become independent. May it have abiding success.

STRAIGHT UNIVERSITY, in Louisiana, has reported a fruitful year. This institution has been strengthened in its college department. In January last its main building, erected chiefly by Hon. Seymour Straight, was consumed by fire. The chapel, recitation rooms, library and mineral cabinet were destroyed. The property was adequately insured, and a larger structure is now in the process of erection, which it is hoped will soon be ready for use.

TOUGALOO UNIVERSITY, in Mississippi, no longer receives aid from the state, through the adoption of its late constitution. This institution is constantly developing in thoroughness of instruction, in better methods of its work, and in better work. Rev. Henry E. Sawyer has been appointed Biblical instructor, and a two years' Biblical course, similar to that at Talladega College and Straight University, has been adopted. We may expect that the gracious influences of this institution will be increasingly felt throughout the Black Belt, by this and other additions to the course of study in Tougaloo.

FISK UNIVERSITY, in Tennessee, reports its best year. Its halls have been filled to overflowing with a superior class of students. Its new theological building has been dedicated, and the Rev. Charles W. Dunn, of Galesburg, Ill., has been appointed a professor in the new Biblical school. By the legacy of General Fisk, a spacious and artistic stone chapel has been in the process of construction. This memorial chapel will soon be dedicated.

Both this and the new theological building add much to the imposing outward effect of the Fisk University buildings.

TILLOTSON INSTITUTE, in Texas, needs larger accommodations. Through lack of these it is working at considerable disadvantage. It is reported by our Field Superintendent to be thorough in instruction, and to exercise a large influence in that part of the state.

HOWARD UNIVERSITY, in Washington, D. C., in its collegiate and normal departments, is independent of the American Missionary Association; but its theological school is sustained by the Association, and is under its supervision. The last theological year greatly encouraged both the University and the Association. Those who were present at the examinations, expressed their pleasure with the instruction, and the comprehension and attainments of the students.

HAMPTON NORMAL AND INDUSTRIAL INSTITUTE has received from us the usual yearly grant of $500.

We are finding that every year shows marked improvement in the quality of student life. Students come to the more advanced schools better prepared. They could scarcely be more patient than formerly, but their purposes are higher. Their earnestness has a grip on larger ideas. They get deeper into the reason of things; they think better, and are gaining in the reading habit. Mere text-books no longer satisfy. They are taking wider visions of literature and of the great world of mind and the life of other days. Their standards are higher. They "are rising."

INDUSTRIES.

In most of our normal schools in the South and among the Indians, and in all of our colleges, special instruction is given in industries. Agriculture and mechanics are taught both in their principles and in their practical applications. These industrial departments do much for race elevation. Self-helpfulness makes for selfhood. The lack of skill in labor and in the inability for skilled labor cannot but invite injustice. To better one's material condition is a contribution to the race. We have received generous appropriations heretofore from the Slater Fund, and the purpose of the year before us is to so devote these appropriations that those who study in the manual and normal departments shall become teachers of industries and arts to others, so that the toils which go to farms, and flocks, and commerce, may be not only tributary to personal exaltation and happiness, but also to a higher civilization. We believe that the safety of the colored man, as a man with the rights of man, is largely in the path of industrial and material progress. We intend to make our manual training and normal instruction all look to the preparation of qualified teachers.

CHURCH WORK.

The work during the year has largely been that of canvassing the churches, and of strengthening the churches which now receive our aid. We have enlarged our church facilities with new edifices and many improvements. We have been slow to plant a number of helpless churches which must promise little but to count in the statistics. Much time and attention, also, have been given to the theological schools, to plans for their development during the year for the preparation of a ministry better educated and fitted for its difficult work. Some who have been preaching, but who found their theological furnishings insufficient, have already returned to the theological training schools. Other students have been aided and encouraged to fit themselves for intelligent Christian work. Our church work has been supervised and carefully visited by general church missionaries located in different sections of the South, and much evangelistic and missionary work has been done by these missionaries with a view to plant churches where there may be sufficient hopefulness of growth to warrant the missionary expenditure. Several new preaching-stations have thus been opened, and places occupied where as yet it has not been thought to be missionary policy to organize them at once formally into churches. Three churches planted, and for a long time sustained by the American Missionary Association, are now rejoicing in self-support, and we had hoped to add two others this year. On account of the extremely low price of cotton and the general lack of money among the class with whom we are laboring, our anticipations have not been realized. It is a satisfaction to us to know that we are constantly introducing a better educated ministry among the colored people, and that many church customs and practices detrimental to the development of an intelligent church life are passing away. Several churches are more cohesive in their membership, and are coming to a better understanding of their duties and privileges. Our efforts are to develop the churches not only to self-support, but also to self-control. The need of better churches than the average Negro church in the South is both the broad justification of this part of our missionary work and the sharp limitation of its immediate numerical and financial results. The influence of these churches is not by any means to be measured by their size or their number. They are leaven in a great mass of religious profession in the South. There has, however, been a decided gain towards self-support the past year. Much good work has been done by the students of our colleges in preaching at out-stations.

Rev. George W. Moore, after a pastorate of ten years at the Lincoln Memorial Church in Washington, D. C., who has proved himself a wise, able and devoted minister of the Gospel, and has won the esteem and confidence of all the churches, has resigned to become Field Missionary and evangelist in the American Missionary Association. The great regret felt by the church in the loss of their pastor, is shared also with the Theological Department of Howard University, where Mr. Moore held one of the professorships.

His work will be to encourage and counsel the churches and their pastors, to strengthen them by his presence and with his experience, and to assist in evangelistic work as opportunities may appear. He will report the condition and necessities of these churches, and will seek to plant new churches in such places as give evidence of hopeful life. The Rev. Eugene A. Johnson, formerly pastor of the Congregational Church at Knoxville, Tenn., succeeds Mr. Moore in the Lincoln Memorial Church.

The Rev. J. E. B. Jewett takes the pastorate of the Congregational Church in Beaufort, N. C. A parsonage, also used for a teachers' home, has been added to our property in Beaufort during the year.

Mr. Fred. S. Hitchcock, principal of our school at Chapel Hill, has been licensed by the North Carolina Association, and is supplying the church at Chapel Hill, N. C., and preaching in several out-stations.

A Congregational church has been organized in Guthrie, Oklahoma, and has been granted aid by the Association. The Rev. Thomas J. Austin, a graduate of Fisk University, and lately pastor of the Congregational church in Florence, Ala. has been called to the pastorate.

A new and tasteful edifice has been dedicated in Louisville, Ky.

The churches of New Ruhamah and Salem, Miss., which for a time have been without a minister, have been revived, and a pastor, a graduate of Howard University Theological school, is now with them. We await the result of this new endeavor.

Several attempts have been made to plant churches in the Black Belt. Several stations where we have sent preachers, prove to be able to do nothing towards the building or the support of churches. Two new churches have been organized in New Orleans and are supplied with a regular ministry.

The tasteful Congregational Church at New Iberia, in the place of one which was destroyed by incendiaries, has been dedicated and is now occupied. The people of this church are planning with the American Missionary Association to provide themselves with a suitable parsonage.

Interesting mission work has been taken up at three different points in eastern Kentucky. In Harlan County, the work which was begun through the special voluntary offering made at our Annual Meeting last year has increased in the most promising way. The young teacher of the mountain school began holding religious meetings in which a strong interest was taken. A revival of marked power took place. Numbers of the people were converted. A preacher was sent to work among them. They felt so deeply the need of better educational advantages that they generously denied themselves for the erection of a school building. Their a ility, however, is partial, and we have appropriated sufficient to supplement their means so that a school and teachers' home are now in the process of erection. A Congregational church of twenty-five members has already been organized, which promises to have a great and beneficent influence through all the region. This is an illustration of what might be done in many communities.

We desire to reinforce and develop this evangelistic service, sending missionaries back among the people in the more isolated communities. This is an awakening work, and while it does not show anything in immediate church organizations, it arouses in the people aspirations after better educational advantages and leads to a higher type of churches. As preparing the way for the introduction of school and thus of church work, it is invaluable. It is our wish that this more specific mountain work shall be largely developed on the heights which are still unreached in our missionary service.

Eight churches have been added to our list.

NOTE.—It may be noted that 6 churches which were last year reported have been removed from our list. 8 new churches have been established, making a total of 140 churches. We have lost 144 members by death; by excommunication, 240; by dismission, 208.

THE INDIANS.

Among the Indians ninety missionaries and teachers were at work last year in twelve churches with about five hundred members. In the boarding schools and in day schools were over five hundred pupils. One of the most interesting features of our Indian missions during the last three years has been the opening of the work in Alaska. We have now four missionaries —two have gone this year—at work among the natives at Cape Prince of Wales, the westernmost point of the American continent, with an enrollment there of nearly two hundred school pupils. So isolated are these Christian workers that we hear from them only once or twice in the year; but every report thus far evinces the usefulness of their service, not only in behalf of the moral and spiritual improvement of the natives, but in saving them from destitution and starvation by the introduction of industrial appliances. The school building and teachers' home have both been enlarged.

We are continuing to sustain an interesting work among the S'kokomish Indians in the state of Washington. Mission work among the Crows in Montana has been entered upon. We have added new missionary work among the Indians of New Mexico.

In the Dakotas, our out-station work will soon demand modification, due to the changed conditions of life. Instead of remaining in villages, the Indians are becoming scattered to their individual holdings, and their awakening under the incitements of civilization will call for a somewhat different distribution of our agencies. Missionaries should take possession of the more important out-stations, as the Government from time to time shall provide necessary schools. The increasing development of Government schools must modify the school work which we have hitherto carried on. Already the Indian schools have an enrollment of nearly twenty thousand pupils, an increase of over four thousand within the last three years. Within a few years this rate of progress will bring into school all the Indian children who can be reached. The Board of Indian Commissioners in their report of last February call attention to the fact that with the development of public schools, it will before long be easy to put an end to the complications involved in the contract system, by the transfer from religious societies of such schools as they do not need, and the building up of the schools they retain into permanent institutions for the training of advanced pupils. The report adds, "Then, such societies can devote more means and force to direct missionary work." The report continues, "In this transition period, when the Indians are beset with difficulties and perplexed by the new duties and responsibilities of citizenship, they sorely need all the moral and Christian instruction that the churches of all denominations can give."

It is our desire to develop our Indian school work, in all its departments, as effectively as possible wherever it is not taken by the Government from our hands, and to use every means in our power to reach the pupils in the Government schools with Christian churches. This year nearly $10,000 more have been expended in our Indian Mission fields than last year.

NOTE.—The reduction in figures from last year's report is largely due to the fact that by absence of a missionary, the number of pupils in the Alaska Mission had to be greatly reduced, owing to the deficiency of the teaching force.

THE CHINESE.

Our Chinese missions on the Pacific coast, under the direction of Dr. Pond, were visited by one of the secretaries from the office during the year, and are now being personally inspected by District Secretary Roy. Both agree that there is no part of our work which is more significant, or, perhaps, more far-reaching in its influence for the labor and expenditure bestowed upon it, than these Chinese missions. Dr. Pond writes: "One-third of the 336 members of Bethany Church, of which I am pastor, are Chinese believers. While I joyfully recognize in the American members of my church a steadfastness and devotion I have nowhere seen excelled, I also testify that according to every test of Christian character authorized by the Master, our Chinese members are their full equals. I affirm that by every practical test of character, by their steadfastness, zeal and honesty, liberality and growing knowledge of the truth, and increasing efficiency in teaching the truth to others, they give, on an average, tokens of true conversions, as clear as can be found in the Christians of any land."

Dr. McLean, of Oakland, who has fifty Chinese members in connection with his church, writes that they are as consistent Christians as any fifty of his American church members.

On the Pacific coast there are resident now over two thousand Christian Chinese who have been received as members of the various evangelical churches. As a proof of the sincerity of their convictions, many converted Chinese have returned as missionaries to their homes in China, and several are zealously engaged in propagating the Christian faith in their native land. The Chinese of our Congregational missions last year contributed $6,290 to the treasury of their local missions. Our 19 missions on the Pacific coast, are two more than last year. Forty-five missionaries have been employed; 16 of these are Chinese. The number giving evidence of hopeful conversion this year is about 70.

Among those who may especially be mentioned is Mr. Joe Jet, evangelist of our Chinese missionary society. Lately returned from China, he brings cheerful accounts from those who have gone from California as missionaries to their brethren in China. He reports a fidelity and consecration in the midst of persecutions which were not surpassed in the histories of the disciples of the early church.

One of the leaders and most respected of the Chinese Christians in California is Jee Gam, evangelist for the American Missionary Association. Through the influence of such earnest missionaries as these, these converted young people from China are one by one returning to their native land to be sustained and directed by the converted Chinese who remain. They bear with them the experience of a true religion, the knowledge of a Christian civilization, and the principles of Christian institutions, which they will plant in that heathen country, and which will live in China to bear fruit for Christ long after we have passed away.

BUREAU OF WOMAN'S WORK.

Our Woman's Bureau of correspondence is found valuable and efficient, especially in connection with the development of woman's co-operative work through the state organizations. Through this Bureau we appoint special missionary representatives in response to contributions, furnish large supplies of literature to both women's and young people's societies, and provide speakers for their meetings, as also for the annual meetings of the state organizations. The results are most satisfactory in increasing intelligence, interest and contributions.

Of the thirty-seven state organizations now in operation, many have made annual pledges. During the past year thirty-five missionaries have thus been sustained in the field of the American Missionary Association.

We make thankful mention of generous aid which we have received from the AMERICAN BIBLE SOCIETY, which year after year, through our missionaries, has circulated the word of God among those who were ignorant of truth.

The TRACT SOCIETY has never failed to honor our requests for assistance, and we gratefully recall their gifts.

We have occasion to renew our hearty acknowledgment to our CONGREGATIONAL AND SUNDAY-SCHOOL PUBLISHING SOCIETY for its liberal grants of books, papers and lesson-helps to our Sunday-schools and missions.

The SOCIETIES OF CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR, in many churches, have found in our work a channel for their prayers and benevolences which have gone to young people who have been denied the privileges of their benefactors, but who have the same Saviour and Lord, and who are seeking to emulate their more happy brethren in establishing Christian Endeavor Societies among themselves. We acknowledge substantial help from the Societies of Christian Endeavor, and send them our greetings.

Thus we have reached the close of another year's service. It has been an arduous and active year. The Executive Committee have endeavored to supervise this work with faithful care. Their meetings, in prolonged sessions, have been frequent and full. Not a step has been taken in the onward movement and administration of whatsoever has been done, without the knowledge and direction of the Executive Committee. They bear witness to the remarkable harmony of our various schools, their healthful condition, and their efficiency, and are grateful for the communications from the field—frequent, appreciative and cordial. As has been indicated in the Survey, the duties include erection and care of buildings, both schools and churches; the provision of schools with teachers who shall also be missionaries; the educational and financial watch and care in the interest of missionary economy; the superintendency of these missions, all of which are in localities where no Congregational constituency exists except as it is created by this Association. The work is large in extent and grows steadily. Larger benevolences were consecrated the last year than the year before, and this fiscal year just now ended has somewhat increased our receipts. The sum of our current regular receipts, e. g., during the past six years, has been more than two and a quarter million of dollars. We feel that these sacrificial gifts from Christian givers testify to the depth, steadiness and permanence of the interest in this work which is so near to the heart of Christ. Marvelous as the progress is among the needy ones to whom we are sent, we can count what has been done only as a preface and promise of the advances to be made in coming generations.

Meanwhile, let us remember in our constant prayers, our devoted workers in the field—more than five hundred—who in their work are justifying their faith. They are lights in the darkness. Both in the churches and schools they are rescuing souls, transforming homes, educating communities, and sending teachers out among their people to bring in sweeter manners and nobler laws. They are doing more than this. They are raising up foreign missionaries who shall hasten the evangelization of the world. From the far-off shores of upper Alaska, the light of the Gospel will cross the narrow straits into northern Asia; from the Pacific coast those who have learned from us of Christ, are already telling the story of His love in southern Asia. Three students, sent from Fisk University, missionaries in darkest Africa, are but forerunners of the prophetic day of grace for that continent. We shall need at least $500,000 next year, if we would keep pace with our call. Patriotism unites with faith to ask for still greater sacrifices and more earnest labors.

OBITUARY.

CHARLES MARSH, ESQ.—The Association has met with a severe loss in the death of an honored member of its executive committee, Charles Marsh, who died at Springfield, Mass, November 27th, after an illness of only one week. He was present at the last meeting of the committee in apparently good health. Though Mr. Marsh had been but a year a member of its executive committee, his remarkable financial ability and experience had given promise of great usefulness, and his interest for many years in the work of the Association had been constant and effective.

REV. O. H. WHITE, D.D., died in Stratford, Conn., January 10th, on his seventy-second birthday. For seven years Dr. White served as the Secretary of the London Freedmen's Missions Aid Society, which was auxiliary to the American Missionary Association, collecting money for scholarships and for our missions in Africa. He was a faithful worker, genial and earnest.

REV. H. S. WILLIAMS, pastor of our church at Athens, Ala., died on January 9th. The principal of the school, in sending us the notice, says of him: "His life was pure and beautiful. He was a faithful and devoted pastor. His people loved and trusted him."

MR. EDWIN J. POND died of fever very suddenly at Washington, D. C. He held two responsible positions under the Association, first at Tillotson, and later at Straight University. All who knew him esteemed him highly.

MRS. C. B. VENNING, our aged missionary, died in Jamaica, W. I., on the 24th of January. Her name stood on our list of missionaries from 1852 till 1877, when our Jamaica missions were transferred. Her husband was an ardent young Englishman, who went to Jamaica when negro slavery was at its height, to labor on a sugar estate, became interested in the work of this Association on the island, and was accepted as one of its missionaries. Mrs. Venning was an earnest and faithful helpmeet for him.

MISS MABEL M. ATKINS.—Miss Atkins was in our work last year at Grand View, Tenn., and requested a larger field where the strength she felt was given her to use for her Master, might be used in his service Strong, energetic and ambitious, she entered mission work with a devotion which we hoped would give her great reward in souls saved. But God took her, and mourning friends and associates can only bow and murmur, "He doeth all things well." Miss Atkins' home was in South Amherst, Mass., and at the time of her death she was teaching at Saluda, N. C.

MRS. L. E. MARKHAN.—This estimable Christian lady, the wife of Rev. R. F. Markhan, died at her home in Kirwin, Kansas. Mr. Markhan was for many years engaged in the service of this Association in various fields of labor, and was warmly and effectively aided by the faith and zeal of his wife.

MRS. EMILY T. JONES.—This faithful Christian worker closed her useful career November 18th, 1891. She was educated at Beach Institute, and was converted and united with the First Congregational Church of Savannah, in 1876. She was engaged as assistant teacher at Woodville, and for a while at the Slash. Last October one year ago she was married to Rev. James A. Jones, pastor of the Congregational Church of Cypress Slash, Ga. They were doing faithfully a good work in a very needy field, both in church and school, when she was called to enter on a higher and more honorable work for the Master.

MRS. HENRY R. WALNEN, who died at Strieby, N. C., was mourned by the entire community. She was the example and teacher in home-making, as well as all other good. At the time of her death she held the position of principal of Garfield Academy at Strieby, was postmistress, and was working very hard in a series of meetings which were being held, and in which several of her pupils had found the Saviour.

BUREAU OF WOMAN'S WORK.

MISS D. E. EMERSON, SECRETARY.

REPORT OF SECRETARY.

Our American nation recently had occasion to test its power to resist a threatened disease. From the moment it was known it had been brought to the entrance-way of one of our ports, we were, each and all, on the alert for information as to the extent of the danger, and how to meet it. No half and half business would satisfy us. We must know the nature of the disease, its cause, its prevention, its cure. Our personal interests were at stake. We rejoiced in all federal and municipal measures to guard against this enemy. We found that these measures would be robbed of half their effectiveness if there could not be individual co-operation; having purified our own premises we must see to it that our neighbor did not undo what our own intelligence and vigilance had wrought for ourselves.

The work of a missionary society is a masterly coping with disease, and the year just closed is no exception in the field of the American Missionary Association. Here are to be met and overcome the paganism of our Indian Americans, and of our imported Chinese, the woeful illiteracy of a vast population of Anglo-Americans, and most difficult of all the slavery evils set centuries deep in the nature of our Afro-Americans. If any one thinks the danger not imminent, let him cast in his lot with those who are in the hand to hand fight for the moral and spiritual life of these people, and then give his own testimony. A true picture of this field must admit the odious fact—dread disease. It is among our very near neighbors whose condition must affect our homes. Yet we have the remedy. The Great Physician Himself has placed it within our power, as His followers, to proclaim good tidings to these poor, release to these captives, sight to these blind, healing to these bruised.

We, as women, have been doing something to help; whether little or much is known only to the Master, who sees and knows whether the money cast into His treasury is from our surplus or from our want. We have thirty-seven Women's State Missionary organizations, with 2,304 auxiliaries, of which 228 have been added within the year. Through these organizations, and from other woman's and young people's societies not yet connected with the State Unions, we gratefully acknowledge cash contributions for the work of the American Missionary Association within the year ending Sept. 30th, to the amount of $22,184.24. (This does not include Christian Endeavor Societies, which separate and distinct organization has contributed $2,184.24 additional.)

Not all these thirty-seven State Unions have as yet a monetary interest in this field, but we most heartily testify to their assurance of sympathy and their hope soon to manifest it in a more substantial form than words. The number of State Unions represented by contributions through their State Treasurers is twenty-eight; twelve of these have taken pledged work, making themselves responsible to raise a fixed amount for the support of missionaries as their special representatives. In this way, and by our system of "shares," thirty-five missionaries have been sustained.

As illustrating the beneficent influence of the life and teachings of Christian women sent from the North as missionary teachers, we call attention to the signs we are able to note of the quickening of missionary desire in those who have been under instruction in our schools and churches. Surely the poor, the bound, the blind, the bruised are beginning to receive and acknowledge the health-giving power of divine love. In looking at the evidence of this, we should bear in mind their poverty in material things, their limited opportunity for knowledge of others' needs, and the great odds against them in their endeavor to rise above the conditions surrounding them. From the many encouraging records of this year, we make the following selections:

Converted Chinese in our A. M. A. missions are taking the entire responsibility and expense of returning their Christian brethren to China as missionaries of the gospel of Christ.

Christian Indians are supporting native missionaries in out-stations, but they are also lengthening their cords to reach help to other races in like need. At Santee Agency, the Woman's Society gave $54 to home and foreign missions, and the young women and girls contributed $19 additional. At Oahe, the Indians Women's Missionary Society raised and sent out $105 for missions. The Indian Church at Fort Berthold contributed $65, remembering every one of the seven National Societies besides their out-station work. The school boys and girls were given allowances which they were permitted to earn by doing some regular work, and their contributions were thus free-will offerings of their earnings.

Our Mountain White schools, established comparatively recently, are yet beginning to feel the power of missionary influence. The little Christian Endeavor Society in Blowing Rock, N. C., raised $5 for Indian work. Only those who have been in the homes of these people can understand from what deep poverty this was given. At Grand View, Tenn., money contributions were made, but the most encouraging contribution was of personal work of which there were many instances. One girl living eight miles from the school went home last summer, visited different families, and asked that the children be allowed to come to her on Sunday. In this way she started a Sunday-school which has grown to over fifty members. Almost without exception students become missionaries in their own families; one at the close of school went home and had all the family say a Scripture verse at the table at night, and then repeat the Lord's prayer.

Our colored people also are tasting the blessings of giving. In North Carolina, at Wilmington, the Woman's Missionary Society and children contributed $14 for mission purposes. One woman gave up milk that she might save money for missions; another saved paper sacks and sold them back to the grocer, and another pledged herself to give half what she could earn by doing little jobs. At Melville, the Junior Missionary Society after hearing an article read to them from the American Missionary about the Alaskan Indians became eager to help. They set about picking wild strawberries, and in this way earned $1.53. One little girl who could not pick berries said, "I can do without something; I will do without milk for my supper." As bread and milk was all she had for supper, it was a real sacrifice. She added fifty cents more to the fund. The Woman's Missionary Society at Oaks gave $12 to three of the National Societies, this from country colored people beside whose poverty our Northern poor would seem rich. Two little boys given each an orange, a great treat to them, sold them to get money for their missionary box.

The spirit of self denial is often manifested in such ways as the following: At Chapel Hill, a father, mother and four children were struggling along on $10.00 a month earned by the father, and what could be raised on five acres of land by the mother and children. They managed to send their oldest girl to our A. M. A. school and pay her board, as they lived twelve miles away. This summer a neighboring father and mother died leaving five orphan children, and these kind people felt it to be their duty to take all those children home. They are young and can in no way help toward their own support. In the struggle to care for five additional children we note that their own oldest daughter is missing from among our pupils.

In Alabama, the Woman's Missionary Union, of Athens, contributed $8.25, of which $5.00 went to help furnish a room in the theological building at Fisk University. Those who were a little better off than others furnished sweet milk and buttermilk to the needy, gave clothes and personal care to the poor sick people, and many an over-burdened mother added another washing to her list that she might pay the school tuition of some child not her own, or that she might divide her scanty food with the motherless little one. One woman in this missionary society became much interested in Life and Light, and would borrow the teacher's number and when she returned it, repeat story after story of mission work in Japan, China or Africa. She then came with sixty cents for subscription, saying she must have the book if she didn't have anything to eat. Next she got a mite box, and being asked how she could get anything to put in it said that once a month she had been in the habit of spending a few cents for candy, of which she was exceedingly fond. It must have been a few cents, indeed, from her scanty earnings, but she decided it wasn't right right to spend "even a bit" for candy when the heathen were dying without Christ. So the little mite box is slowly filling. In Marion, the Woman's Missionary Society raised $17.00. They met every week and sewed for three hours, yet all were hard-working women, in some cases the bread-winners for the family, and to give so much time was a great sacrifice.

In Georgia, the King's Daughters at the Industrial School at Thomasville raised $17.00 toward the support of their missionary minister, purchased lamps and a Bible for the church, and sent $5.00 to Mrs. Logan, in Micronesia. In Marshallville, the school children out of their poverty contributed $6.00 for the aid of other poor children. They all made some sacrifice or other to do this. They were especially interested in one little orphan boy, John. The first of every month some girl or boy would come to the teacher saying, "Have you enough money to get John a ticket? If you have not, I will help this month." So, through the kindness of the pupils, John was kept in school the whole term.

The Woman's Auxiliary of the University Church at New Orleans, La., contributed to missions during the last year $43.79, and students gave about $20.00 to missions additional, when collections were made in the church.

At Tougaloo, Miss., the benevolent contributions of the Sabbath-school of the University, during the past year, were over $100. Part of this amount was sent to the Indians, part to Africa and part for the planting of Sabbath-schools in the Northwest. Some of the young women who graduated from the Normal School at Tougaloo, had had quite thorough training for the nursing of the sick, in the trained nurse department. From a Northern city a proposition came that they attend a nurse training school in that city for a year, and then good places at large pay were guaranteed them. It was a fine opening, but after carefully considering it they said, "No; we have had much done for us at Tougaloo, our people are needy and we will work as teachers and missionaries among them, giving them some of the benefits that we have received;" and that work they are doing to-day. The spirit of missionary service thus indicated is by no means uncommon among the best of the students in this school.

We have in the Le Moyne School at Memphis, Tennessee, a Y. P. S. C. E., a temperance organization and two circles of King's Daughters. During the past year these organizations and the school itself raised and expended for the poor and unfortunate about them $92.00. Of this the King's Daughters gave $25.00, and the members of all these organizations did much personal benevolent work, taking turns in going evenings to get meals for the sick, tidy up their rooms and sing and read to them.

In Washington, D. C., Mrs. Moore, the pastor's wife, who received her training in Fisk University, has been indefatigable in organizing and directing various branches of benevolent and missionary work. They have contributed about $60.00 for home missions and $75.00 for Africa. Through their temperance society they have circulated hundreds of pages of temperance and Christian literature. Their benevolent society collected and distributed over five hundred articles of good clothing to the poor, to aid in keeping children in school, besides sewing for needy families. A committee of their church assisted in the Alley Missions; their Christian Endeavor Society organized similar societies in the city and neighboring towns; and their Sunday-school teachers have been working in neighboring churches and missions. The second church in Washington, although under the cloud of a church debt, which they are endeavoring to work off, has, with the help of their Woman's Missionary Society and Christian Endeavor Society, contributed $118.00, of which $63.00 was for the Seven Congregational Causes.

In an appeal made by one of our colored teachers in Virginia, he says to his own people: "Less should be said about hard times and more said in praising the Lord for what He has done for us, and planning how we can do more for Him."

Thus the growing spirit of giving, of thoughtful kindness for the unfortunate and of personal sacrifice reveal the power of the remedy when applied; education to open the prison doors of the mind, Christianity to revivify the soul.

Yet it is only where there has been long uninterrupted work that we are able to report such good results. There are many places, especially in the South, where the A. M. A. is doing what it can, but with too limited means to provide what is necessary. At such places there are women accustomed only to the cotton field, not knowing whether Africa, Japan and India are counties of the adjoining States or wards in some city; not knowing how to read or write or sew, with only the crudest, most superstitious ideas of Christianity. Introduce a plan of Woman's Work among such as these and the result, as reported by those who have tried, is that the officers of the society quarrel violently at the meetings, the treasurer refuses to pay out the money, the president refuses to preside, the secretary cannot write. Alas for these! O how we need larger giving that there may be more liberal dispensing of good to this vast field. Besides the need of re-enforcement of funds and missionaries for better work where we have already started, there are vast sections of darkness which we have not so much as approached with gospel light, nor can we approach them with the present rate of contributions.

Ought not we women to arouse ourselves and bring that $22,000 up to $50,000 within this year? If these poor Chinese, Indians and Negroes, brought to a knowledge of the love of God, are moved to such offerings of gratitude out of their deep poverty, surely we cannot allow ourselves to be satisfied with less response. Shall our offering this year be only from our surplus, or shall our Lord see that we have given of that which cost us self-denial? A sacrifice offering from every member of every Woman's Missionary Society in every church, and twelve months hence we can bring the joyful record, $50,000, for the work of the American Missionary Association.

BRIEF HISTORY.

The American Missionary Association was formed in 1846, its distinctive characteristic being freedom from all complicity with slavery and caste.

The object as stated in its constitution is, "To conduct Christian missionary and educational operations, and diffuse a knowledge of the Holy Scriptures in our own and other countries which are destitute of them, or which present open and urgent fields of effort."

It began its work in Foreign Missions in Africa, Siam, Sandwich Islands, West Indies; and its work in our own country, in the Western States and among the Indians.

In 1848, it began work in the South among whites and blacks, although attended with great opposition and danger.

In 1852, it undertook to reach the Chinese in California, the plans ripening in 1870 to successful work.

In 1861, during the civil war, it began the enlargement of work in the South, which has been marked by steady progress and success.

In 1882, it transferred its Foreign Missions and enlarged its Indian work by receiving the Indian Missions of the American Board. In 1891 it established a mission in Alaska.

The work of the American Missionary Association is, therefore, at present among the Chinese in California, the North American Indians, the Eskimos in Alaska and the needy classes of our Southern States.

SERMON.

THE KINGDOM AND THE WORLD.

By Rev. Amory H. Bradford, D.D., Montclair, N. J.

"The Kingdom of Heaven is at hand." Matt. x: 7.

The disciples had just been made Apostles, and sent out to preach the Gospel and extend the ministry of their Master. The text is a part of their commission. The word of Christ was: "Go and preach, saying, The Kingdom of Heaven is at hand." Immediately He added: "Heal the sick, raise the dead, cleanse the lepers and cast out devils." Our Lord impressed His personality on a few men of humble position and average ability, thrilled them with His own consciousness of God and appreciation of man, and thus started that spiritual movement whose goal is the redemption of the whole human nature. He was the beginning of a new society. Elisha Mulford, in "The Republic of God," makes the profound remark: "The kingdom has come, and it may be always coming: it is the realization of righteousness in the life of humanity." (p. 168.) The Christ said: "The Kingdom of God is at hand," that is, it is coming. He said: "It is within you," that is, it has already come. He said: "There shall be new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness," that is, the coming of the kingdom is to continue. No phrase ever more exactly defined the Kingdom of God than "the realization of righteousness in the life of humanity."

At first the kingdom was "simply gospel;" it has grown by that gospel pervading and subduing human hearts. The Church is the body which the Divine life has organized—the fellowship of redeemed souls whose mission is the continuance of the Master's ministry. Our Lord aimed to fulfill rather than to destroy. Accepting and making the best of existing institutions He sought ever to lead toward a more perfect state. He said: "Render unto Cæsar the things which are Cæsar's," and then lifted above that the exhortation which almost obliterates it: "Render unto God the things which are God's." This century lies in the midst of the process by which the kingdom is being realized. More rapidly than most men dream, by the voice of preacher, teacher and missionary, the diffusion of knowledge, the inventions of scientists, the discoveries of explorers, the increased means of inter-communication, the constantly growing power of man over nature, the kingdom is extending its frontiers. On the anniversary of this society, whose ministry is directly related to the improvement of the human condition, we may well turn our attention toward some of the characteristics of this kingdom which touch us in our personal relations, and as citizens of the world.

I. The place of the individual in the Kingdom of God. The teaching of Christ on this subject is a reversal of all previous teaching. Before His time the accepted theory permitted each man to exalt himself, and by every means seek power and honor. His doctrine is: "He that humbleth himself shall be exalted, but he that exalteth himself shall be abased." Nowhere is this teaching so distinctly stated and illustrated as at the Supper on the night of the betrayal. That small sect which maintains that washing one another's feet is a part of the Sacrament, emphasizes a profound truth. The Master did not teach that His followers should remember Him in the symbolism of bread and wine while they ignored the meaning of His act when "He took a towel and girded Himself and washed His disciples' feet." The principle then emphasized with Him was always pre-eminent. "He that would save his life must lose it." From beginning to end He sought nothing for Himself, "had not where to lay His head," had but one object—to serve and save men by bringing them to faith in God. He never despised life, after the manner of the Buddhists, but said: "I am come that ye might have life," and more of it. Buddha held that existence is the worst of evils; Christ's message was, Life is a blessing in itself, but it can be perfected only through service. The doctrine of the Stoics was, deny self for the sake of self; the doctrine of Christ, sacrifice self under the inspiration of love. The world says, assert yourself; the Master, efface yourself. This is "the offense of the cross." Assent to anything about Christ or the way of salvation would be easy if that only were required. The duty of living the Christ-life is what makes men pause. Old theories of ethics and politics differed radically from the Christian theory. They were founded on force. They taught the Divine right of the few to rule, and that the many should submit because they must. They insisted that the great and strong should receive veneration; that the weak and poor had no rights worthy of respect. Before Christ there were no real democracies. The Greek States were called democratic, but were only democratic oligarchies in which the multitude were slaves. Christ teaches that all are brothers. Formerly the great man was Cæsar, who plundered nations and led dethroned kings in his train. Christ says: "How can ye believe if ye receive honor one of another?" Service—without hope of reward or claim to recognition, for the sake of bringing all to higher life and nobler fellowship—is the privilege of the individual in the perfect state. We exalt men, encourage them to seek honors, make them popes, cardinals, bishops, doctors, dignitaries. We measure greatness by ancestry, adulation, position, wealth. In the new society greatness is measured by service for those who have nothing to return, by self-effacement in the interests of humanity. "Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of the least of these, my brethren, ye did it unto me." In the Kingdom of God the individual is a servant, and he wears the highest honors who is most content to do Christ's work in the lowest conditions.

II.—The place of Patriotism in the Kingdom of God. As there is little encouragement in the New Testament for the individual to place a high value upon himself, and none for him to assert himself, so there is little, if any, recognition of what usually passes for patriotism. I know that I am going athwart commonly received opinions; but it will surprise those who have not examined, to see how little attention the Bible gives to love of country. There is much that bears on this subject in the Old Testament, for the Jew was devoted to his fatherland; but the New Testament is pervaded by a purer atmosphere. Patriotism, properly defined, like self-love, is a natural instinct worthy of all honor, and the history of the world has no brighter pages than those which record the heroism and sacrifice of those who have died for a holy principle. This natural instinct proves that there is a place for love of country as for love of self, but the danger of abuse in the one case is quite as great as in the other. In the heart of this great and loyal New England, whose sons have never failed to respond to their country's call, and almost under the shadow of a matchless memorial to those who fell in defense of the Union, I am here to say that patriotism as usually interpreted is hostile to the Kingdom of God. In face of the splendid devotion of the Hollanders, and the deathless courage of the Swiss, remembering in our own land the heroes of '76 and '63, not failing to give due credit to the long line of heroic Englishmen who fought the Spaniards, who opened Asia, Africa and America to civilization, and who have made their island the Queen of the Sea—I affirm that patriotism is usually only a higher form of selfishness; that it is in process of passing away, and that its utter disappearance is one of the conditions which must be realized before the Kingdom of God will fill the earth.

Selfishness asks, What will please ourselves? then, What will enrich our State? It puts its own against the world, the one or the few against the many. Patriotism makes distinctions among the children of God, reverses the utterance of Paul: "There is neither Jew nor Greek, Barbarian nor Scythian." The patriot represents a higher type of manhood than he who lives only for self, but by no means the highest type. Notice that I say patriotism as "usually understood" is supremely selfish, but all patriotism is not selfish. Most contention among individuals results from the assertion of individual rights, and almost all wars have been caused by what may be called patriotic selfishness—the assertion of the rights of one nation to the detriment of another. This, of course, does not refer to those who defend themselves against oppression. Some of the greatest conflicts of history have been waged in the interests of humanity, but most wars have been of conquest and ambition. That soldier who, dying upon the field of Waterloo, said to the surgeon, "Probe a little deeper and you will find the Emperor," was a superb example of the spirit which calls itself patriotism. What had the Emperor done to win that soldier's worship? He had led armies across the Alps into Italy, devastated the fair fields of Lombardy, stood beneath the pyramids, marched his host over the plain of Esdraelon, seen hundreds of thousands of soldiers perish amid the snows of Russia. He lived to exalt Napoleon. How much nobler would it have been to exalt France at the expense of England, Russia or Germany? One morning as an Atlantic liner was nearing Ireland and the nation's flag was unfurled, an English lady, with deep and tender affection, exclaimed: "The dear old Union Jack!" That utterance had something akin to religion in it, and yet it was the voice of unconscious selfishness, for the Union Jack, with its splendid traditions, like the Stars and Stripes, and all other national emblems, represents only a section and not the whole of humanity.

The teachings of our Lord are at enmity with individual self-exaltation. They are equally at enmity with that kind of love of country which justifies assertion of national rights and privileges at the expense of the welfare of other nations. The golden rule and the law of love apply to nations as well as to individuals.

III.—The Kingdom of God is for the World. Our Master's last command was: "Go ye, therefore, and make disciples of all nations." No distinction. He had said, "Begin at Jerusalem," either because the disciples could do their best work among their own people, or because Jewish national feeling was an obstacle to a wider ministry. "God so loved the world." His plan embraced all. The few misrepresented democracy in Greece, ground the faces of the poor in Judea, ravished the nations that they might enrich the Cæsarean throne. The few were Herod and Tiberius. Jesus came with his message to the world, and never once suggested that His kingdom was to perpetuate existing distinctions. It ignores them because its purpose and methods are spiritual. It is called a kingdom, but it is rather a state in which thrones and sceptres give place to service and sacrifice. The King in the new realm heals the sick and feeds the poor. "Let him that is chiefest among you be your servant." Republics—as of America and France; and empires—as of Britain and Germany, in God's providence, have separate existence only that the spiritual dominion may be more swiftly advanced. It comes not with observation, but transforms society; for how can there be ranks, favored classes, caste, governments expanding by conquest and bloodshed, where heed is given to Christ's words—"All ye are brethren," "Whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them." "Men"—not your own family, your own State, your own nation, but men—everybody, anybody. The Kingdom of God, like the New Jerusalem, has on the East three gates, on the West three gates, on the North three gates, on the South three gates. It is for the world. "Whosoever will, let him come."

The teaching of Christ is in line with the providence of God as manifested in history. National lines are going down. In the old days there were a hundred States where now there is one. Small tribes have been absorbed by the larger, and the larger have learned that co-operation is better than destruction. United Germany has taken the place of Prussia, Saxony and Bavaria. United Italy has almost obliterated the kingdoms of Rome, Naples, Piedmont and Sardinia. In the Southern Seas, in that "land of golden sunshine," under the leadership of the octogenarian statesman, Sir Henry Parks, divided colonies are fast growing into the magnificent island empire of Australasia; South Africa, under the equally magnetic lead of her youthful Prime Minister, Cecil Rhodes, is combining many colonies into one State, and getting ready to march in the procession of nations; in London, the capital of the vast dominion of Greater Britain, those who are more than dreamers, with eager interest, are already asking whether the next step in national development will not be imperial federation; while others, still more prophetic, are beginning to discern in the dim and hazy distance something which looks like the federation of English-speaking races. The tendency is towards aggregation in one State of those with common interests. Soon it will be seen that all men have interests in common; then government will exist not for the protection of one against another, but for the advancement of all. Within ten years an English statesman declared that the child was living who would see a United States of Europe as there is a United States of America. The Society of the Red Cross is already recognized by forty nations, which thus unite in declaring that when a man is wounded he is a citizen of the world. A congress of American nations, looking toward international co-operation and arbitration has already been held; and in Europe the Triple Alliance is a recognition by Germany, Austria and Italy that they must help each other in the hour of danger. By and by the Alliance will be extended to include Great Britain, France and Russia, and then disarmament will follow, and a Parliament of Europe, and that will be a long step toward "the Parliament of Man." A spiritual gravitation is drawing the nations toward vital, and, therefore, enduring unity.

Physical development points a thousand fingers in the same direction. Capitals which a few years ago were separated by continental spaces are now within speaking distances. The same books are read in Melbourne and in Boston. Russian literature is almost as common in New York as in St. Petersburgh. The papers of the Old World circulate in the New. American and English preachers exchange pulpits. The greatest work on the American Commonwealth was written by an Englishman; and one of the greatest on the English Constitution by an American. A steamer hardly leaves Sandy Hook before it is signaled from Fastnet. A preacher one Sunday officiates in Liverpool and the next in New York. A voyage around the world can now be made more quickly than one from the United States to Europe fifty years ago. One day there are strikes in London among the dockers, and the next a promise of thousands of pounds in the way of practical sympathy from Australia thrills their hearts with the consciousness that the world is at their back. Nations touch elbows. Africa, with its tangled forests, is hardly more distant to day than Arizona was three decades ago. The news of all lands is read in all lands at the same time. Gladstone speaks in Westminster, and, according to the clock, before he has finished, almost before he has begun, his words are in type in San Francisco. Distances are annihilated. The antipodes are practically off the map. State secrets are no longer possible. Before the animosity of one nation has had time to burn, another nation has an opportunity of disarming enmity. As a whisper instantly sounds around the dome of St. Paul's, so the slightest murmur of discontent in any land reverberates around the globe. Commercial interests are one already. Unrest in Lombard Street agitates Wall Street. The nerves of the commercial body carry sympathy to all the members. Speculations in South America cause distress in Boston and Paris. Bouyancy in Australia and Russia produces prosperity in Canada and Sweden.

Christ sent His disciples to preach the Gospel to all the nations, and nations are swiftly coming into fellowship. All obstructions are crumbling. Science levels its guns upon them; commerce attacks them with the artillery of trade; electricity riddles them with silent but irresistible shocks. When the Ark of God went around Jericho and the trumpets were blown, the walls fell. In this later century the Ark of God is being carried by other priests, other trumpets are sounding, and walls of caste, prejudice and national exclusiveness are going down. We begin to see that what concerns the individual concerns the world. The motto on the new banner is—"The world no longer for the few, but for the many, and each man and all men for the Kingdom of God."

The teachings of our Lord are reinforced by the prophecies of Divine providence. No questions are longer of merely local significance. The whole world is interested in the political and social movements of individual nations. The home policy of Russia caused the sufferings on the Normannia in New York Harbor; legislation in the United States has closed mills in Lancashire and Yorkshire; the Irish policy of England has decided more than one Presidential election in America; oppression in Hungary and Poland crowds the valleys of Pennsylvania with riotous strikers. Neither men nor nations live to themselves. So long as individual or national considerations determine policies conflict will ensue, but when all questions are brought into the light of the Kingdom of God, and so decided that individual and corporate action shall contribute to the advancement of that Kingdom, peace and concord will prevail. Let us bring into the light of these truths a few of the problems which are perplexing the church and nation in our time.

During the last decade two publications of transcendent importance have appeared in London—"The Bitter Cry" and "In Darkest England." What was said of one is true of both; they are "more interesting than fiction, more veracious than history, more vital than theology." They mark the trend of modern thought. Gradually but surely it is being focused on the inquiry, How can the condition of man in this world be improved? The problem of poverty connects itself with the problems of capital and labor, the condition of workingmen, the ownership of the land, the right use of wealth. These inquiries may be considered in relation to one nation alone, but a man is no more a man in London than in Zanzibar. The solidarity of the race is a reality. The other side of the globe has claims on this side; but sending the Gospel to New Hebrides is neither more nor less the Lord's work than the amelioration of Whitechapel or Mulberry Street. The problem of the cause and cure of poverty is at the front, and will stay there. Shall it have large and wise treatment? However it may be considered in Parliament or Congress, Reichstag or Chamber of Deputies, there is only one way in which it ought to be approached, and that is, as a human question. And it must be answered soon, or there will be in many lands such an outbreak as the world has never seen. Russia, Germany, Austria, France, Belgium, Italy, are all in dread suspense. Nihilism, Social Democracy, Anarchy, have millions of adherents on the continent; while other millions in England and America are being fired with the consciousness that they are essential to the common life but have no fair share in the results of labor. Revolution is impending. If selfish councils prevail it will come with carnage and conflagration, pillage and murder; but if those in places of power rise above selfish considerations, cease thinking of labor as a commodity and men as things, and resolutely inquire what belongs to man as a child of God and an heir of the Kingdom, the storms will blow away and a new day dawn. Modern history has shown few sublimer or more prophetic incidents than Cardinal Manning, too old and infirm to walk, driving down into the very midst of the Tower Hamlets, among the dirty, frowsy, turbulent strikers of the London docks, listening to their grievances like a brother, sounding with his sympathy the depths of their misery, and then, like a prophet of God, going to the Shylocks who were grinding the faces of the poor, showing them as only he could the cruelty of their courses, and finally securing those concessions which would otherwise have been wrested by force and blood. Thus must the Gospel of the Kingdom come into all this great problem. Have we in America any right to grow rich by making other countries poor? Does luxury on the banks of the Hudson compensate for starvation in Lancashire? Ought we, in the interests of humanity, to allow Europe to dump her refuse millions on our shores, and thus create conditions as pestilential morally and politically as those which prevail in the Old World? Can wealth buy immunity from service? Millionaire merchants and manufacturers may ask, what will quickest add to our riches, leaving out of the account the poor in the mills and the mines, who have a right not only to live but to live well; but doing so they renounce Christ and become enemies of His Kingdom. Methods in business, and policies in the State, which work against the welfare of one weak and poor man in Europe, Asia, Africa or America may be justified at the bar of Pagan political economy, but never at the judgment seat of Christ. Brotherhood is fundamental. A soul is as sacred in East London as in Belgravia, in Houston street as in Fifth avenue. The Fatherhood of God is the only measure of the manhood of man. Consequently, the question should never be simply, how may this parish or that ward be improved? How may the workingman in America be advanced? but always how may the world's misery be diminished? The poor, the weak and the vicious of the whole world have rightful claims on the wealth, culture and strength of the world. Truth is of no private interpretation, and wealth and faculty are never rightfully individual possessions. The millionaire's millions are his ordination to the service of humanity. The poorest child in the smallest hamlet has some right to every dollar in every treasury. The riches belong to God; poverty results from using them as if they belonged to man. There will be no problem of poverty when the Kingdom of God prevails, because then brotherhood will be realized.

In the list of subjects demanding consideration in the light of the Kingdom is that question now at the front in all lands—The Race Question. There are two ways of meeting it: one on the plane of personal preference, prejudice or greed; the other in its relation to the world and the Kingdom of God. We need pass no judgments on what has been in the past, nor ask how conditions came to be as they are, nor fan fires of sectionalism. It is a human question which faces those who are charged with helping the Lord Christ in bringing all the sons and daughters of the Father to the Father's house. The fact is that there is in all the Republics and Empires a mass of human beings practically alien, yet citizens. In Germany they are Jews; in Russia, both emancipated serfs and Jews; in the United States, Negroes and Indians. Whether any race is inferior or superior I do not know or care. If one is inferior the claim on the sympathy and help of the superior is greater. The vital question is, What is to be our attitude toward all in the image of God? Has not the time come to lift higher the doctrine of brotherhood? Who gave the Jew a genius for trade and a passion for gold? Who has allowed the black man his skin? God is responsible for the Jew and the African, and if a mistake has been made it must be laid at the door of the Almighty. But the question of blame needs no adjustment; the imperative inquiry is, What can be done to annihilate prejudice?

No man can be lifted in the scale of civilization or helped into the Kingdom of God by those who do not recognize his worth. If Jesus Christ died for blacks and Indians, Poles and Jews, they are as sacred as elect nations. I know all that may be said; I know all the prejudices which have existed; I know also that when the Kingdom of God has come there will be "neither Jew nor Greek, circumcision nor uncircumcision, barbarian, Scythian, bond nor free." This question is assuming alarming proportions. In the two greatest nations of the world the supreme political difficulty is one of race. Russia is asking, What shall we do with the Hebrew? and America, What shall we do with the colored man? As the twentieth century is neared, in the heart of the most splendid civilization, the question of the rights and privileges of mankind divides great peoples and causes perplexity and foreboding. The friction between the white man and the black is increasing. From all parts of the country the evidence of oppression on one side, and of discontent on the other, forces itself into prominence. Indeed, we may well wonder if there is not method in this madness; if there is not some devil behind the scenes working them to excite unrest. The colored people are rising in wealth and culture. As they rise they assume the rights and privileges of manhood. The assertion of those rights conflicts with Anglo-Saxon supremacy. If the colored race were not improving there would be no friction; if Negroes were as degraded as their enemies depict them, they would be dragged down by their own vices. Because they are growing into the consciousness of power the conflict deepens. The spasmodic declarations of frenzied and sophomoric orators that the black man can do nothing, that he is inferior, that he was made to be a servant, that he is not fit to rule, are proof enough that the race is raising in manhood, and of the attempt by force and prejudice to keep it down. I wave no bloody shirt; this is no time for a Jeremiah; I do not condemn one section more than another. This is not a sectional question: it is national, and belongs to the South no more than to the North —it is a world question. No amount of optimism is sufficient to make us forget that twenty-five years after the war—a war in which the black man proved his heroism and loyalty, proved that he knew how to obey and how to fight, proved that he appreciated the government under which he lived, although he had had only a slave's place in it—it is gravely and piously argued that the cause of all our trouble is the Negro, and that he ought to be transported to Africa or Oklahoma, while the great and sovereign white race—including criminal Italians, Anarchist hordes from Poland and Hungary, children of cholera and dirt from Roumania and Russia—enter into and enjoy, without compensation, the results of the black man's labor. Let any man challenge and disprove the following facts if he can:

(1) The Negro, with his citizenship recognized by the Constitution, in many States is openly and defiantly cheated out of his vote simply because he is black, while whites more ignorant, more degraded, in every way more unworthy, are carefully protected in their exercise of the franchise. It is not a question of character or ability; but a race question alone. If it were not, the unworthy whites would be treated in the same way as the unworthy blacks.

(2) Those who are devoting themselves to the teaching of the Negroes, sacrificing to uplift and ennoble them, instead of being recognized as worthy of commendation, are socially ostracised, and in many parts of the country, in the last decade of this great century, take their lives in their hands in trying to do the work which loyalty to the Master requires. And the danger comes not simply from the vicious and abandoned, but from those who profess to worship the same God and to follow the same Lord Jesus Christ.

(3) Throughout the length and breadth of the country there is a general discrimination against color—no, it is not simply against color, but against race. The African has little recognition at hotels, while a Chinaman or East Indian, quite as dark, would be cordially welcomed. One of the most eminent of Southern orators, who has the misfortune to be black, declares that there is not a railroad restaurant between Washington and Florida where he can get a meal without going round to the kitchen door and taking the food in his hands. In how many hotels at the North would he receive better treatment? Railways, in some States, make no provision for the best class of blacks except in the vilest smoking car. A refined and delicate woman, with one drop of African blood in her veins, even if she be the finest woman on the train, must go into the filthy smoker, and be surrounded by blackguards and moral lepers, while the lowest of her sex, if she happens to be white, may have the best seat in the best car.

(4) It is a crime in at least one State for white and black children to study in the same institution.

(5) In this crusade against manhood and the image of God, the Church is quite as guilty as the world. This is not universally true, but so conspicuously so as to make one eminent and honored colored man say: "I would be an infidel if it were possible for me to be." The Presbyterian Church is divided along the color line. If it were not for the Negro there would be no division. The same is true of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and, speak it not in Gath, the question is even raised whether that great church—the most intensely evangelistic body on the planet—ought not to seek re-union, and pay as the price the exclusion of the Negro both North and South. Of course "the blacks like to be by themselves"—all like to be by themselves who know that they are not wanted elsewhere. Think of the condition of things which could wring such an appeal as this from the colored people of the United States:

"We pray for patience, which, counting the blessings we enjoy rather than the ills we endure, inspires us longer to bear and forbear. We pray for wisdom to decide between the good and evil side, for race integrity. We pray not only for ourselves; we pray for the civilization, which, after two thousand years of Christian teaching, exults in deeds which would bring to the cheek of barbarism the blush of shame; for the government of the people and by the people which, abasing law and justice, exalts anarchy and revenge; for the voiceless conscience which in the pupit, pew and press sees crime crowded on crime with no word of protest. We appeal to the intelligence and fairness of the American people to extend to colored citizens of the Republic the same rights, privileges and immunities that are extended to foreigners for the asking. We appeal to the heart and brains of all who shape political action for such wise and equitable platforms of principles that national citizenship shall be protected as effectively at home as it is in foreign lands and upon the high seas. We appeal to all men of all phases of political belief to protect an unoffending people from the vindictive clash of partisan warfare, and ask that our lives and liberty be not made the red rag of political strife. We appeal to the civilization of the world for that human sympathy which our unfortunate position warrants; also for that wholesome interest which of itself will tend to check lawlessness, and make effective our rights of citizenship."

Excuse it as we may, palliate it as we are surely inclined to, recognize that there is a reason for much of it, the fact remains that in this country dedicated to liberty one-eighth of the population are under a ban which makes progress difficult, and which would have disgraced the darkest of the Dark Ages, or of Rome under the Empire. We practically say: "All white men are brethren; all white men are entitled to protection; the Saviour died for the whites; the church is for the whites; the Republic is for the whites, and the sooner the black man recognizes it and submits to humiliation, the better it will be for all concerned." Is this an exaggeration? Read the recent book of Bishop Foster, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, on "Union between the Methodist Bodies," or that strange conglomeration of fervid rhetoric, brilliant eloquence and misrepresentation of facts, to be found in the last chapter of Thomas Nelson Page's "Old South." Read the so-called religious papers, which make very much of orthodoxy of doctrine and utterly forget that supreme passage: "He that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen cannot love God whom he hath not seen." Bring into the light of Christ the indiscriminate oppression of a whole race by society, the Church and the State in this country; compare our way with His who took the Gospel to the Syro-Phœnecian woman, who made the Samaritan a text for the greatest of His parables; who first proclaimed His Messiahship to an outcast woman of an outcast nation; who did not hesitate to put next to love for God love for our neighbor. Hear Bishop Foster, who certainly has done too good work to be judged by the last book from his pen, declaring that the Negro should be humiliated. Hear Congressman Breckinridge, whose silver-tongued eloquence is the admiration of both North and South, declaring that Christianity has no relation to race prejudice. Hear Thomas Nelson Page declaring that this country was made for the Anglo-Saxon, and that the Anglo-Saxon is going to run it. Hear him again: "The Negro has made no progress not because he was a slave, but because he does not possess the faculties to raise himself above slavery."*

Remember the Young Men's Christian Association in Atlanta which, in the name of the Lord Jesus, whose servants its members profess to be, refused to allow the Glee Club of Atlanta University to listen to the Glee Club from Yale University, and then read these words from John Ireland, the Roman Catholic Archbishop of Minnesota, and judge which are the most Christian. He says: "I would blot out the color line. . . . Let there be no barrier against mere color; treat Negroes who are intellectually inferior to us as we treat whites, and I shall not complain. The Negro problem is upon us, and there is no other solution to it, peaceful and permanent, than to grant to our colored citizens practical and effective equality with white citizens." Let us not forget that Whittier's words are as true now as when they were written:

"In that sad victim then,
Saviour of pitying men,
I see Thee stand."

* North American Review, April, 1892.

Let us not forget that the Master himself said: "Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of the least of these, ye did it unto me." We do not forget that this problem is seriously complicated; that it is difficult, and almost impossible, to uproot inherited prejudices; that the majority of the Negroes are vulgar, ignorant, disagreeable, and even vicious; that it is hard for the children of the abolitionists to put themselves in the places of the children of the slaveholders; that self preservation often compels the whites to adopt high handed measures; and yet when all these things are granted what an appalling residuum of cruelty and crime remains! How shall the race question be settled? There is only one answer. Not by an appeal to selfishness, not by reviving old prejudices, not by fanning sectional rivalries, not by party ambition; it is neither a Southern nor Northern, a national nor an Anglo Saxon question; it will baffle all solution until it is taken directly to Jesus Christ, and considered in the light of the world and the kingdom of God. The race is one; color is only skin deep. The world is redeemed in Christ. All redeemed beings have equal rights and privileges; they look to the same Father, they are inheritors of the same blessings. In the kingdom of God all distinctions of rank, race, wealth, disappear. How would the Lord Jesus Christ solve this problem? Put it in His hands, and there will be no controversy. May the time never come when the Congregational Churches of the United States, forgetting their history illuminated by unsurpassed sacrifice and unconquerable heroism; forgetting the principles for which Cromwell fought and Hampden died, for which Barrowe and Greenwood were martyred, for which the Pilgrim Fathers crossed the sea, which are at the foundation of our ecclesiastical system—the sanctity of each individual in the sight of God, and the right and privilege of each to come into direct relation with the Almighty—shall make any compromise, the legitimate and necessary deduction from which would be that Barrowe and Greenwood died for a lie, Cromwell fought for a lie, Hampden's eloquence was in behalf of a lie, and that the Prilgrim Fathers sailed to the new world in pursuit of a lie. There is danger of our making this appalling mistake, of our throwing the mantle of our fellowship over those who carefully sit in opposite corners of our ecclesiastical convocations, but who have no place for brotherhood and Christian communion when those convocations are closed. Let others, if they will, seek to enlarge ecclesiastical borders by limiting Christ's unlimited golden rule and law of love; let others profess their faith in an election which is according to color rather than grace; let others, if they will, sacrifice principle to position and power; but let it never be said of the descendents of the Pilgrims that for one moment they swerved from the faith to which their fathers were always devoted—the sovereignty of God, the atonement of Christ, the direct illumination of the Holy Spirit and the universal human brotherhood.

This race question and this caste question must be considered in their world relations. "Whatsoever ye would that men should do to you"—not white men, not black men, not men of any special color, not Jews, but men. "God so loved the world." "Go ye and disciple all nations." Christ's plan will not be realized until all have been redeemed; and you and I can do little toward hastening that consummation until we appreciate that the race is one, and humanity sacred; that to be discourteous, unkind, or to cause needless pain or humiliation to a single human being, is to cause suffering throughout the universe, even to the heart of God.

One other problem claims consideration as a world-question. It is that of the evangelization of un-Christian nations. A thousand forces are destroying barriers between the Pagan and the Christian world. China, Japan, the Congo State and Persia bring wares to our international exhibitions; Mohammedans and Buddhists travel in our countries as we travel in theirs. Buddhism and Brahminism have devotees in all the great cities; Joss-houses rise beneath the shadows of churches in San Francisco, New York and Australia. The Dark Continent has ceased to be a land of mystery, and become a vital and growing factor in civilization. The missionary problem is not the same to-day as when modern missions were started. The ethics of Buddha, the reverence of Confucius, the pure monotheism of the Parsees, and the sublime endurance of the followers of the Prophet, suggest the inquiry whether we have not something to learn from them as well as to teach them. Moreover, there is an individuality, a personality, among nations. Are our missionaries to seek to convert India to Occidental modes of religious thought? Has not something from those splendid skies and magnificent mountains gotten into the humanity that has grown beneath them which can be eliminated only at loss? Is it desirable to convert Persians to Scotch theology, East Indians to English theology, and Africans to the teachings of Jonathan Edwards and Charles Hodge? Was not Jesus himself characteristically Oriental in His life and forms of teaching? National individuality should be respected. Providence has made men to differ for a purpose. Greece has given us art and letters; Rome, law; Judea, religion—may we not believe that India is, in a unique way, to emphasize the supremacy of spirit; China to teach the world reverence; while even from Africa a new breeze blowing upon the fire of our emotional life will kindle to intenser spiritual fervor hearts in danger of being congealed by a loveless culture? Missions will be able to cope with heathenism and infidelity only as they recognize that Christianity is adapted to those who dwell beneath the splendor of the Himalayas as well as to those who live in the shadows of Ben Nevis and Mt. Blanc, and that the type of thought, the phase of theology, the manifestation of life, will be as individual as the phases of faith in our own lands. The attempt to make New England or Scotch theologians of Africans or Coreans will fail, but the task of presenting the Master of Nazareth will be crowned with blessed success. Uniformity is neither possible nor desirable. Diversity means the magnificence of nature; uniformity the desolation of death. Missionaries should not preach theologies or philosophies, but plant the seed of the new

Kingdom of which Christ spoke when He said: "I am come that ye might have life." When the Divine life is implanted it must be left to grow as it will beneath the splendid stars of India and by the rivers of China. Dr. Dale, in his impressive way, has said: "The ear of the East is sensitive to Divine voices that have been speaking through Christ for eighteen centuries, but which our ear has not recognized. And when our missions begin to achieve their great triumphs the saints and theologians of India and China (and Africa) will tell us truths concerning the revelation of God in Christ which we have never learned. To them whole provinces of wonder and glory will be revealed of which the churches of the West know nothing."*

Missionary work is conducted in too narrow lines for the future. We have builded well in the past, but now we should cease digging in the earth, and begin to lift our fabric into the air. Denominationalism—which is always provincial, which never can take large views, which often caricatures the Christ, which is to living religion as wax flowers to a fragrant garden—intrudes its narrowness and assumption until a score of mission fields witness rivalry of denominations, rather than unity against a common enemy. One group goes out saying, come to Christ, but first be immersed; come to the Lord's Table, but if you do not interpret baptism as we do you cannot come. Another says, lay aside your heathenism, but hold no fellowship with any from Europe or America who do not recognize the Historic Episcopate; cease to be the slaves of your prejudices, but swallow all of ours. Oh, my brethren, the pre-eminent questions of our time are three, and yet but one, How may wealth and poverty be filled with the spirit of Christ so that they shall minister to one another? How may the doctrine of human brotherhood be brought from the region of speculation and made regulative in life? How may the islands and continents be filled with the good news of the Father-God and the Savior-Son of God?

The history of the world in the twentieth century will be largely determined by three peoples which are just beginning to influence Christendom: Africa, East India and China are to have a large place in the evolution of the future. A refluent wave of heathenism will sweep Europe and America as surely as the sun will rise, if heathenism itself is not transformed, and it will never be transformed by those who go out as sectarians, preaching a Christ who limits rather than enfranchises, a Christ inferior rather than transcendently superior to other masters. The problem is difficult and slow of solution. The Kingdom of God cometh not with observation. Ignorance has been overruled before, and will be again. The growing oak cannot be put back into the acorn. But while faith beholds the triumph of the Kingdom it is for intelligent faith to insist that large questions shall have large consideration, that those which have world-relations shall be solved in the interests of the world. Not the Christ of Congregationalists or Episcopalians, of

* "Fellowship with Christ," p. 16.

Presbyterians or Roman Catholics, not the Master of New Theology or Old Theology, not a white Christ, a black Christ, or a red Christ, but the Christ of God who loved the world before the cross was raised on Calvary, and whose mercy endureth forever; the Christ of the Sermon on the Mount, the Good Samaritan, the Prodigal Son, the intercessory prayer, the Christ of Galilee and Calvary, alone is great enough to subdue, illuminate, inspire, and command the loyalty of all that on the earth do dwell.

Questions which concern conduct, national policy, and the advancement of the Kingdom of God have world-wide relations, and can be correctly answered only as they are thus considered.

"We live in a Christian world," says Rothe, "that is, in a world in which the good conquers solely by its own power;" and it is for us as the children of the light to make sure that the living Christ finds wide open the door into our hearts, our churches, our politics, our society, and then leave Him to do His own work, as we leave the sun and the rain to bring the summer with flowers, fruits, and the singing of the birds.

This, then, is the lesson which we emphasize—all problems of life and duty should be considered not only in individual relations, but also in relation to the world and the Kingdom of God. Increase of wealth develops selfishness Insidiously a new feudal system is growing among the nations. Commercial and industrial barons are taking the places once occupied by those older, but not more heartless, lords of the manor. Land is getting into the hands of the few. Thirty thousand men own sixty per cent. of all the wealth of the richest nation that the sun ever shone upon. The church even is distrusted. Those who have position and power look down upon the unsuccessful. The man with the gold ring is given the best place in God's house irrespective of his character, and the poor compelled to compete with the rich for a place in which to hear the Gospel. The divine doctrine that one man is of more value than all things is forgotten. Denominations are confusing missions. I am no pessimist. The optimists are to save the world, but optimism cannot close our eyes to the fact that we front problems which can be solved only as those who have caught sight of the teaching of the Master rise to the greatness of His message. And many are realizing their privilege. The glory of Christ's truth as a Gospel for the world, for the whole man and all men, in all conditions, shines with increasing splendor as each page of history is turned. The new kingdom is growing. Silently as the old temple rose, its dominion is extending. Its limits are bounded neither by race lines nor continental frontiers. It is a kingdom of the spirit, in which the individual realizes his privilege in the effacement of himself, and in grateful devotion to the service of God in that humanity for which Christ died; a kingdom before which walls separating the nations are falling, the selfishness of patriotism disappearing, and poverty, vice and sectarian rivalry, yielding to the magnetism of love; a kingdom in which national questions are considered as world-questions; a kingdom in which are neither white nor black, rich nor poor, Greek nor Jew, noble nor peasant, where greatness is measured by service, and reward is the privilege of doing good.

When the new kingdom gets a little stronger it will summon the nations to its judgment seat. To slave-trading Arabs, like Tippoo Tib and Kilonga Longa, it will say: Your barbarities, though hidden in the forests of Africa, cause sympathetic pain in every land, and in the name of the Son of God must cease. In that day the nations which love liberty and law will say to the autocrat of Russia: The bell has tolled the death of tyranny, and the hour has come for the doors of those dark Siberian prisons to swing outward, that the heroes who have suffered in the holy name of humanity may rise to their coronation. Then every time a slave is struck in Equatoria a shudder will be felt in London and New York; every time a Jew is crushed in Austria-Hungary it will be seen that a blow is struck against the Son of God; every time a lover of man is exiled to Siberia it will be realized that an insult is offered to the beautiful figure of Liberty, who is leading the nations upward; every time a man is refused a bed in a hotel, or a meal in a restaurant because of his race, it will be seen that that refusal is not only an expression of individual prejudice, but an obstacle in the way of the world's progress, and by the world be condemned.

Sometime, slowly perhaps, but surely as the sweep of elemental forces, the day will dawn when the cross will go above all symbols of earthly dominion, the nations will be joined in the unity of the spirit and the bond of peace, and the Kingdom of Heaven will fill the earth, because all men will have learned from Him who hung upon the cross that there is no higher privilege or honor than following in the footsteps of Him who taught and illustrated the perfect rule for individuals and the divine law for states, "Ye shall love one another as I have loved you."

The American Missionary Association holds its forty-sixth Annual Meeting in a city full of inspiring memories. In Hartford, in 1639, was written the first Constitution framed in America, thus setting an example, and making prominent characteristics which have influenced all the States of this vast Republic. In this same Hartford the first code of laws was drawn up in 1650, reducing the number of capital offences under English law from 160 to 15. In all the years since then, in loyalty to truth and freedom, in devotion to the Son of God in the humanity for which He died, the Christian people of this goodly city have been in the van. This is the third time that the American Missionary Association has held its Anniversary here, and it brings to mind the man whose name and fame are inseparably interwoven with the history of this city, these churches, and this commonwealth, whose influence has gone into all lands, whose spirit, more than that of any American of the generation, is still leading and inspiring theological thinking, whose work is better appreciated as the years pass away; the man with such fine spiritual discernment, and rare purity of heart, that he could see the Divine in the human, the angel in the sun, and the Lamb in the midst of the throne; the man who, more than any other in our country deserved to be called what Gladstone called Maurice—"The spiritual splendor of the world." In 1871 Horace Bushnell occupied the President's chair of this Association; in 1876, an unfettered spirit, he entered into light. No words which I could speak concerning the duty of bringing the problems which vex our time to Christ and His cross, and compelling their solution in the light of His sacrificial love; no word of hope which any other could speak in this place and surrounded by these memories could thrill with a music half so inspiring as his, when he spoke of the Kingdom as "the everlasting, universal, inviolable brotherhood," and then with prophetic fire added, "And they shall see the end of it just when the blue fades out of the sky, when the mountains drink up the sea, when the heat of the sun freezes in, or better still, when God's predestinating will breaks down—then and not till then. It exists for God's whole future, and as long as that will last. God help us all to have our future in it—every man established by the law of social right, in that universal ownership conferred on each, by the everlasting society of all."*

In his absence or inability to act the Chairman shall appoint a substitute.

COMMITTEE ON FINANCE.—It shall be the duty of the Committee on Finance to examine the accounts of the Treasurer for the month preceding each regular meeting of the Executive Committee, before such meeting, taking the books of account kept by him, and comparing them with his statement of the month's receipts and disbursements and with the vouchers, and to certify to the correctness of such statement when approved by them. They shall also cause to be kept a book, wherein shall be set forth in detail (1) all stocks and bonds owned by the Association, at par, with a note of the original cost of the same to the Association; (2) all real estate (both land and buildings) and other property of the Association, with the full cost of the same; and (3) all property held on special deposit or in trust. This book shall be at all times open to the inspection of the members of the Executive Committee, and the record shall be so added to and amended, from time to time, under the direction of the Finance Committee, as to show at all times a correct statement of the property of the Association, and of any special trusts in its hands. All title deeds to real estate and certificates of stocks and bonds owned by the Association shall be in the charge of this Committee, who shall provide a proper place for their safe keeping. This Committee shall, when occasion requires, direct the sale and transfer of stocks, invest any funds of the Association not required or designed for current expenses, and in general shall have the oversight of the financial concerns of the Association, under the direction of the Executive Committee.

COMMITTEES ON SOUTHERN AND INDIAN AND CHINESE WORK.—It shall be the duty of the Committee on Southern Work and of that on Indian and Chinese Work to report to the Executive Committee, at its regular meeting every month, such suggestions or proposed action as shall seem to them desirable for furthering the efficiency and economy of the Missionary and Educational Work of the Association in their respective departments. They shall also have power to manage the current work of the Association assigned to them, subject to the general supervision and direction of the Executive Committee. Each of these Committees shall appoint its own meetings, keep books of record of its proceedings (the minutes of each Committee being read at the regular meetings of the Executive Committee) and may consult and advise with the Corresponding Secretaries, with the Treasurer of the Association, and with the District Secretaries and Agents in regard to its work.

COMMITTEE ON APPROPRIATIONS.—It shall be the duty of the Committee on Appropriations to consider the work of the Association carefully, and to present to the Executive Committee, at its meeting in May or June, a detailed statement of the amounts required in each department of the Association for the proper conduct of its work, and an estimate of the probable receipts of the Association, together with its recommendations as to the amounts which should be appropriated for the next fiscal year. This Committee shall consist of the Chairman of the Executive Committee, and the Chairmen of the first three Standing Committees.

Each of these Standing Committees shall elect a Chairman and a Secretary from their own number, and shall hold a monthly meeting to consider matters pertaining to their departments.

SPECIAL COMMITTEES may be appointed from time to time, as required. Standing and Special Committees can be formed only of members of the Executive Committee. All Special Committees shall examine and report upon every matter referred to them, with the facts in substance, and their opinions and recommendations, so that the Executive Committtee may be fully enabled to act thereon.

APPEALS.—Every appointee of the Association has the fullest liberty of appeal to the Executive Committee. Such communications shall be referred to the Committee on Southern Work, or to the Committee on Indian and Chinese Work, according to the part of the field from which they come, for examination and a report on the matter involved, at the next meeting of the Executive Committee, when they shall receive careful attention in executive session.

ART. IV.—DUTIES OF CORRESPONDING SECRETARIES.

The Corresponding Secretaries shall conduct the correspondence of the Association and of the Executive Committee, except that which relates immediately to the Treasurer's department, and shall have the charge and direction of the work of the Association under the Executive Committee, and shall present to the various Standing Committees such suggestions and plans as shall seem to them desirable for the efficient working of the Association. They shall also prepare each month, and put into the hands of the Chairman of the Executive Committee, before its regular monthly meeting, a schedule of the business which the Standing and any Special Committees may report to the Executive Committee for its action, and any other business they may desire to bring before the Executive Committee. It shall also be their duty to present to the Standing and Special Committees and to the Executive Committee all matters relating to their several departments, and to sign checks upon the bank accounts of the Association.

All appointments of missionaries, whether they are to act as pastors or general missionaries, presidents and professors of chartered institutions, principals of high and normal schools, district secretaries, field superintendents and other agents, and all matters involving questions of property or affecting the policy of the Association, shall be referred to the Executive Committee for final action.

ART. V.—DUTIES OF THE TREASURER.

It shall be the duty of the Treasurer to receive all money contributed or intrusted to the Association, and to give receipts therefor; to deposit it to the credit of the Association in such bank or institution as may be designated by the Finance Committee; to keep clear and accurate accounts of all sums received and expended by the Association; to make payments and remittances in accordance with, and never in excess of, the appropriations made by the Executive Committee; to endorse checks and drafts for deposit, and sign checks for the purposes of the Association; to report to the Finance and Executive Committees each month the receipts and disbursements for the previous month, and at the end of the fiscal year, for the year, and to keep all books of account required by them; to conduct the correspondence relating immediately to his department and to perform such other acts as are necessary to the faithful execution of the duties of his office.

It shall be his duty to present to the Standing and Special Committees and to the Executive Committee such financial business as needs their action.

ART. VI.—DISTRICT SECRETARIES.

The Executive Committe shall appoint such District Secretaries as they may deem expedient, who shall visit churches and in other ways disseminate information concerning the condition and needs of the Association throughout the districts assigned to them. They shall also collect funds, and perform other duties that may be required. They shall keep in constant conference with the New York office, and every month shall send to it, for the Executive Committee, a report of their work the previous month and of the condition of the interests of the Association in their several districts.

ART. VII.—CHECKS AND PAYMENTS.

All checks upon the bank accounts of the Association shall have space provided for three signitures—viz.; those (1) of the Chairman (or Vice-Chairman) of the Executive Committee, (2) of a Corresponding Secretary, and (3) of the Treasurer. Any two of these signatures shall render a check valid, but no check shall be valid with one signature only. All transfers of stock, conveyances of real estate and other instruments requiring the seal of the Association shall be signed in the same manner.

All payments of the Association shall be made by check payable to order, except petty cash expenditures, which shall be paid by the Treasurer and at convenient times be aggregated, and a check shall be drawn to his order therefor.

No disbursements shall be made without authority of the Executive Committee.

ART. VIII.—CLAIMS FOR DISBURSEMENTS BY OFFICERS AND EMPLOYEES.

All claims for disbursements by any officer or employee shall be accompanied by vouchers, except for telegrams, postage and traveling expenses, and charges below twenty dollars in amount, all of which shall be certified by the claimant to the Treasurer, with the items.

"Uncle Tom's Sons," by Rev. H. H. Proctor.

"What I am doing for my Boys," by Miss Bella W. Hume.

The following resolutions were presented and adopted:

Resolved*, That within the total range of the missionary responsibility of our churches, there is no specific mission which just now appeals with more reasonableness, with more historic cumulation of moral obligation, with more of pathos, with more of hopefulness, or with more of the urgency that comes with its unique opportuneness, than the forward movement in the Christianization of the Indian.

Resolved, That in the rejection of Government aid in the educational work, we recognize a crisis which our churches are bound to meet; that the failure to do this would bring dishonor for ourselves, discouragement to the noble band of missionaries, men and women, who have made the cause heroic by their devotion, and especially would bring dismay upon the Indians themselves, who are just entering upon the new hope for their people.

Resolved, That the facts presented in the reports and addresses at this meeting demand that the churches signalize this Columbian year by such increased gifts as will enable the Association not only to hold the ground, but to carry forward the work on a scale commensurate with the exigencies of the case.

Resolved, That we recommend to the Executive Committee to take advantage of the quickened interest in the churches; keep them in live communication with the work, and so meet the recognized emergency.

The resolutions were unanimously adopted.

After the benediction by Rev. R. F. Markham, the Association took a recess until 8.30 A.M.

THURSDAY MORNING.

At 8.30 A.M. a devotional service was conducted by Rev. Geo. W. Moore, of Nashville, Tenn.

The Association was called to order at 9 A.M. Rev. S. P. Smith, of Jackson, Miss., led in prayer.

The minutes of the preceding day were read and approved.

Voted that in the report of the proceedings of these meetings honorary degrees be omitted.

The following resolutions were reported from the Business Committee and adopted:

Whereas, The law known as the Geary Act is in contravention of sacred promises made by the United States to China, and

Whereas, It distinguishes among immigrants to our country in a way utterly inconsistent with the vital principles of our nation and the inalienable rights of men, and

Whereas, It has been justly characterized by members of the highest tribunal of justice in our Government as "inhuman and brutal," therefore

Resolved, That the American Missionary Association, the organ of the Congregational churches of the United States in one great department of their missionary operations, and representing undoubtedly the sentiment of these churches, respectfully protests against this law, and asks for its repeal.

Resolved, That the officers of this Association are instructed to bring this, its action, to the attention of Congress as promptly and effectively as possible.

A report on the financial methods of the Association was presented by Hon. A. Lyman Williston, and an address given on the subject by W. H. Strong.

Secretary M. E. Strieby and others voiced the appreciation of the meeting at the able and admirable report of this Committee of business men, as well as its thanks to Treasurer Hubbard for his faithful service of the past years.

Rev. E. V. Bigelow, of Cohasset, Mass., was elected second Assistant Recording Secretary. Rev. Asher Anderson, Dea. Samuel Holmes, and Rev. E. P. Goodwin addressed the Association.

Rev. H. A. Hazen introduced the following resolution:

Resolved, That the constitution be amended in Art. III. line 8, by inserting the words "or local" between the words "State" and "Conference"; so as to read "Every State or local Conference or Association of such churches may appoint, etc."

It was approved and will be presented for action at the next Annual Meeting.

The following resolution was presented by W. H. Strong, from the Business Committee:

Resolved, That, in view of the needs of the Association, not only as they pertain to the debt amounting to $45,000, but also to the claims which must be met in the near future, if the work of the Association is to be properly sustained, and these two items calling as they do for contributions that ought to amount to no less than $100,000,

We recommend the appointment of a committee of not less than nine, one-third of whom shall be laymen, to whom, in connection with the executive officers, the matter of devising the best methods and provoking the most efficient efforts for raising the above amount be referred, and

We recommend that this Committee urge it upon the churches, Sunday-schools and Christian Endeavor Societies to begin as soon as is practicable; and suggest the appointment of a special day on which the attention and purpose of our churches shall be directed to this most desirable end.

The report was adopted.

Secretary C. J. Ryder presented a paper on the topic "Freedmen and Freemen."

A report on Mountain Work was presented by Rev. C. P. Mills, who followed it by an address. Rev. James Brand then read an address which pointed out the need of a more sincere devotion to humanity on the part of Christians.

Executive Committee.

For Three Years.—C. T. CHRISTENSEN, CHARLES A. HULL, ADDISON P. FOSTER, ALBERT J. LYMAN, NEHEMIAH BOYNTON.
For Two Years.—WILLIAM H. STRONG.

The Executive Committee then submitted a report in regard to the legacy of Mr. Stickney.

After giving careful consideration to this report and after remarks by Secretary Strieby, Secretary Ryder and others, the following preamble and resolutions were unanimously adopted:

The Executive Committee of this Association having given most careful consideration to the question of accepting the legacy of Mr. J. H. Stickney of $50,000 on condition that the word "American" in its name be exchanged for that of "Congregational," and having repeatedly consulted eminent legal counsel, who decided after close inquiry into all the facts that in order to preserve unimpaired the rights of the Association to all the property and the integrity of the trusts which have been specifically committed to its administration by deeds and wills, it would be unsafe to accept the legacy on the condition imposed; it is therefore

Resolved*, (1) That the legacy of Mr. Stickney be declined, but with an expression of warm appreciation of Mr. Stickney's generous offer, and with the distinct declaration that the legacy is not declined from any want of affection for the Congregational name, nor of zeal in promoting the growth and influence of the Congregational churches.

Resolved*, (2) That while under the necessity of declining the offer of Mr. Stickney, the Association feels a sense of relief in the fact that if declined it will go to the Congregational Church Building Society, and may thus fully inure to the benefit of the Congregational churches, and through that sister society aid the Association in carrying forward its church work.

The President was authorized to nominate the committee of nine, and they were elected as follows; C. H. Johnson, Montclair, N. J.; S. B. Capen, Boston, Mass.; A. L. Williston, Northampton, Mass.; Rodney Dennis, Hartford, Ct.; Wm. E. Hale, Chicago, Ill.; Rev. Geo. R. Leavitt, Cleveland, O.; Rev. Dan F. Bradley, Grand Rapids, Mich.; Wm. H. Wanamaker, Philadelphia, Pa.; C. D. Wood, Brooklyn, N. Y.

The President was empowered to fill any vacancies which may occur in this committee.

A memorial from Miss Anna L. Dawes, in memory of Mr. Thornton, was then submitted by Secretary Ryder and accepted.

Voted to receive the provisional invitation of the Congregational churches at Newburyport, Mass., to hold there the next Annual Meeting of the Association. The Executive Committee was instructed to make the provisional invitation certain, or to provide some other place for meeting.

Voted to charge the Executive Committee with the appointment of the Business Committee for the ensuing year.

Voted that the Executive Committee inaugurate some means of making a more adequate division of time upon the programme of next year. The Business Committee submitted the following recommendation, which was adopted.

This Association desires again to put on record, as we have often done in years past, an expression of thanks to the American Bible Society for its grants made during the past year of the Bibles for use in the schools and churches of this Association. These often repeated grants have furnished a large portion of the Bibles used in our schools and churches, and thus are supplying the means for the uplift and salvation of those for whom we labor, the seed for the planting of righteousness in our land.

Minutes were then read and approved, and the Recording Secretary was authorized to complete them.

WOMAN'S MEETING.

During the business meeting of the Association held in the chapel, the Woman's Bureau held a large and interesting meeting in the main audience-room. (A full account of this meeting will be found in the January number of the AMERICAN MISSIONARY).

THURSDAY EVENING.

The evening session was opened by song. The scriptures were read and prayer offered by Rev. G. H. Gutterson.

The President reported that the subscriptions for Rev. J. F. Cross's Indian chapel had reached nearly the required four hundred dollars.

The first address of the evening was by Rev. Pres. Geo. A. Gates, of Iowa College, upon "The Relation between the American Missionary Association and the Kingdom of God."

Prof. Graham Taylor, of Chicago Theological Seminary, spoke upon "The American Missionary Association work as an Evidence of Christianity and a prophecy of Christian Victory."

Mrs. Moore sang two sacred Negro melodies. Rev. F. E. Clark addressed the Association upon the "Relation of Congregational Young People and their Christian Endeavor Societies to the American Missionary Association."

The Committee appointed to draft resolutions concerning the death of Gen. S. C. Armstrong, reported the following minutes:

The American Missionary Association records with profound sorrow the death of Gen. S. C. Armstrong, which occurred at Hampton, the 11th day of May last. With gratitude to God we recognize the high devotion to duty which he felt when at the call of his country in 1861, he left his college course for that higher calling. During all these thirty-two years as a soldier in the field, as a superintendent in the service of the Freedmen's Bureau and, after the close of the war, in his most untiring efforts for the uplifting and education of the Negro and Indian races of our land, his work has been unparalleled.

While his work was with and for Hampton Institute, which under God could only have attained its present proportions through his heroic self-sacrifice, his keen foresight and his untiring energy, he has left an impress that will long live among the educational and philanthropic institutions of our country, and upon Christian workers in our own and other lands.

Having "fought a good fight" and "finished his course," working to the last, he calmly, joyfully surrendered only at the call of his Great Captain, and his body now rests by his own expressed desire, "with the boys at Hampton."

But his spirit will be ever marching on, not only with the thousands of students who have known him there, but also with the multitude of Christian philanthropic workers in our land, to whom his life will continue to be an inspiration and a blessing, while his memory will be enshrined in the hearts of all who have come under his influence.

Rev. J. E. Roy read the following minute, embodying the thanks of the Association to the people of Elgin for their hospitality.

This Elgin meeting of the American Missionary Association may be designated as its World's Fair Annual Meeting. In that grand International Exchange two of our oldest institutions, the Hampton and the Atlanta (now graduated), have their exhibits. And the Congregational pavilion there has a pictorial and statistical setting forth of the work of the A. M. A. And then the Congress on Africa, coming into line with the Berlin Congress and the Brussels Conference of the Seventeen Powers, brought up that land and her people to a plane of consideration never before attained, and also so brought along our work for the Afro-Americans as to have elicited from our denominational papers the characterization that the Congress "seemed like a prolonged session of the annual meeting of the American Missionary Association."

And this World's Fair Anniversary we delight to associate with this First church of Elgin, which, as we have been told, the very year the Association was founded (1846), was putting itself, after months of deliberation, upon record as in accord with the principles on which this missionary organization took its rise. And when, at Sumter, the spirit of secession had fired the Northern heart, this church, through its former sturdy home missionary founder, Rev. N. C. Clark, hurled back that tocsin of war. I well remember that on the Lord's Day after that firing on Sumter, having preached at Dundee in the morning, as I was coming into this town to hear Father Clark at night upon the national issue, I heard the rattle of drum and fife calling the people to arms. We are also glad to note that in this town, too, to a Puritan anti-slavery early settler was born a son who in this church, born again, was then trained in business and in the law to become treasurer of this Association, H. W. Hubbard, Esq., who, in the handling of these millions of dollars, for seventeen years, has never lost a dollar, and whose standing in the dignified diaconate of the Tabernacle Church in New York, made it so fitting that he should serve at the table of our Lord, spread at his home church for our convocation.

The Elgin meeting has been hallowed by the report of an unusual blessing of God in revivals in all the departments of our work, and also by the sharp discipline of sorrow attendant upon the fresh announcement of the cruel martyrdom of our missionary Thornton among the Eskimos.

And so, under the impression of these sacred reminiscences and also of the generous Christian hospitality with which we have been received by the friends in these homes, we wish to express our sincerest gratitude to them all in these acts of kindness shown by the pastor and officers of the First church, and of the daughter church, to the choir in this place, to the Boys' Brigade, which has been at our service with cheerful feet, and to the press both of this city and of Chicago.

In saying this our farewell, we pray that the richest of spiritual blessings may abide upon these beloved churches of our Lord Jesus Christ, to whom be praise forevermore.

After singing "Praise God from whom all Blessings Flow," the benediction was pronounced by the Pastor, Rev. J. H. Selden, and the forty-seventh annual meeting of the A. M. A. was adjourned.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

BY REV. SIMEON GILBERT, Chairman.

The Committee appointed to consider the work done by this Association in the department of its Chinese missions, beg leave to report that they have examined the matter with some care and with a peculiar interest. We are profoundly impressed with the unique value of this particular work, which, in the providence of God, it has fallen to this Association to undertake. The following are some of the reasons which, as it seems to us, not only justify it but call for the utmost vigor and courage in pressing forward in it:

1. It is unmistakably in line with the clear providence of God that this society, acting for the Congregational churches, has taken in hand this work. Here they are, these children of heathendom, a hundred thousand of them, right in our midst. Their numbers may or may not increase in the near future; and no matter what the motives which prompted their coming, here they are. We may be sure it is of God's purpose, merciful and far-reaching, that they have been led hither. If this fact gives solemnity to our responsibility, it may well add the invincibility of divine courage to our effort. It is as though we saw the Master himself taking these children by the hand and saying to us: "Here they are; I commit them to you, pass them not by on the other side; inasmuch as ye do it unto them, ye do it unto Me; teach them my gospel, gather them in, no souls are more precious in my sight than they, and I have need of them."

2. Results already obtained are, to a marked degree, hopeful. There are of course peculiar difficulties. No language could be more utterly foreign to our own than is the Chinese. There is on their part, to begin with, the densest ignorance as to all spiritual ideas. In addition to the prejudices which they bring with them are the added prejudices caused by the indignities and outrages thrust upon them by not only the hoodlum elements of the sandlots, but by the not less disgraceful hoodlum exhibit in the National Congress. And still, as the facts abundantly show, the heart of the Chinaman is as open as any other man's to the touch of human love, as also of the divine love. It is of course a truism to affirm that the Chinaman is a man; but it is a truth with some infinitely interesting corollaries, and that have a great deal to do with what we ought to do in this matter.

3. Another reason why this Chinese mission work in our country should be made as conspicuous as possible is the effect this will have upon the other peoples of our own country. This is a point on which, as your Committee believe, it would hardly be possible to put too strong emphasis. More than can be expressed there is need, just now, of there being lifted up in sight of all the people a flaming testimony to the truth that, whether for nations or individuals, nothing is nobler than for the strong and the favored to befriend the weak, and that if "meanness" is not, as Mr. Beecher used to declare it to be, the "unpardonable sin," it is a quality that ought not to be suffered to characterize the American people or their national Government in their treatment of the Chinese. It is such a testimony as this which the churches of the country at this time have it in their power to put forth, and to make unspeakably impressive. Scarcely any piece of the true home-mission effort could be turned to more useful and timely account than just this would be.

4. Still another reason why this peculiar mission work should be suitably pushed on, is its bearing, more vital, closer and greater than any of us fully appreciate, on the ultimate Christianization of China itself. And let no one imagine this to be a preposterous proposition. The day is come when all narrowness of mind is to be accounted disgraceful. This six months' continuous and multiplex series of World's Congresses, with their more than two hundred distinct conferences of men from all parts of the world, and pertaining to all the great interests affecting the welfare and advancement of the world, everywhere, has not, in the good providence of God, come to pass for nothing. Henceforth, Christian men and women, of every name, will have to cherish the wider outlook, and gird their souls with the power that comes of the larger ideas and the vivid sense of the larger relationships, responsibilities, duties, privileges, that now take hold on every individual in this infinitely gracious plan of God.

And what organized fellowship of good men and women in all the world is there, which might more reasonably be expected to respond, with intensive and augmenting energy, to this nobler conception of duty, than this historic American Missionary Association? Or, where can they better demonstrate it, than in connection with this mission among the Chinese in America with a view also to the millions of Chinese in their own land?

The iniquitous and perfidious Geary Chinese Exclusion law still stands a bad blot on our national honor. The House of Representatives a few days ago voted to relieve somewhat the special viciousness of the law by extending for six months the time allowed for the Chinamen now in the country to get their identification-photographs and secure their registration. The amendments have not yet been acted upon by the Senate. Meanwhile the ugly and dishonorable statute remains as it was, only the present administration appears to have sense enough to be ashamed to try to enforce it, under the plea that Congress has made no appropriation for the expenses of hunting up, arresting and carting off back to China this particular class of industrious people who have been expressly excluded from the right to vote. Every means ought still to be used not only to enlighten public opinion on this matter, but to give due publicity to the public sentiment and to bring the full weight of it to bear on the pending action of the national Congress.

Nothing but an ocean separates the oldest and the most populous empire of the globe from the greatest of republics. And what is an ocean but the freest possible highway for the world's travel and commerce? A steamer has just crossed the Atlantic in a few minutes over five days and thirteen hours. The day is not distant when swift ships will make of the West and the East the closest of neighbors. The four hundred millions of China are a little more than one-fourth of the human family. As yet, among these four hundred millions this terrible fact remains, that there is no word known to them which suggests the thought of any "Creator" of the world, much less of a Saviour.

Dr. Behrends, returning from a recent visit to our Pacific Coast, says: "It will be a magnificent Christian empire which within the next century will send its healing agencies across the sea into the continent of Asia, a second growth from seed which the Mayflower brought across the Atlantic." When the Christian people of our own country begin in good earnest to enact the Christian part toward the people of that mighty empire, it will prove to be indeed "an age on ages telling."

It is said of Dr. Parker, the first medical missionary to China, 1834, who was instrumental in the formation of the Edinburgh Medical Missionary Society, that he "opened China at the point of the lancet." A little more than thirty years ago the Anglo-French forces opened China at the point of the bayonet and the cannon. Since the existing treaties, made in 1860, China has evinced too much respect for treaty obligations to establish any infamous Geary-like Exclusion Act against the people from other countries. The imperial gateway which was opened for the admission of foreigners into China, furnished also a way for its own people to go out whithersoever they would. Willing or unwilling, China's former isolation is forever ended. The Flowery Kingdom is henceforth "one of us"—a vastly important member of the family of nations. That fact means a great deal. It brings to our own nation a tremendous responsibility, for those who will receive it a most inspiring opportunity.

That the four hundred millions of China should to this day be still under the domination of systems of religion that are essentially atheistic, with cruel, hopeless and degrading superstitions and a debased priesthood, is an appalling fact. If the Christian gospel is true, there must come a change.

No Christian nation is practically so near to China as the United States. No other nation possesses the advantages for the actual redemption of China which we might have. Easily the United States might have and hold the moral leadership of all that East which lies just beyond the West. By what means can Christian America best do its part toward the Christianization of China?

China is never going to be Christianized by any single agency, or by any one line of influences. But, first of all, we have these hundred thousand Chinese right in our midst. They are close at hand. If American Christianity has any genuineness and power it ought to show it here. Here these keen observers can see what it does for those who have it. Here they are in one way or another easily and naturally accessible. What they could not learn in any commentary they can find out from what they see. To Christianize the Chinese in America is in the straight road to the Christianization of China itself. That distinctive national trait which makes a Chinaman cling so to his native land, the deepest strain of melody in his heart being still, "Home, sweet home," is, once he has become a Christian, greatly in his favor, making him instinctively eager that his kindred at home should also come into the same blessed experience and redeeming fellowship with Jesus Christ. When they go back to their homes, though subject to the severest temptations, they often evince the very spirit of the apostles and martyrs, and the avidity with which their kindred listen to their stories of "the beautiful Lord," makes them ready to hear of the new religion found there.

The conversion of Chinamen in America is no longer, if it ever was, matter for experiment. Being men, the certainty was from the first absolute that the gospel of Christ would perfectly meet their case. More than three thousand of them have been converted and received into the various evangelical churches in this country. And as Dr. Pond, Secretary of the Congregational Chinese Mission, who has done so grand a work among the Chinese of San Francisco, has said: "During the last eighteen years one thousand Chinamen have been admitted to our church. I affirm that by every practical test of character, by their steadfastness, zeal, honesty, liberality, growing knowledge of the truth and in increasing efficiency in teaching the truth to others, they give, on an average, tokens of true conversion as clear as can be found in the Christians of any land." Others who in the same spirit have labored among them bear the same testimony to the new development of character. A couple of Chinamen, members of the Methodist Mission, forming a business partnership as merchants, agreed to these three rules: "1.—We will not buy or sell anything that is injurious to our fellow-men. 2.—We will do no business on Sunday. 3.—Of all that we make, one-tenth shall be given to the Lord's work." It must be worth while to gain the conversion of such men. Christian Chinamen of this stamp can be depended on as fellow-workers in widening the scope of redeeming influences among their own people.

We believe there is no specific mission work, any where in the world, that has surer promise of results, or of more far-reaching consequences, than just this mission work among the thousands of Chinamen in our own country; provided, this work be pressed vigorously, with resolute enthusiasm on every side. For, we can never think of these few thousands of Chinamen in the United States without seeing beyond them those millions and millions of related Chinamen over there in their own land.

REPORT ON INDIAN WORK.

By Rev. H. A. Bridgman, Chairman.

Whatever may be said of other portions of this year's report of the Executive Committee, that part of it at least which treats of the work of the society among and in behalf of the Indians possesses a Pentecostal flavor. The record of spiritual harvests indeed suggests certain chapters in the Acts of the Apostles. A breath of God's life-giving Spirit seems to have moved with mighty force over those Dakota plains so frequently swept by death-dealing blizzards. If our Congregational churches throughout the land could begin to parallel the additions to membership which this last year has brought to the twelve churches under the care of the Association, we should have forged forward as a denomination by the hundred thousands instead of adding a very few ten thousands. The increase in the Indian churches from an aggregate membership of 461 to 763 is certainly exceptional, not only in the history of the extension of Christianity among the red men, but also as respects the usual pace of God's kingdom elsewhere. The school enrollment has advanced from 511 to 858. Equally gratifying is it that this multiplication of the number of professing Christians has been matched by the things which should accompany salvation, such as the growth of household piety, a growing desire on the part of parents to have their children baptized, prayer and effort in behalf of the unconverted, a deepening sense of the length and breadth of the Christian ideal of character, a greater care in the admission of persons to church membership with the end in view of making the public profession of Christ a serious and important step, and last, but by no means least worthy of note, the spirit of benevolence which animates our dark-skinned brethren and which leads them out of their poverty to contribute generously to the support of the institutions of the gospel in their own communities, and to the spreading abroad of the glad tidings. Verily a comparison in this respect also with the white churches of the country would certainly prove suggestive and possibly mortifying.

Your committee notes with interest the success of Mr. Fred B. Riggs, in his stereopticon lectures, whereby he has pictured to numerous Indian audiences the progress of civilization and set forth as well typical scenes in the life of Christ. While pastors in the older sections of the country are to a noticeable extent availing themselves of this approach to the heart by way of the eye, we are glad that this enthusiastic and efficient son of worthy missionary parents and grandparents, is finding the same agency useful in conveying to untutored minds an idea of the successive stages in the evolution of a home, and is making real and near the earthly life of the Saviour which seems to so many shadowy and remote. If the Association has regard for the quality as well as the quantity of its converts, it could do no better service in the direction of making the Christians under its care intelligent and ambitious of a cleaner, broader life, than to keep Mr. Riggs constantly in the field with his stereopticon lectures. Their evangelizing value, too, is not to be overlooked, as the crowds which have followed him about from village to village testify. Your committee regrets that his duties at the Santee School are so confining as to leave comparatively little time for this outside work.

Is it not a striking fact that this remarkable spiritual increase in our Indian missions has occurred in the very year when the Association, constrained by the conviction that it is no longer right or wise to receive governmental aid for its schools, has relinquished the help which it has received from this source since 1887? Is not this great awakening of religious interest just at this time a signal indication of Providence that the work is to go on with greater energy in proportion as the rewards of labor are more apparent and encouraging? It was no slight sacrifice to yield the appropriation from the national treasury which in these seven years has averaged $23,000 yearly, or about one-third of the entire amount expended annually by the Association for the maintenance of its schools and churches among the Indians. We all remember with what general consent the action at Hartford last October surrendering the government grant was taken, and how quickly and easily Dr. Meredith's resolution prevailed, pledging the representatives of the Congregational churches there assembled to do all in their power to increase their contributions at least twelve and one-half per cent. to make good the amount sacrificed.

But, alas, promise is not always performance, and though no doubt some have fulfilled their pledges to the letter, not over ten per cent. of the amount relinquished has been received. The work already has been restricted and must suffer another year to the extent of a curtailment of at least one-third unless other resources are available. It is cheering to report that within the last few months, owing to stirring appeals through the press and on the platform, in which the urgency of the situation in one or two concrete cases was set forth, there have come some substantial and exceedingly timely gifts, which have saved certain important enterprises and institutions, the continuance of which seemed absolutely essential to the cause which we all have at heart. But it is certain that unless during the coming year our Congregational people go deeper into their pockets, it will be impossible to enlarge and expand the work along many lines that now invite and are sure to repay effort.

Now this striking manifestation of divine favor is, in the judgment of your committee, a peculiar and unmistakable call to prosecute Christian effort with greater zeal, even though the financial burden of it is more weighty.

The United States government, it is true, is expending over two million dollars annually, and in the main, wisely, upon the education of the Indians, but upon lines entirely distinct from the educational work of our Association. There will always be a call for such schools as Santee, for the government is necessarily debarred from giving any decidedly religious coloring to the instruction it imparts. If the Christian school and the Christian academy are needed in those sections of the country which have attained and represent the best civilization of the century, the argument is overwhelmingly convincing for their maintenance close to our Indian population, especially during this period of transition from savagery to citizenship. The Congregational churches already have large investments of money and labor and consecrated lives in missions to the red men. Shall these investments be denied proper oversight and safeguarding just at the time when they are beginning to yield their most royal returns?

REPORT ON CHURCH WORK IN THE SOUTH.

By Pres. Franklin W. Fisk, Chairman.

Your committee to whom was assigned that part of the "General Survey" relating to church work in the South, are deeply impressed with the marked progress that has been made against many obstacles during the last year. Twenty churches—an unusual number for one year—have been organized, revivals more numerous and powerful than for several years previous have prevailed, and the activities of the churches have been greatly quickened and enlarged.

But the year has also been one of great trial. A winter of unusual severity brought distress to the humble homes of the members of these feeble churches. Many of them fled in quest of warmer climes and gentler treatment, leaving their little churches smaller and poorer than ever. The financial distress during the year has also sorely crippled the means of these weak churches for the support of the gospel, as well as the ability of our Association to aid them. And yet they have heroically struggled on, and have done faithful and successful service for the Master.

It might seem well-nigh invidious to select from the large number of these churches reported to us by the secretaries in their "Notes of the Churches" any for special mention, when all have done so well, and yet we should record with gratitude to God his gracious and abundant blessing in our churches at New Orleans, Talladega, Charleston, Nashville, Tougaloo, Mobile, Macon, McLeansville, N. C., New Iberia, La., and Paris, Texas.

From the report of the Executive Committee, it appears that the whole number of churches in the South under the care of our Association is 154, with a membership of 8,988, of which 1,282, or about one-seventh, have been added during the year—more than two-thirds of the number on confession of their faith. Connected with these churches, and in the mission Sunday-schools, are more than 15,000 scholars. This is a noble record—the result of no little Christian fidelity, prayer, sacrifice and toil.

Our church work among the mountaineers of the South is especially encouraging. As they are coming to understand better our faith and polity, they are flocking in larger number to our churches, and the present time seems auspicious for pushing forward this work.

Among these little churches in the mountains, a colony of Waldenses has planted itself and its members have sought from our Association aid for the support of their pastor. Let them have it, and let us welcome with open hearts and hands the children of those brave sires who imperiled their earthly all for a pure faith and religious liberty.

Your committee would especially commend the principle on which our church work in the South is conducted. We believe in our faith and polity. We believe that they are adapted as well to this whole race of ours, as to the descendants of the Pilgrim Fathers. We believe that they are most nearly in accord with the teachings of Christ, and with religious and civil liberty. And thus believing we are ready to carry them to our fellow men in whatever latitude or longitude they may be found. We do not believe in a system of doctrine and polity that cannot be taught to the lowly and ignorant, and will not prove to them a blessing as well as to the intelligent and refined. Hence we have gone to these lowly people of the South whose spiritual, intellectual and political needs are the same as ours, with our ancestral faith and polity, and proffered them freely with loving hearts and helpful hands. And the beneficent results bear witness to the wisdom of this course.

Your committee also desire to commend the method in which this church work in the South has been carried forward. Our churches have largely grown out of our schools. We do not believe in a religion that is the child of ignorance. Hence our Christian schools have preceded our churches, and have largely contributed to their support and usefulness. Indeed, we believe that most of these churches could not live were it not for our schools of various grades in the South, out of which they have grown, and upon which they mainly depend for their pastors.

Your committee are also deeply impressed with the hopefulness of this work. These little churches scattered throughout the South are centers of divine power, from which will go forth in ever increasing strength and enlargement, influences that will purify and bless, until they shall meet and blend together, and these down-trodden and cruelly wronged millions will come forth from their ignorance and despotism into the light and the liberty wherewith Christ maketh free. And then constrained by this same transforming power of Christ's love which wrought so mightily upon them, many will go forth to tell the glad story to the benighted myriads of their own people in the dark continent, and "Ethiopia shall stretch forth her hands unto God.

REPORT ON EDUCATIONAL WORK.

By Rev. Frank T. Bayley, Chairman.

During all its history, the A. M. A., has been notably an educational institution. Its great work in the South, beginning during the Civil War, was at the first almost exclusively and of necessity school-work. Upon that historic peninsula near to which Americus Vespucius dropped anchor a month before Columbus touched American shores; and Capt. John Smith, storm-driven, took refuge in 1607, fitly naming his harbor "Point Comfort;" where a few years later a Dutch ship landed the first cargo of slaves from Africa; where Washington and Lafayette closed the struggle of the Revolution; where the Monitor met the Merrimac; and where so many of the battles of the civil war were fought; there the American Missionary Association established its first school, thus not unfitly capping this monumental history.

Its early schools were, necessarily, of primary grade. They gathered the colored people of all ages and taught them the elements of learning. These primary schools marked the first era in the educational work of the Association.

Later, it became possible to establish schools of a higher grade, of a normal character. These became sources of supply, affording teachers for the colored schools that were gradually opened both by the Southern states and through Northern philanthropy. Out of the normal schools grew the colleges, providing a still broader culture. And to-day we read the noble record of twenty-nine normal schools and six colleges.

These schools of higher grade are the natural culmination, the worthy crowning of this educational history. They are centers of redemptive power. Thousands of their students have been teachers in the little schoolhouses which are destined to do for the South something of what the little red schoolhouse has done for New England. From these centers are going out, also, the influences that are to change the character of the colored ministry, to supply moral and religious leaders worthy of the name. Industrial education likewise finds its place in the schools of the Association.

In a word, this Association is committed to a comprehensive and thorough scheme of education, which has developed under its hand as rapidly as time would suffer. It is doing a splendid work for the colored people of the South; educating, training and guiding towards their highest possibilities the faculties of the whole man, body, mind and spirit; undertaking this work, first for the individual, and through the individual for the race. Truly, a colossal undertaking, having much to do with the welfare of the race and of our country, and clearly in the line of the glorious purposes of God. As to the work of the past year, it is enough to say that it appears to have been another step in this noble progression, fitly following upon the splendid history of the past.

REPORT ON MOUNTAIN WORK.

By Rev. Charles P. Mills, Chairman.

That part of the Executive Committee's report which refers to the work for the Mountain Whites awakens special rejoicing and congratulation. It conveys the enthusiasm of the field workers whose reports to the central office accord with the stir and movement of the stanza of triumph in the "Ninety and Nine:".

"But all thro' the mountains, thunder-riven,
And up from the rocky steep,
There rose a cry to the gate of heaven,
'Rejoice! I have found my sheep!'
And the angels echoed around the throne,
'Rejoice, for the Lord brings back his own!'"

In the review of this gratifying report your committee are moved to specialize three features of signal moment.

First, the growth of Congregationalism in the mountains of the South, is marked and significant. Consider the statement that "fourteen new churches have been added to the list of our Congregational churches in this mountain region during the year, making the number forty-four. The church membership has reached a total of over one thousand. There were added during the year two hundred members, one hundred and forty of them on confession of their faith. The number of churches added to the list is by far the largest it has ever been our privilege to report in a single year among these Highlanders." The trend among the Highlanders themselves is towards Congregational polity and principle; and it is only the wise cautiousness of the Association that a larger number of churches of our order has not been received or established. Yet how hopeful it is for the future, that Congregationalism has won the favor of these people who, accustomed to the free air of the mountains, are eager also for the atmosphere of a free church.

Not only has the number of these churches remarkably increased during the past year, but the ratio of additions to them has been correspondingly large; it is greater than is reported by Maine or Connecticut, greater than in some of the most favored counties of Massachusetts.

The fixed stars, it has been discovered, have a slow motion of their own, called their proper motion. Congregationalism is no longer a fixed star that shines over New England alone, or over New England and the West; but its star-drift is noticeably towards the South, and the work of this American Missionary Association is discovering to our sight and consciousness that Congregationalism, without the sacrifice of its unity, is yet becoming a multiple star that sheds the guiding light of Christian liberty from the sky that bends over the Old East and the New West, the Old North and the New South. This is proper motion. Fix historical and prophetical Congregationalism in the hospitable minds of the mountains, filter it down into the human vessels in the valleys, and that part of the South which through neglect has become "a degenerate plant" will through such nurture become a regenerate growth.

It is of prophetic significance in the advancing movement of Congregationalism that in this mountain work during the past year there has been formed a joint superintendency for certain pioneer effort between the Association and the Sunday-school and Publishing Society. We fully agree with the sentence from the Executive Committee's report that, "economy of labor and missionary money and greater efficiency in the work are secured by this joint superintendency in which we believe the churches will rejoice"; the logic of which so far forth indicates, that if joint superintendency between two Congregational societies secures greater economy of men and money and greater efficiency of service, then a studied and systematic federation of two Congregational societies, so nearly related, will tend to procure still greater economy and efficiency, and help on towards that day when we shall have one all-comprehensive working federation of Congregational Boards of Missions for our whole beloved land.

Secondly, we call special attention to the transplanting of a colony of Waldenses from the mountains of Italy to the mountains of North Carolina. This colony has just been established, and this autumn is to be re-enforced by the addition of several thousands. These Waldenses are the seed of martyr-blood, and are they in whose behalf for the last two centuries the waves of Milton's prayer have been beating up against the great white throne.

"Avenge, O Lord, thy slaughter'd saints, whose bones Lie scatter'd on the Alpine mountains cold.
Ev'n them who kept thy truth so pure of old,
When all our fathers worshipp'd stocks and stones,
Forget not in thy book; record their groans
Who were thy sheep, and their ancient folds Slain by the bloody Piedmontese, that roll'd
Mother with infant down the rocks. Their moans
The vales redoubled to the hills, and they
To Heaven. Their martyr'd blood and ashes sow
O'er all th' Italian fields, where still doth sway
The triple Tyrant; that from these may grow
A hundred fold, who having learned thy way,
Early may fly the Babylonian woe."

Divine Providence has placed in our hands the opportunity in part of answering this prayer. It was well enough in his day for Cromwell to threaten that to avenge the martyred mountaineers, "his ships in the Mediterranean should visit Civita Vecchia, and the sound of his cannon should be heard in Rome;" but in our day we commend this Association for its Christian eagerness and statesmanlike foresight in giving welcome to these Waldensian pilgrims who with the spirit of old will keep freedom alive in the heights. While our great political parties are intensifying the cry that our country must close the gates of hospitality against all undesirable immigration, lift the banner of welcome toward such colonists as these, and make the first impressions which they receive in their new American home to be just those of intelligence, liberty and righteousness, for which the American Missionary Association stands.

Thirdly, the educational work under our auspices enlarges and advances with equal pace with the other lines of our service. Whittier, N. C., has requested and received from the Association the establishment of a school. The people of that community thus give evidence of their desire to realize for North Carolina what Whittier, the poet, portrays as true of Massachusetts:

"The riches of the commonwealth
Are free, strong minds and hearts of health;
And more to her than gold or grain,
The cunning hand and cultured brain.

"For well she keeps her ancient stock,
The stubborn strength of Plymouth Rock;
And still maintains, with milder laws,
And clearer light, the good old cause!

"Nor heeds the skeptic's puny hands,
While near her school the church-spire stands;
Nor fears the blinded bigot's rule,
While near her church-spire stands the school."

We cannot resist the subtile suggestiveness of another name. "At Evarts, Ky., the Black Mountain Academy has been opened." Black Mountain suggests by contrast that the purpose of this educational work is to create in the Southland white mountains for Mountain Whites; mountains that shall be white not only with intelligence, but also with righteousness, which is the fine linen of saints. The policy of the Association is not to do the work of the State in the conduct of common schools, but to start primary schools that will make State schools a popular demand and logical necessity; and also especially to maintain the higher grades, like academies and normal schools, that shall turn out graduates so imbued with the spirit of Christian intelligence and character that they in turn will become lights to kindle the whole mountain population with the white flame of Christian civilization.

In conclusion, we insist that the mountain whites are the picturesque element in the work of the American Missionary Association. The churches need something inspiring for the imagination, and service for these American Highlanders will keep alive the romance of missions. They were patriots unsurpassed in the revolution and in the rebellion, and their sturdy stock will furnish patriots for every crisis to come. They are of high origin, have a high home, evidence high capability, and must have a high destiny. It is a gilt-edged investment for our American churches to incorporate these American whites in the great commonwealth of Christ. Commerce stints not its capital in seeking to bring iron and coal from these mountains; an alert Christliness on our part will seek to send gold and silver to these mountains, that mountaineers, evangelized and educated, may walk in white with their Master and ours.

"Sing, O heavens; and be joyful, O earth; and break forth into singing, O mountains; for the Lord hath comforted his people, and will have mercy upon his afflicted."

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON FINANCE.

BY A. L. WILLISTON, Chairman.

At the annual meeting of the American Missionary Association, held at Hartford, Conn., October, 1892, the following gentlemen, not in any way connected with the management of the Association, were appointed a committee to examine into the method of conducting its financial affairs:

That committee consisted of Franklin Fairbanks of Vermont, A. L. Williston of Massachusetts, George P. Stockwell of New York, Charles H. Johnson of New Jersey, William H. Strong of Michigan. A majority of the committee met at the office of the Treasurer, H. W. Hubbard, in the Bible House, New York City, and were afforded full and free access to all the books and accounts. We were more than pleased with the admirable manner in which the books were kept. The various books containing the receipts and expenditures were examined, also the books containing the various parcels of real estate owned by the Association, showing where and how received, whether by purchase or legacy, also the cost when purchased, and all the items showing expense and revenue connected therewith. The record of the various legacies and trust funds that from time to time are left to the Association, consisting of bonds, stock certificates, mortgages, money in savings banks, is kept in books specially prepared for this purpose, so plainly and so well, that the condition of each fund is ascertained at a glance.

We know of no institution whose accounts are audited and examined more fully and frequently. The reports of the Treasurer, which are laid before the Executive Committee each month are previously examined by the Finance Committee, while two auditors, elected annually by the Association, examine every three months each item of receipt and disbursement. This audit includes the verification of all moneys received, comparison of the receipts with the cash book, as well as the acknowledgement made in the missionary monthly; also the checks and vouchers for every disbursement, every check having its voucher attached, showing for what purpose it was drawn; the cash book balance is compared with the balance at bank, and a list of the outstanding checks noted. All checks require not only the signature of the Treasurer but of one other officer of the Association.

The Daniel Hand Fund, representing securities whose face value is over one million dollars, but the interest derived from which is only available each year, is kept separate and distinct from all other funds, not only having a separate set of books, but the interest received, which last year amounted to $54,309, is kept in a bank by itself. The securities of this fund are kept in a separate safe deposit vault, which, like the other vaults containing the securities of the Association, have two keys and can only be opened by the united action of the treasurer and another officer of the Association.

The Daniel Hand income account stands as follows:

Balance on hand, Oct. 1, 1893	$10,367.79
Income collected to Sept. 30, 1893	54,309.78
Making a total of	$64,677.57
There has been expended in the South	46,352.87
Balance on hand but appropriated	18,324.70
Total	$64,677.57

The other trusts of the Association are also kept each separately, showing the nature and character of each, the revenue derived, etc., with all the conditions that accompany the trust. All of these undergo examination by the auditors, who are elected annually by the Association.

There is cause of profound gratitude to God that though the financial distress of the past three months has been almost unexampled in severity, the contributions for the year show a gain of $6,450,06, but the great falling off in income has been from legacies, amounting to $95,824.66. This has made necessary a cutting down of the work to the extent of $42,846.14.

The total receipts of the year have been	$340,727.94
Add to which the balance on hand at beginning of year	983.15
Makes a total of	$341,711.09
Add to this the interest derived from the Daniel Hand Fund.	54,309.78
Makes a total applicable to the work of the year of	$396,020.87
The receipts with the balance on hand at the beginning of the year	$341,711.09
Expenditures other than those of the Hand Fund, were	386,739.20
Leaving a debit balance of	$45,028.11

We are satisfied that the American Missionary Association in all that relates to the department of its treasury is deserving of our highest praise, and the safeguards which surround all its details call for our hearty approbation.

FORTY-SEVENTH ANNUAL REPORT

OF THE

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

FOR THE YEAR ENDING SEPTEMBER 30TH, 1893.

GENERAL SURVEY.

The Committee in making its Annual Report presents a summary of the work done in the wide and varied fields of its operations. The facts are so full of interest that a briefer statement would be unsatisfactory.

The need of increased personal service by the Secretaries in the field-work of the Association, and of such distribution in administrative duties as will enable them to accomplish this and to devote more time to associations, conferences and churches in the North, has led the Committee to transfer Rev. C. J. Ryder to the main office in New York, with an appointment as Assistant Corresponding Secretary, and to call to the Eastern district secretaryship the Rev. G. H. Gutterson. These officers have entered upon their new duties with efficiency, and the advantages of the change are already fully demonstrated.

EDUCATIONAL WORK.

In reporting the condition and work of our schools, it is well-nigh impossible to escape the charge of repetitions. One year's work is much like another. One school differs from another school only in its grades, in the individuality of its teachers, and in its peculiar environments. All have a common spirit and purpose. They are alike seeking to quicken vacant minds and vacant hearts, to develop intellectual powers and to bring life, and to give direction to spiritual natures. From Virginia to Texas, from remotest Alaska to Southern California, from the isolated reservations in the West to the mountain ranges of the South, this army of consecrated teachers bears a common banner with a common text, "This one thing I do." In rural schools and graded schools, in normal schools, in schools of higher learning, in schools of theology, in schools of industries, there is this one missionary refrain of a sacred, dominating, missionary purpose. The ultimate end is salvation and the high callings of the kingdom of God.

We report at this time 78 schools. In the South 29 of these are normal; that is, schools whose course of study is such that students in them can be taught and trained so that they can go forth as teachers.

NORMAL SCHOOLS.

The normal schools are located as follows: 1 in Virginia, 6 in Georgia, 6 in Tennessee, 5 in North Carolina, 1 in Florida, 2 in Kentucky, 1 in South Carolina, 5 in Alabama, 1 in Mississippi and 1 in Arkansas.

The year in these schools has been one of Christian harmony in the associated work, with but a single exception; superior in the quality and thoroughness of the teaching, and in many schools it has been marked by an unusual religious earnestness. I quote from the reports of a few as illustrative of all:

Avery Institute, Charleston, S. C.—"The graduates were four young men and eight young women who have completed our four years' normal course, and are now ready for active duty as teachers. Nearly every one in the class has contributed to his own support by his work outside of school hours. Nearly all the class are professing Christians."

LeMoyne Institute, Memphis, Tenn.—"The graduating class this year from the regular normal course numbers fifteen, and is the largest and one of the best that has ever gone out from our school. The religious work of the school has gone steadily forward and a number have begun the Christian life, while there has been an evident growth among those who were Christians. They will do faithful work in home, in school-room, in office and shop, to purify and elevate their people throughout this region, as others are doing who have gone out from this school in former years."

Beach Institute, Savannah, Ga.—"The pupils have seemed to appreciate as never before the value of school privileges, and have shown a strong purpose to secure them. A very large number, we have reason to think, have come to know Christ as their Saviour."

Storrs School, Atlanta, and the Chandler School in Lexington send excellent reports of faithful and devoted work and advances in the required standard of instruction.

Lincoln, at Meridian, Miss., writes, "God's spirit has been manifested in our school."

Lincoln, in North Carolina, writes, "Honest hard work has been done by almost every pupil, and some marked conversions have been followed by vigorous Christian growth."

Orange Park, Fla., closed the second year of its history with a decided gain in every department, and reports that nine students have united with the church this year.

Helena, Ark., closed its first year of existence, but not before it had won the sympathy and co-operation of the best white people of the city for the character of its teachers and the quality of their teaching.

Gregory Institute, at Wilmington, N. C., reports its most successful year with an average attendance of 300. Eleven were graduated from the normal course, and every member of the class goes out as a Christian. Our aim is to send out Christian teachers and good leaders in the elevation of their race.

Burrell School, Selma, Ala., sends the testimony of an intelligent and educated citizen of that city that in scholarship, order and good manners this school leads all schools for colored students in that region.

The Allen Normal and Industrial School at Thomasville, Ga., would gladden the heart of the generous benefactor whose benevolence gave it life and name. It is strong in its teachers and in its influence.

We give these reports as representative. It is not to discriminate against others, equally faithful and equally successful, that the above schools are particularly mentioned.

Colleges.

Fisk University, Nashville, Tenn., signalized its twenty-sixth annual Commencement with the first graduation from its new Theological Seminary, and by the dedication of the Fisk Memorial Chapel, the gift of the late General Clinton B. Fisk, whose honored name the University bears.

Thirty-seven young men and women received diplomas, twenty-one of whom were in the normal course. These were larger classes than ever before were graduated from both college and normal departments. The religious interest has been positive. This institution is raising up a host of men and women, excellent representatives of the Christian and higher education for the Negro, in which this University leads.

Tougaloo University, Miss., is an institution of great interest. Its development especially in the lines of normal instruction and in the beginnings of higher education has been constant year by year. Its excellent industrial departments are doing much for race elevation. Agriculture and mechanics are taught both in their principles and in their practical applications. Five graduates from the full and thorough normal course go to their life-work with a considerable experience in teaching gained by the way, with good records in scholarship and with earnest Christian characters. The black belt will know their strength and spirit. Tougaloo, established for the children of the freedmen, in the very heart of the black belt, stands second to none of the schools in the thoroughness of instruction and standards of manhood.

Straight University, New Orleans, has rejoiced in a year of special interest and enlargement in the dedication of the large central building to replace one destroyed by fire, with a fine chapel for its religious worship. One of the professors writes us that "the graduating class, though below the usual in numbers, was quite otherwise in character." The regular and complete college course has been but lately assumed, but it has already aroused the ambitions of many who seek to prove their ability to rise higher. Probably Straight never came to the end of the year with so large a proportion of its students rejoicing in a Christian hope. The development of the industrial work has been a feature of the year.

Talladega College, Ala., celebrated this year its twenty-sixth anniversary. Its boarding-halls and schoolrooms have been crowded, and worthy applicants all through the year have been refused from want of accommodations. This institution began in 1867 as a primary school with a speller and Bible primer as text-books. One department of study after another has been added till now the curriculum ranges from the primary grades through normal, college preparatory, college and theological studies, with added agricultural and mechanical departments. Thirteen years ago the corps of instructors numbered nine. The college in its plant and buildings is three times as large as it was then, and its instrnctors, four of whom are graduates of Yale, now number twenty-three. The number of students was five hundred and twenty-four.

Talladega College rejoices this year in the legacy of C. B. Erwin, Esq., of New Britain, which has been lately paid, amounting to $84,000. This is now invested as an endowment fund for the institution.

Tillotson Institute, in Texas, reports this year four graduates, all young men. One of them has been tardy but once, and has lost but one half day during his student life of six years in the institution. This youngest of our higher schools has graduated twenty-eight in all from a thorough normal course. Nearly all graduates become teachers, and all of them are honorable living witnesses to the excellence of their teaching and training. Most of these graduates are directly engaged in saving their people. The industrial work of Tillotson attracts much attention.

The theological schools of Fisk, Straight, Tougaloo, Talladega and Howard, under the care and supervision of this Association, are now preparing ministers that give our churches South promise of a safe and worthy enlargement. Hampton, Va., has received from us its usual grant of $500, toward the support of its pastor.

We should be unjust to our work did we not mention forty-three schools of lower grades where devoted Christian teachers from Northern schools and homes are doing a work for God and for their country that is none the less great because it is not conspicuous. They teach the children. They visit their parents. They are home builders. They are Sunday-school teachers seven days in the week. They are great factors in the great problem. The schools in centres are needed, else there would be no proper provision for thousands. The rural schools are also needed, for here are ignorance and destitution. We must strengthen the centres if we would be strong to save this people, but we must not forget the isolated and the desolated people in rude homes without schoolhouses and books, ignorant and weak, the prey of those who are stronger.

Doubtless, however, in the large view the most effective way to lift the masses is to do all that we can to help the climbing up of the relative few to higher intellectual and moral altitudes who shall teach and lead those below them. The masses can never be raised by a dead lift.

Enlargements have been made this year at Lincoln Academy, N. C., of a new building; at Marshallville, Ga., of a cottage dormitory for girls; at Albany, Ga., of a school building; at Andersonville, of a teachers' home; at Martin, Fla., of a handsome school building and property, the generous gift of a friend, in addition to those before mentioned.

We have received $7,500 for Normal and Industrial work from the Trustees of the Slater Fund, which we gratefully acknowledge.

Mountain Schools.

The educational work among these interesting Highlanders in the Southern mountains shows marked progress during the year. We have now 15 Mountain Schools in four States with a total enrollment of 1,528. In the primary grades there are 625 pupils, and in the normal about 190. The other pupils are in the intermediate and grammar grades, with one exception that we are happy to note, as we report one theological student. Two important schools have been added to the list of those already planted by the American Missionary Association in this region. At Whittier, N. C., a singular but very providential movement was inaugurated by the people of that community early in the spring, and in response to their application a school has been opened here. Two teachers have been appointed, and the enrollment at the beginning gives evidence that another teacher must be soon furnished them, as the young people and children from the mountains are flocking into this new school.

At Evarts, Ky., the Black Mountain Academy has been opened. Two new buildings were erected, one for school purposes, and the other for the teachers' home. The people of this mountain hamlet gave of their means and labor generously to this object. Just as our teachers were on their way to open the school in the new building it was burned. The mountain people were undaunted, however, by this disaster. They immediately rented the largest store in the neighborhood, tore out the shelving and counters, put in rude benches, and our teachers reached the field and opened the school on the advertised time. The building is unsuitable for the purpose of a school, and the benches are uncomfortable. "We have no backs to our benches," the principal writes, "except such as we carry with us." This Black Mountain Academy is planted in a new region of country in which our work has only recently begun, and is a most hopeful and promising center for large usefulness.

A significant feature of the educational work in the mountains is the large number of those who are in the normal grade. 187 of the young men and women are fitting themselves to become teachers. Thousands of mountain children will come under the wholesome Christian influence of those who are now being prepared for such work in the American Missionary Association schools.

Another significant fact in the school work among the mountains is the large number of primary pupils enrolled in our schools. The enrollment in this grade is increasingly large, and proves that our work is reaching the homes of the mountain people and gathering the younger children upon whom early and abiding impressions may be more easily made.

Several of these mountain academies will rate fairly with the best in our land, North or South. The work done at Williamsburg Academy, Ky., or at Grand View and Pleasant Hill, Tenn., covers the full normal and college preparatory training. At Green Academy, Nat, Ala., the grade of work has been greatly improved during the past year, and we now place this school in the list of normal institutions. At Blowing Rock and Saluda, N. C., many mountain girls have been gathered, and careful instruction in domestic industries, as well as book knowledge, has entered into the preparation for their life-work. It is impossible to estimate the value to these mountain girls of the close and sympathetic companionship they enjoy with the cultured Christian women who conduct these American Missionary Association schools. We cannot close this brief summary of the educational work of our Association in the mountains without emphasizing the great inadequacy of our means to meet the growing want in this field. Earnest and pleading letters come to us from all over this mountain field begging for help in the establishment of schools in the most needy communities. The funds have been so insufficient to meet this want that numerous applications have been reluctantly declined.

CHURCH WORK.

In this department, the year has been one of remarkable progress in some respects, and of serious trial in others. We have added twenty new churches to our roll, a larger number than in any single year for many years past. The year has witnessed an unwonted number of revivals, some of them marked with peculiar power and fruitfulness. Many of our ministers have been specially active in services beyond the routine of their parish work, taking hold of mission work, preaching and opening Sunday-schools, Christian Endeavor societies and prayer-meetings. Conference and association meetings have evinced a new zeal in behalf of our Congregational polity, and a stronger confidence in its practical and successful working.

On the other hand, the year has been one of unusual trial. Plans for enlargement, called for alike by the united voice of our missionaries and by the evident needs and promise of the field, have not been carried out. Early in the year, it became evident that the decreasing resources of the Association did not justify putting these plans in operation, but rather demanded a sharp contraction of the hoped-for work. We have had to make the best of agencies and forces already in the field without increasing them. There have been some special difficulties in sustaining our present church and mission work among the colored people.

To many of them, the unprecedentedly harsh winter brought want and distress. They could do very little for the support of their pastors, while they themselves were suffering from lack of food, clothing, fuel, and shelter. Still the little that was within their power they offered cheerfully, and the people held on loyally and bravely. "In their great trial of affliction, their deep poverty abounded unto the riches of their liberality." Some of them were so harrassed and persecuted that they knew not which way to turn for the protection of their homes and for the opportunities of peaceful labor. Congregations have been almost annihilated by the removal of families to other sections where they hoped to be free of molestation. One pastor reported that both his churches were likely to be left stranded, because the members were all going away.

The personal observations made in extended visitations of the field by the secretaries and received in our reports evince:

(1.) That our churches are intensely loyal to their Congregational name and way. To them Congregationalism signifies not only the true form of church organization and fellowship, but equal Christian and human rights, a fair opportunity for all, no caste or color proscription, and moral character as the essential condition to vital piety. To them, it is a living protest against the defects of the old slave religion, its physical excitation, its alliance with superstition and its bitter sectarianism. They are the Puritan churches of the South, and they are fighting the old Puritan battle for a free church in a free state.

(2.) The time is ripe for a wide dissemination of the facts and principles of Congregationalism, information of what it stands for and how it works. As was said on our platform not long ago, "the churches of the American Missionary Association are founded upon principles almost as new to the colored race as Christianity itself was to the early Gentiles." We are often appealed to for brief and plain accounts of our Congregational history and principles, and if the funds were at command we would issue a series of leaflets containing fresh, candid, vigorous statements of the principles of our Congregational churches, of their stand for civil and religious freedom, of their interest and work in behalf of the oppressed and suffering races.

In the Central church, New Orleans, La., an experiment of institutional work has been begun, which has thus far yielded fruitful results. The church is open all the time, with a welcome for all who come. Various organizations have been entered into, such as a Chapter of the Brotherhood of Andrew and Philip, a Boys' Brigade, a Young Women's Club, a Mothers' Meeting, a Sewing-School and a Christian Endeavor Society. Already there is a large increase of attendance, and forty-two members have been added to the church on profession. We quote from some of the church reports which have come from this work: "Perhaps no branch of our work advances more satisfactorily than the company of the Boys' Brigade. A great change has already come over some of the hardest boys; I know God's spirit is at work upon them. The sewing-school, the reading-room, the Mothers' Meeting are all being used for God. We have after-meetings nearly every Sabbath evening, and souls are born again. Three promising young men, who have found the Lord in connection with the work of our Brotherhood of Andrew and Philip, united with the church on the first Sabbath of this year. It is a blessed thing when young people, who are drifting from God, and have learned to think of the church as a place to be dreaded, suddenly waken to find the church a blessing, an attractive place, and to realize that loving hearts are earnestly concerned about their souls. This is what goes on day by day and week by week in this dear church. . . . . For the visit of one of the Secretaries of the American Missionary Association, we render devout thanks to God. To have this Secretary, with his helpful experience and warm sympathetic heart come right into the midst of our work and see its needs, has strengthened and cheered us more than words can tell."

The church at Talladega, Ala., not only experienced a revival during the winter, with a number of conversions, but has felt the benefit of a decided work of grace this summer, from which twenty-six have joined the church. This church carries on eight different Sunday-schools, and is the center of several allied churches to which students and teachers go out for preaching and other work. At Macon, Ga., over fifty members have been added to the church on confession, during the year. The work seems to center mainly in the prayer-meeting, which is carried on with great vigor. This church has now started a mission in a very needy part of the city.

In Charleston, S. C., although the church building escaped destruction from the great storm, many of the people met with severe losses. During the present pastorate of seven years one hundred and sixty members have been received on profession of faith. Tradd Street Mission is still kept up in a needy section of the city, and the work at Maryville school has been promoted by the efforts of the church. The Christian Endeavor Society does good service.

The University Church in Nashville, Tenn., has experienced successive revivals during the year, with nearly one hundred conversions. The regular prayer-meetings and other religious services continued to feel the power of these revival meetings.

The Orange Park Church in Florida reports steady progress in all ways, with increased interest in the church and church work, especially among the young people. The Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor has been full of life and enterprise, and three or four other societies have sprung from it. A significant feature of the young people's meetings has been the habitual illustration of the church fellowship between all classes of Christians.

At McLeansville, N. C., the pastor ministers to two churches, and also carries on a successful school, in which his wife teaches. With his coming there is a revival of interest in the work. He writes, "During our meetings there were thirty-one conversions, and twenty-seven of this number have applied for membership and will be received into the church. Others who had grown cold and wandered away, were quickened by the Holy Spirit and returned to the church. Most of the converts are grown young men and women." The people are industrious but very poor, and in great need of comfortable homes.

At Beaufort, N. C., the people of our church were much disheartened by the conflagration which destroyed both the church and school building. But they have kept on with their meetings and have now rallied in increasing numbers around their new pastor. Recent reports say that the congregations were never so large as now. A new church building is in process of erection.

At Meridian, Miss., a significant feature of the year has been the large attendance of young people. Two mission schools are carried on, and the service of the Christian Endeavor Society is found to be very helpful.

Our church at Tougaloo, Miss., is the center of a mission work which extends in various directions throughout the neighboring country. Teachers and students go out, Sabbath by Sabbath, for preaching and other religious service. The home work is of exceptional power, both in the spiritual training of the school and in its inspiring influence abroad.

In Wilmington, N. C., a most interesting and helpful temperance work has been in progress. The prayer-meetings are well attended, and successful revival meetings have been held. The pressure from the hard times is very severe upon all the people.

New mission work has been started at two points in Oklahoma Territory. Negroes are pouring into Oklakoma and securing homes everywhere. One church has been organized, with good promise of success if a house of worship can be secured, and another mission is now ready for church organization.

Mountain Church Work.

We are happy to report a most satisfactory development of the church work among the mountains. Fourteen new churches have been added to the list of our Congregational churches in this mountain region during the year, making the number 44. The church membership has reached a total of over 1,000. There were added during the year 200 members, most of them on confession of their faith. The number of churches added to the list is by far the largest it has ever been our privilege to report in a single year among these Highlanders.

A part of these have come into our Congregational fellowship through a most interesting movement on the part of the people themselves. Throughout the mountain regions of North Carolina there has been a growing dissatisfaction felt toward the old conditions of church life and polity. Something larger and freer has been demanded by the people. They have felt the influence of the churches established by the American Missionary Association in this mountain region of Tennessee and Kentucky, and some progressive and energetic native mountain people have organized Congregational churches. We have taken these upon our list, and are assisting them in the support of their pastors and co-operating with them in their interesting work. We may report here that several other churches of this class are in correspondence with us which will doubtless come on to our list in the near future. These churches are heartily and thoroughly Congregational, having been organized as such, coming into our fellowship with no uncertainties of polity and principle.

Our own missionaries have organized the other churches that are reported herein. Although the increase in the number of our churches among these mountaineers has been so large, still we have refused again and again to encourage the organization of new churches in cases where our faithful missionaries with commendable enthusiasm desired such a step to be taken, holding these points as missions for the present. The mountain field is ripe for aggressive and earnest Congregational church work. We can accomplish results among these Highlanders of greatest importance. Congregationalism stands for the union of school and church, an intelligent Christianity, and this idea is what is demanded by the progressive element of this interesting mountain people.

Waldenses.

A peculiar and most interesting phase of our work in this same mountain region has recently developed. A party of Waldenses from the mountains of Italy have established a colony at Valdese in Burke Co., N. C. We have been in correspondence with the representatives of this colony, and their president, Rev. Dr. C. A. Tron, has visited the officers of the Association. We have pledged them assistance in the support of their pastor for the coming year. Dr. Tron is now among his people in their own land, and writes under recent date that doubtless several thousand Waldenses will reach our shores this autumn. The American Missionary Association presents to its constituency this new and interesting phase of church work. These brave Waldenses, who fled to the mountains in France and Italy to escape persecution and to remain true to their religious convictions, now planting this colony in North Carolina, are welcomed with hearty cordiality by the liberty-loving Congregationalists of our own land, reaching them through the Association.

Joint Superintendent.

A plan for systematic and helpful co-operation by the American Missionary Association and the Sunday-School and Publishing Society has been inaugurated in the mountain work during the year. Mr. Gilbert Walton, of Tennessee, has been appointed conjointly by these two societies as superintendent for pioneer Sunday-school work. It is confidently believed that these Sunday-schools will grow into useful Congregational churches under the care of the Association. Economy of labor and missionary money, and greater efficiency in the work are secured by this joint superintendency, in which we believe the churches will rejoice.

STATISTICS OF CHURCH WORK IN THE SOUTH.

Number of Churches	152
" Missionaries	125
" Church Members	8,988
Added during the year	1,282
Added by profession of faith	884
Scholars in Church and Mission Sunday-schools	15,331

NOTE.—It may be noted that 8 churches which were last year reported have been removed from our list. 20 new churches have been established, making a total of 152 churches. We have lost 125 members by death; by excommunication, 181; by dismission, 212.

THE INDIANS.

This has been a year of unusual progress and large ingathering among our Indian missions. The school work has moved along the usual lines. The work of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor in these schools has been most encouraging and hopeful. A large number of Indian children have been enrolled among the faithful Endeavorers.

A new and peculiar feature of the educational work among the Indians has been that carried on by Mr. F. B. Riggs, who has denominated his work as that of "Educational Missionary." Mr. Riggs has been provided by the American Missionary Association with a stereopticon and slides. These slides illustrate different lectures or talks which he gives the Indians. One set illustrates the "Progress of Civilization," in which by pictures Mr. Riggs shows the various steps of progress in the attainment of the higher civilization; cliff dwellers, dug-outs, tents, houses, palaces, are thrown in pictures upon the canvas, impressing their lessons upon the red people who grunt their satisfaction and interest. Mr. Riggs also illustrates the life of the Saviour, and no one who has seen the crowded gatherings of Indians, men, women and children, can doubt that these illustrations bring the story of the gospel home to their hearts as nothing else can. The plan of the "Educational Missionary" is to take the lantern out upon the prairie, and make exhibits in mission schools, or in barns, or cabins, or wherever he can find a place. Crowds of interested Indians follow him from village to village, listening with the wondering amazement of children to the wholesome truth which these, to them, marvelous illustrations convey. This is a unique phase of our educational work, and marks genuine progress along a most useful line.

The most wonderful development in the Indian field, however, comes in the church work. The total membership of the Indian churches has increased during the year from 461—which we reported last year—to 762, a gain of 301. The reports from many of these churches are encouraging beyond anything it has ever before been our privilege to report from the Indian field, as will be seen from the following analysis:

The Crow Agency, Montana, has been developed during the year. The foundation of a mission house has been laid, and the building is now being erected. This field is new, having been recently occupied. The need is appalling, but the work opens very promisingly.

Cherry Creek Church at Cheyenne River, South Dakota, is one of the newer churches, having been organized in 1892. 31 have been admitted to the membership of this church during the year, and $327 have been contributed for church and benevolent purposes. Surely the spirit of Christian benevolence has taken possession of this little Indian church.

Fort Berthold, North Dakota, has enjoyed a most blessed year. In May the Indian Mission Council met here, and one of the most interesting features of the Council was the communion service. Seventeen Indians were admitted to the church on the confession of their faith. It was the ingathering of years of seed-sowing. Most of those who joined the church were young married people who brought their children for Christian baptism. Two venerable Christians, Mr. Poor Wolf and his wife, were among the number of those who joined this prairie church. Mrs. Poor Wolf is a cripple and could not stand, but sat on the floor of the little chapel during this interesting service. Two Christian daughters of Poor Wolf had long prayed for the conversion of their father and mother. When Poor Wolf gave his Christian testimony he said, with evident feeling and sincere devotion, "I want to follow after my daughters' God." 269 pupils have been enrolled in the Sunday-school of this church, and all are enthusiastic and interested Bible students.

Moreau River, South Dakota, reports 12 added on confession of faith, and benevolent contributions to the amount of $200.

Oahe, South Dakota, enjoyed the faithful services of Eli Spotted Bear, their pastor, and the year has been one of progress.

Bazille Church, Santee Agency, Nebraska, has enjoyed a season of spiritual refreshing. The pastor, Rev. James Garvie, has been successful along the line of general mission work in addition to his pastoral duties.

The Pilgrim Church, Santee, Nebraska, is still served by its venerable pastor, Rev. Artemas Ehnamani, who holds the love and veneration of all, both Indians and pale faces. The year has been one of great prosperity. Seventeen have been admitted to the church, and the contributions for local and outside benevolence have reached the remarkable sum of $560, which is greatly to their honor, as every benevolent Congregationalist will say.

Standing Rock, Fort Yates, North Dakota, has also been visited by a remarkable outpouring of God's spirit. The report from this field is almost beyond credence. 57 have been added to the church on confession of their faith; 45 adults have been baptized and 29 infants. The benevolent contributions of the church reached a large sum. 400 children have been enrolled in the Sunday-school. The pastor and fellow-missionaries in this field testify that they have been exceedingly careful in their examination of candidates for church membership, and have refused many that have applied, advising them rather to wait than to hasten their membership.

White River, South Dakota, Rosebud Church.—Here again we find most encouraging results of the year's work. Twelve have been added to the church on the confession of their faith, and benevolent contributions have reached a total of $225.

Surely the friends who have been praying for the incoming of the kingdom of our Lord among these red people of the prairie must realize that their prayers are being answered.

In tracing the causes of this unusual progress of missionary work among the Indians, we discover two that stand out prominently: The first of these comes from the large number of Indians who now hold their property in severalty. This fact simplifies the work, and economizes both labor and money. Many of the Indians are permanently located on their own holdings, and work inaugurated and buildings erected are permanently useful, as they were not when the Indians were roaming over the prairie.

Another cause comes from the results of the recent Indian uprising. When Sitting Bull and his followers made their last stand it was against a band of Christian Indians, and not against white soldiers. It was the supreme effort of paganism arrayed against Christianity, and paganism went down. The Indians recognize this, and their thoughts are turned in a peculiar way to the victorious Christian religion. All over the field buildings are too small to hold the crowded gatherings of those who come to hear the story of the Gospel. "If there is anything in the world an Indian knows it is that he is lost," said one of our experienced missionaries recently. Jesus Christ comes to seek and to save those who are lost, and it is only the power of his salvation that will find and save them.

A word for the future of the Indian work. We have been obliged to send nearly one-half of the Indian children away from our schools because of the lack of funds at the opening of the new fiscal year. One reason for this lack of funds is in the withdrawal of the Association from the aid hitherto tendered by the Government for the support of contract schools. This action of the Association seemed to be demanded by the voice of the churches, but the crippling of the schools is none the less to be deplored. In view of the wonderful evidences of God's blessing, and of the imperative needs of the work and this special curtailment of receipts, can it be possible that the churches will fail to increase their contributions greatly?

ALASKA.

From our mission at Cape Prince of Wales, in far-off Alaska, we have received the annual report. The four missionaries have had a season of successful work. The schools have been advanced in the range of studies, the people show marked improvement in manners and old superstitions are slowly giving way.

A change is foreshadowed. The vast importance of the introduction of the reindeer has induced Mr. Lopp to resign his commission under the Association, and to accept the charge of the Government Reindeer Station at Port Clarence, where he will render a valuable service, and will also incidentally do missionary work. Mr. Thornton and his wife will thus enter the new year alone, but they do this with cheerfulness and courage.

DEATH OF MR. THORNTON.

Soon after writing the paragraph above, there came the startling intelligence of the murder of Mr. Thornton by three natives and of the return of Mrs. Thornton. As Mr. Lopp and his wife had already gone to Port Clarence, the mission at Cape Prince of Wales is at present entirely deserted. But it must not be abandoned. A work so well begun, and except for this melancholy accident, so promisingly carried forward must not fail. There will be found consecrated men and women with courage and wisdom who will occupy that dwelling and schoolhouse, and who will continue and enlarge the work begun in the hearts and lives of the mass of the natives.

THE CHINESE.

The work of our Chinese mission has gone on with the usual regularity and success under the watchful supervision of Rev. Dr. Pond. He and his teachers are meeting with cheerful self-denial the pecuniary pressure of the close of the year. This work is so good and the claims for enlargement are so great that it seems very sad that they must be in straits in carrying forward the work now in hand.

A new feature has been introduced into the mission during the past year. It is said that there are two thousand, five hundred Chinese women, not including the girls, in San Francisco, and very few of these ever see anything of the outside world. They spend most of their lives in one or two rooms in superstition and ignorance, and they welcome with gladness the visits of Christian women, and thus the way is open for bringing in the Gospel. Miss Minnie G. Worley, M.D., suggested a plan for reaching these isolated women by the visits of female missionaries. She herself, as a physician, has found ready access to their homes. Sufficient funds were contributed, and the home visitation was begun. Dr. Pond writes: "It is still an experiment, but certainly thus far it is one of rich promise. The two ladies employed are becoming enthusiastic over it. They find themselves received now not as curious visitors but as warm friends. Hearts begin to open to them. Some of the women wish to learn English. Two or three wish to learn to read the Bible. Some wish to have their little children taught. Six mothers have been found willing to expose their children to the danger of becoming Christians by allowing them to attend the children's meetings held on Friday afternoons. The average attendance at this meeting is sixteen. The children love to come."

The Christian Endeavor movement has been introduced with enthusiasm and success into our Chinese missions. It began under the leadership of Mrs. Kate V. Hall, our teacher in Santa Cruz, and was followed by a society in the Central mission, San Francisco. Dr. Pond writes: "It worked so well with us that our Presbyterian brethren followed and after them, if I am not mistaken, the Baptist and Methodist missions. The Superintendent took the idea southward when he went that way for his annual visitation, and now in most of our missions the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor is an efficient factor."

The movement for the expulsion of the Chinese has not yet reached its consummation. The want of money rather than of will seems to be a practical hindrance. What Congress and the Executive will finally do in this case is yet in the future. We can only hope that the American sense of justice and the good providence of God will deliver this nation from the guilt of unrighteous discrimination against this handful of foreigners.

Two new missions have been established, at Bakersfield and Hanford, large and growing villages. The aggregate enrollment of pupils is larger than that of last year by 39, as that exceeded the enrollment of the preceding year by 122. The number who have professed repentance of sin and faith in Christ by joining the Association of Christian Chinese cannot be stated accurately, but is believed to exceed 70, making the total number concerning whom we have had reason to hope since the commencement of our mission to exceed one thousand.

FINANCES.

The receipts for current work for the fiscal year ending September 30th have been $340,727.94, which with a balance in hand at the beginning of the year of $983.15 makes a total of $341,711.09. The expenditures have been $386,739.20, leaving a debt balance of $45,028.11.

The last three months of the year have been a period of business distress and depression throughout our entire country. It is a special cause for thanksgiving to God that in these times of financial stringency the collections from the churches have not only been equal to the amount received last year, but there has been an increase of $6,450.46. The receipts from legacies this year are $76,487.90, a decrease of $95,624.66. This decrease is more than twice the amount of our debt. The expenditures for the past year have been $42,846.14 less than the previous year.

The necessary expenditures for the current work and for the natural growth of the work cannot be decreased without cutting into the very life, and causing great loss of cumulative efficiency. Yet the committee has not hesitated to hold the work in check, even though demands for better support and for enlargement were very pressing.

The debt of $45,000 is a very serious embarrassment as we start out on the work of another year. It is the debt of the churches contracted in their work among God's lowly poor. Will the churches by extra efforts and special collections, and will individuals, at once provide for the debt and furnish adequate means for this coming year? We have faith in the churches, and we believe the churches have faith in the committee's careful oversight of all departments of the work, and in this faith we go forward into the new year of service for the Master, and in His name seek to win souls and to build them up in the ways of righteousness and peace.

The Daniel Hand Educational Fund.

The income from this Endowment Fund for the past year has been $54,309.78, which with the balance at the beginning of the year of $10,367.79, makes a total of $64,677.57. The expenditures for the year have been $46,352.87, leaving the balance in hand and appropriated $18,324.70.

WOMAN'S BUREAU.

The work of the American Missionary Association has always had the cordial support of women in contributions from individuals and mission circles of every name. Since the organization of the Bureau, however, there has been a steady growth in interest. Through this department information has been given as to the special support of missionaries, aid of students, supply of clothing, furnishing goods for dormitories, and other helps. It has made known to the ladies of the churches the great variety of work carried on, and has encouraged co-operation of the State Unions in the support of missionaries.

Forty State organizations are now in co-operation with the American Missionary Association, and have sent contributions to its treasury during the year of $16,324.56. Other societies of ladies and young people have contributed $4,561.58. In response to a special appeal $1,413.48 was contributed toward reducing our debt. Valuable help has also been given in renewing the furnishing for boarding-halls and mission homes.

Through this Bureau 20,000 copies of missionary letters have been furnished the past year to Women's Societies, Sunday-schools and Christian Endeavor Societies, and large supplies of literature have been sent out upon request. The Secretary has attended personally, or provided speakers for, twelve anniversaries of Women's State organizations, and has presented the work of the Association at many local meetings. We bear hearty testimony to the value of Woman's Aid in all departments of this field.

GRATEFUL ACKNOWLEDGMENTS.

The Christian Endeavor Societies of the churches have been most helpful in their gifts for the work of the American Missionary Association during the year. We desire to express our most hearty thanks for these generous gifts. We recognize also the co-operative value of the Christian Endeavor work itself in the various departments of our field. Scarcely a church either among the Negroes, or Mountaineers, or Indians, but has a progressive and aggressive Endeavor Society. Abundant testimony comes from our missionaries of the great value of these Endeavor Societies.

We also gratefully remember our indebtedness to the Bible Society and to the Congregational Sunday-School and Publishing Society for grants of books and lesson helps to our struggling churches and Sunday-schools.

OBITUARY.

Miss Julia Andrews.—Many hearts will mourn as the knowledge comes to them that Miss Julia Andrews is dead. Her pastor writes of her: "She was universally beloved and admired, not only in the school but throughout the community. Her goodness, made the more potent by her wise discretion and kindness of heart, disarmed prejudice, and won confidence everywhere for the school."

Her disease was typho-malaria, from which she seemed rapidly recovering, when her zeal led her to resume duties too arduous, and produced a relapse under which she sank. Her sister, Miss Fanny Andrews, was with her, but only in time to take her last farewell.

Miss Laura A. Parmelee died at her post in Fisk University, January 14th. She entered the service of the Association in 1867, and spent several years at Andersonville, Ga., the location of the deadly prison so fatal to many of our soldiers. She remained there through the dreadful Ku Klux days, not merely under ostracism but in danger. With calm courage, and with reliance upon the blessing of God, she and her fellow teachers continued their faithful and useful work. Miss Parmelee subsequently spent a year in Straight University, New Orleans, La., seven years in LeMoyne Institute, Memphis, Tenn., and eleven years in Fisk University, and in every place she has left a memory honored and revered. Miss Parmelee had left a home of refinement and wealth to consecrate herself to the work of the Master in this her chosen field. She had in her own name a property which enabled her to live free from care, and yet she chose to live and die in the South, working for the enlightenment of the ignorant and degraded.

General S. C. Armstrong.—During this year the life of a noble, lovable and useful man has ended. A little more than a year before his death, General Armstrong had a stroke of paralysis so severe that for several days his death was hourly expected, but his vigorous constitution asserted itself, and he rallied to a partial use of his limbs and speech. He cherished the hope that he might recover entirely, but his symptoms became again discouraging, and he died May 11th, 1893.

General Armstrong, the son of a missionary, born in the Sandwich Islands, a pupil of Mark Hopkins, a soldier in the civil war, detailed for service in the Freedmen's Bureau, found himself at the close of the war drawn by his surroundings, his Christian sympathies and his patriotic instincts to devote himself to the elevation of the recently emancipated slaves. The opportunity was near at hand. The American Missionary Association had opened the first school for the Freedmen at Hampton in 1861, and had extended its work in Norfolk and elsewhere as rapidly as the progress of the Union armies opened the way.

The wonderful facilities for an enlarged work at Hampton became apparent to General Armstrong, and he accepted the offer from the Association to enter upon a permanent work in the establishment of a normal and industrial institute. A charter was obtained from the General Assembly of Virginia in 1870, and the property was turned over to the Board of Trustees in 1872. General Armstrong entered upon the work with his untiring energy, and has erected a monument that will not crumble, but will continue to bless the race in whose hearts he is enshrined.

Rev. James Walker.—We are called to record the sudden decease of Rev. James Walker, pastor of the church in Rutland, Ga., which is under the care of the American Missionary Association. Mr. Walker was formerly pastor of the church at Hillsboro, N. C.; subsequently at Chapel Hill, N. C. Thence he was transferred to Cypress Slash, Ga., and for a few years past has been in charge of the church at Rutland, Ga. On the 10th of July he called upon Dr. Roy in his office in Chicago, and appeared to be in good health. On the 13th of July he died. A faithful and consistent missionary has finished his course and has kept the faith.

Miss M. F. Wells entered the service of the Association in 1865, and amid increasing toil and heavy sicknesses pursued her work until recently, when her days came to a peaceful close in her cottage at Chautauqua, N.Y. Her life-work was mainly in one locality, where she has erected a monument, not only in the building constructed under her auspices, but still more permanently and gloriously in the lives and characters of her many pupils, in the families to which they belonged, and in the schools where they are teaching. Miss Wells died Tuesday, September 14th. Funeral services were conducted at Chautauqua, and her remains were sent to Ann Arbor for interment.

Miss Emma N. Goldsmith left her bright home in New Hampshire, and for five consecutive years devoted her services as a teacher in the LeMoyne school in Memphis, Tenn. The Principal of the school testifies that "She was more than merely a teacher; she was the counselor, guide and friend of her pupils, only content when she was helping them to live a life of trust and obedience toward God, in which she found her own strength and joy. The memory of her devoted life is among the precious legacies which will continue to bless the school. Miss Goldsmith died after a short illness at the home of her parents in Chester, N. H., August 31.

Mr. Harrison R. Thornton, our faithful missionary, after three years of earnest and successful work at Cape Prince of Wales, Alaska, was brutally murdered on the night of August 19, 1893, by, as is supposed, three young men of desperate character. The natives were roused to indignation and killed two of the supposed murderers, and the third one probably has paid the forfeiture before this time. Mr. Thornton was about thirty-five years old, a man of fine ability, and connected with an honorable family in Virginia. His brother, Mr. James Thornton, is a Professor in Hampden Sidney College, and another brother, Mr. William Thornton, is a Professor in the University of Virginia, and Chairman of the Faculty. Of the latter institution Mr. H. R. Thornton was a graduate. He had spent some time as a teacher before he went to Cape Prince of Wales as a missionary. The father of these young men, Col. John Thornton, was colonel of a Confederate cavalry regiment, and was killed by a cannon ball fired from a distance of several miles after the battle was over. Gen. Lee wrote to Col. Thornton's widow a beautiful letter, deeply lamenting his untimely loss. Col. Thornton was an able and eloquent advocate.

BUREAU OF WOMAN'S WORK.

MISS D. E. EMERSON, SECRETARY.

REPORT OF SECRETARY.

1883–1893.—We have rounded off a full decade of organized woman's work in connection with our American Missionary Association. Remembering the fears and perplexities that have sometimes clouded the way, we are surprised as we now turn and look carefully backward to see a shining path straight from the memorial of hope and faith from which we made our start. Gratefully we mark our decade with an "Ebenezer" for "Hitherto hath the Lord helped us."

It is not in Christian womanhood to be an unsympathetic or unhelpful looker-on in any movement for relief of suffering or cure of sin, and from the time of the "many women" who followed Jesus from Galilee ministering unto Him, unto the present, there have been ministering women who have "ministered of their substance."

No wonder then that with the rapid development of the work among the colored people of the South, whose slave history so wrought upon our sympathy, and whose emancipation had cost so much—a work calling so many women into the field as missionary teachers—there should have been a seeking after a means for larger helpfulness. It was at the initiative of this woman's movement that the American Missionary Association, which had from the date of the civil war magnified its woman's work, organized a Bureau, in order to facilitate the co-operation of women in its work.

It is interesting to note that the first report of the Woman's Bureau explaining the need of such help to the American Missionary Association advocated the organization of State Missionary Unions, which, with an auxiliary in every church, should be open to calls from all parts of the home field. You know the record of the years, how following one after another in rapid succession organizations of unions have been effected to the present number of forty.

Let us glance at what has been accomplished in behalf of the American Missionary Association. Ten years ago we reported, as supported specially by Woman's Aid, 7 missionaries, all in the Negro field. This year 36 have been sustained, of whom 21 have been among the Negro people, 8 among the mountain whites, and 7 among the Indians.

Ten years ago we reported special collections from women, $2,426. This year we report as received through 29 State Unions $16,324.56, and from other Women's and Young People's Societies $4,561.58, a total of $20,886.14, additional to contributions of $3,622.68 sent by Christian Endeavor Societies, whose growing interest in, and help to, missions we acknowledge with thankfulness.

In many directions there has been great gain. We cannot mention all. The most marked is, we think, in the evident desire for information. During the last year we have furnished liberal supplies of literature to the state and county officers of the Unions for distribution, and it is a testimony to the general knowledge already acquired that in addition to this, we have in answer to requests arranged and sent out material for over 400 meetings on special phases of the work or particular schools. The missionary letter-writing has done much toward creating this interest. While all missionaries write to some extent we have had 36 selected writers whose letters to the number of 2,500 copies monthly have been sent to the contributing friends, mainly to Women's and Young People's and Christian Endeavor Societies taking special work. We are glad to find that the letters thus sent are not limited in their range of influence. Many of the recipients share them with the church missionary concert and the Sunday-schools.

Sixteen State organizations have pledged collections for assigned missionaries or schools, and help has been given in other ways. For example, the Connecticut ladies whose colored work is at Thomasville, Ga., promptly responding to a need in that school, put an entire new supply of house linen into the dormitories for a family of fifty in addition to their money gifts; and the Minnesota ladies likewise have within the year furnished five large rooms for boarding students at Jonesboro, Tenn. The response to every call for household furnishing has been most prompt and generous not only by the Unions as such, but by many local church societies.

Encouraged by the growth of interest in the work and impelled by our necessities, within three months of the close of our year, we asked the women of the churches to aid in reducing the debt of the Association caused not by undue expenditure, but by extraordinary shortage of legacies. The call came in mid-summer vacation and yet it brought 116 responses and $1,413.48 as an extra offering in this trying time.

Our hearts are filled with gratitude to God and to you, our true yokefellows in this work of the American Missionary Association.

And now we set our faces forward to make the history of another decade. The last has seen rapid organization, preparation for large work; and a large work is ready for us. We are enlisted in a service which needs every intelligent Christian woman in our land to speak for it, to pray and plan for it, to give and even sacrifice for it. Consider the extent of the woman's work of the American Missionary Association with which we co-operate. Not set apart as separate, but having the advantage of unity in the one adminstration, and the one treasury, the American Missionary Association has this year called from the churches, forty-seven consecrated women to the Indian field, twenty-two to the Chinese, thirty-six to the mountain whites and two hundred and seventy to the colored people; a total of three hundred and seventy-five women as missionary workers. Twenty-five of its schools are conducted entirely by women. Twelve of them are large graded schools and eight have boarding departments.

These several fields present to us not less than six million women and children whose mental and moral ignorance taxes to the utmost limit the training and the praying and the watching power of every missionary teacher among them. These women missionaries need the tender, prayerful remembrance that will naturally follow your contributions. They need the privilege of sometimes opening their hearts to you to share their joy or their discouragement.

Those who have contributed the past year must have been interested to follow their missionary at Remington Station as she went among the Indian families teaching the art of bread-making and simple industries, giving Bible readings and leading, souls out into light. Or to go with their teacher to that part of Memphis which literally swarms with colored people, living in wretched shanties, fifty people being a low estimate for the population of one yard. You find her there on Sunday afternoon, with between forty and fifty children in her one class, and a crowd around the door to listen if her Bible story becomes interesting; and you are glad for her, that the people there say the children play more quietly and with less fighting than they used to, and some of them insist on praying at night.

But the crowning joy, perhaps, was to those who received the good news from Beach Institute, Savannah, when their teacher wrote, "The only difficulty I have is in finding words glad enough to express our gladness and to make you glad that you ever gave one dollar toward American Missionary Association work, and so can claim a share in this great blessing."

Then comes a description of earnest prayer for the outpouring of God's Spirit in that school, of a few conversions, the longing for the showers of blessing, and then the conversion of "the worst boy." Our teacher adds, "The news spread through the school; the windows of heaven were opened; there was no staying the Spirit. When the grammar grade went down for music, the music teacher held a prayer meeting and many gave themselves to Christ then. An hour later the fourth and fifth grades came in and another meeting was held. At noon the pastor appeared and with the help he gave, many more souls were born anew. And O, my friends, I wish you could hear these children testify when once they have been saved. And will you not pray that these children may be kept by the power of God? They are so weak and ignorant. They do not even know how to find food for their souls in God's word."

O what a harvest of souls is ready for our ingathering in this field of the American Missionary Association, and how such leaven of righteousness is needed for the salvation of these poor races.

We asked last year for $50,000 as woman's offering for this field. Does it not seem a small amount to ask, when our own church records show a membership of 360,000 women, who by their very church vows, acknowledge their indebtedness to their Lord? And shall this work which He has left to us, His followers, be allowed to suffer because you or I withhold our portion of what is His due? God forbid. Rather let us each one inquire, with cheerful purpose to do His will, "Lord what wilt Thou have me to give?"

RECEIPTS FOR THE WORK OF THE YEAR 1892-93.

Income from Daniel Hand Fund	54,309 78

This is to certify that we have examined the accounts of H. W. Hubbard, Treasurer of the American Missionary Association, for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1893, with the vouchers, and find the same correct, as stated in the above accounts.

We also certify that we have examined the property accounts, and the certificates of stocks, bonds and other securities held by the Association representing the investments of the several funds, and find them to correspond with the balance sheet of September 30, 1893, and with the detailed statement of the books of the Treasurer.

New York, October 12, 1893.

PETER MCCARTER, RICHARD S. BARNES, } Auditors.

Co-operation with the Advisory Committee has been more immediate than at any time during the history of this movement. The apportionment of that committee of $250,000.00 in donations for the American Missionary Association has not been realized by $65,000.00, as the financial reports show. In several states, however, the state committees organized at the suggestion of the Advisory Committee have energetically pushed the interests of the A. M. A. before the local churches. In certain states a "Bureau of Benevolences" has been organized with a central office. In this office there is kept on hand the literature of the Association and other Congregational societies and churches and others are supplied as demand arises. A continuous campaign has been planned in at least two states and appointments have been made for a secretary of the A. M. A.. This marks a forward movement and is worthy of the attention of our constituent churches in every state. This movement can be successful only as each church responds promptly and cordially in the full amount apportioned.

The American Missionary has had large value in the able presentation of the various phases of the work through its pages. This magazine can hardly be overestimated. It is gaining more and more the position of a recognized exponent of experts who speak with scientific knowledge and authority concerning the problems in these different fields.

In Congregational Work the A. M. A. has co-operated with the other societies in editorial management. Through the pages assigned to this Association constant effort has been made to keep before the large body of subscribers recent and fresh missionary intelligence. Congregational Work is the united voice of all the societies and has constantly gained influence especially among those who are not surfeited with periodical literature.

A certificate testifying to the fact that the literature of the A. M. A. is filed in the Congressional Library in Washington and used for reference by members of the two houses in their preparation of speeches is a significant and interesting fact. It is a testimony to the value of the literature of the Association and to the good sense of certain members of Congress that they appreciate this expert testimony on these national problems in missionary literature. The certificate is signed by the Congressional Librarian.

In addition to the occasional literature and pamphlets the Association is prepared to issue during the year two important volumes relating to the history and development of the work of the Association. One of these will be of the nature of an historical review and will prove of value to pastors and others interested in the development of the work.

The other volume will be especially adapted for student volunteer, women's missionary unions and others who are making a study of missionary literature. This volume will constitute a bureau of information and a text book on the work of the American Missionary Association.

Your committee reports in another portion of this Survey the statement that Christian Endeavor Hall at Blanche Kellogg Institute, Santurce, Porto Rico, is an accomplished fact. The full amount necessary to the completion of this building was received from special contributions to which many Christian Endeavor Societies gave. These together with the generous gifts of Mr. Kellogg made possible the success of this effort.

The death of Rev. Joseph E. Roy, D. D., Secretary Emeritus, is chronicled in the biographical notices included with this report. Dr. Roy left a large place in the administration of the Association in the Western District and indeed throughout the entire nation North and South. He was honored and beloved by every one who knew him and his wisdom and judicious conduct of the work of the Association in the South during the critical times early in his service were of great value.

Rev. George E. Hall, D. D., elected as District Secretary of the Western District by the Executive Committee has already entered upon this important position. Dr. Hall comes with especial knowledge of the work of the Association having served as a member of the Executive Committee for a number of years. His welcome to the Western District has been cordial and generous and your committee speaks for him the largest success. This great western region must be in the future increasingly the source of support for the A. M. A.. These rapidly developing commonwealths represent the future Congregational possibilities and fellowship of our nation. Your committee looks for large increase of resources from these western and interior states as the years pass.

In addition to the brief reference to the successful work carried on by the Bureau of Woman's Work your committee would add a word. The stringent financial condition of the country has not seemed to effect the resources of the women of our churches. During the year they have steadily increased in their contributions. They are certainly to be congratulated upon this wholesome gain in their gifts.

An encouraging movement in the interests of missionary work in our own country has been inaugurated during this year in the organization of a home missionary council composed of representatives of the home missionary societies of the various denominations. A campaign in the interests of this interdenominational home missionary movement is being arranged and it is confidently hoped that proportionate attention will be given to the home field as never before and that cordial and harmonious efforts will be made avoiding all denominational differences and sectarian discord.

In closing your committee would press again upon the attention of the churches the appeal which this great missionary endeavor presents to the churches for the full measure of $250,000.00 during the coming year. With the better organization of our states under the general plan of the Advisory Committee; with the increasing prosperity of our churches; with the growth of Christian and patriotic sentiment among our young people; with the changed conditions of the world's population bringing to our own shores the foreign missionary problems which we found in distant lands a few years ago, we have great confidence that the churches and patriotic men and women will meet the exigencies of this work and largely increase their contributions during the coming year.

Obituaries.

The American Missionary Association met with a great loss in the untimely and cruel death of Mr. James H. Oliphant in December last. Mr. Oliphant was not only a most valued member of the Executive Committee, but was particularly beloved and honored for his noble traits of character and his earnest Christian spirit.

Mrs. Harriet Foote Milton, who died in Detroit, Mich., October 4, 1907, at the age of sixty-four years, was a graduate of Oberlin College in 1866. Miss Foote was appointed a teacher by the Association in 1868, and located at Albany, Ga. The next year she taught in Beach Institute, in Savannah, Ga. She was married to the Rev. George R. Milton in 1873. Mrs. Milton retained to her latest years her deep interest in the work of the Association and was generous in promoting its work.

Miss Belle S. Burr, after a long and painful illness, died at the home of her cousin, in Whitman, Neb., November 30, 1907. Miss Burr left her Canadian home to become an Association teacher in 1894 at Jonesboro, Tenn. Three years later she was appointed to the Slater Training School at Knoxville, where she taught for seven years. Her last appointment was in Trinity School, Athens, Ala., where she taught two years, and began the third, but was forced to leave on account of illness.

Miss Charlotte M. Steele died from an attack of pneumonia on January 4th. Miss Steele was an accomplished teacher of music. Her first service in the Association was at Orange Park, Fla. Thence she went to Meridian, in October last. Miss Steele was born in Oberlin in 1843, and was graduated in the college class at Oberlin in 1867. She studied music in Leipsic and taught in Oberlin Conservatory of Music; also many years in Mt. Holyoke Seminary.

General Charles H. Howard, whose death we recorded last March, gave much thought and study to the problems of Christian patriotism. He was prominent in the counsel of those who have sought to secure the broadest Christian solution of the perplexing problems that face us as a nation. Immediately upon coming from the South at the close of the Civil War, he identified himself with a broad movement for the Christian education of the Negroes. Among the Indians General Howard was well known and was always accounted their wise and judicious friend. The District Secretaryship of the American Missionary Association of Chicago was ably occupied by General Howard for several years.

Miss Frances M. Andrews, who died on Wednesday, February 5th, received her first appointment in our work in 1867, and, with one or two slight interruptions, has been in the service in several institutions for more than thirty years. Miss Andrews was greatly beloved in the various schools with which she was associated, and her relations at Talladega were so kindly and so universally sympathetic that her death was felt by instructors and teachers alike with great sorrow.

Rev. Joseph Edwin Roy, D.D., was born at Martinsburg, Ohio, February 7, 1827. He was graduated at Knox College, Illinois, in 1848, and from Union Theological Seminary, New York, in 1853. Returning at this time to the West, he took with him a commission from the American Missionary Association to a missionary church in Illinois. In 1855 he was called to the pastorate of Plymouth Church, Chicago, which was then two years old. After a pastorate of five years he accepted a call by the American Missionary Association to a District Secretaryship in the same city, but in a year and a half by a change in national affairs it was mutually agreed that he should accept a transfer to the Home Missionary Society, in which service he continued for eighteen years. In 1878—by mutual arrangements again—Dr. Roy was re-appointed to the American Missionary Association as its Field Superintendent, and under his supervision of seven years some fifty churches were organized. In 1885 Dr. Roy was asked for the second time to take the office of District Secretary at Chicago, which he did, holding it with great usefulness until 1903, when at the age of seventy six years he was made Secretary Emeritus. He continued, however, as his strength would allow, to serve the Association until his very latest years, when he had been practically laid aside by the infirmities of age. Dr. Roy died on Wednesday morning, March 4th, one month advanced in his eighty-second year.

Mrs. Susan Gilbert White, who died in January, was the widow of Prof. George L. White, the organizer and leader of the original Jubilee Singers of Fisk University. Mrs. White was one of the earliest missionaries of the American Missionary Association, having begun her labors in the South, at Beaufort, N. C., in 1863. Mrs. White—as Miss Gilbert—was clerk for Secretary Whipple when she entered the service of the Jubilee Singers. She was a superior woman of strong character and devoted spirit.

Rev. Anthony Peden died at Moncure, N. C., February 6, 1908, after a short illness. Mr. Peden was a faithful and devoted minister in North Carolina during sixteen years, and his sudden death is severely felt by his brethren in the ministry and the people whom he has served.

Dr. Truman H. Backus, President of Packer Collegiate Institute, Brooklyn, who died in April last, was a loss to the American Missionary Association of one its warm friends, who in former years has represented the Association before the public on many occasions. Dr. Backus was a valued member of the Execntive Committee from 1889 to 1905, when his resignation on account of the pressure of other duties was reluctantly received. In 1900, Dr. Backus made an extended tour through the South, visiting various institutions of the Association, upon which he wrote a most appreciative report of the work. His useful life and services will be gratefully remembered.

Rev. George M. Boynton, D.D., of Boston, Mass., died in June last. Dr. Boynton became a member of our Executive Committee in 1876, and at the first meeting he attended was elected its secretary. At that time he was pastor of the Belleville Avenue Church, in Newark, N. J., having among his parishioners Secretary Strieby and Rev. W. H. Ward, D.D., the latter then, as now, a member of the Executive Committee. Dr. Boynton was also for some time a very efficient editor of the AMERICAN MISSIONARY. After his pastorate in Boston he became secretary of the Sunday-school and Publishing Society, which position he held until ill health compelled his withdrawal. We bear our testimony to the loss His death is keenly felt by a large circle of friends.

Mrs. Morrison A. Holmes.—On February 9, 1907, Avery Institute and the American Missionary Association were called to mourn the death of Principal Morrison A. Holmes, who had begun the twenty-first year of his exceptionally successful principalship. During all that time he had the support and efficient helpfulness of Mrs. Holmes, who in no small degree added to the successful administration of the teachers' home. On the third of August last Mrs. Holmes departed this life. Her memory will be cherished by thousands of young people in the South who were in the school during the past twenty years.

Rev. Benjamin A. Imes died at Prairie, Ala, August 5th, aged sixty-one years. Mr. Imes entered the service of the Association as pastor of the Second Congregational Church in Memphis in 1880. He has also served as pastor at Knoxville and at Mobile. He was a graduate of Oberlin College and Oberlin Theological Seminary. Mr. Imes was a man of exceptional ability and of sterling character, and his death is a great loss to his people.

Rev. John F. Davis, pastor of the Congregational churches at Fairchilds, Cliffs and Sanders Creek, Ky., died of typhoid fever May 12, 1908. Mr. Davis was a young man and had served our mountain churches in Tennessee and Kentucky for the past five years

ANNUAL REPORT

OF THE

BUREAU OF WOMAN'S WORK,

FOR THE YEAR ENDING SEPTEMBER 30, 1908.

MISS D. E. EMERSON, SECRETARY.

The Bureau of Woman's Work of the American Missionary Association is privileged to report a year of progress. It can be given only in quick review and summing up of results, but it gives life and action to "mere figures" when they are personified, and stand in their true relation to Christian service.

In revealing the work of women for the field of the American Missionary Association the past year there comes into our vision first the local missionary society, the "auxiliary." We see it in its varied forms of work; about its table in mission study, packing missionary boxes, listening to some stirring message straight from the field, speaking one to another in the dear old missionary hymns, praying in unison, "Thy Kingdom Come." Mutual interest in the work of missions has brought the women of the church together in effective co-operation.

Next in review comes the Woman's State Organization with its band of State officers, noble, untiring missionary leaders. With what zeal they pass on the missionary literature, plan neighborhood and conference meetings, and stir up the pure minds of the auxiliaries to remember the State "Plan of Work" for the year. Their activity reveals the need of "tools," and turning to the National Society they plead for mite boxes, pictures, programs, speakers, literature, seeking every known and unknown means to make the auxiliary larger in membership, and more efficient in service.

And then comes the Federation of State Organizations with its large-hearted, broad-visioned President, spending and being spent in unifying and strengthening the State Unions and helping them to a fuller realization of their mission.

We see also a host of warm-hearted individual contributors whose unnamed gifts have dropped silently into the treasury for a noble work.

But the vision is not ended, for it includes many, very many, earnest women missionaries "at the front," who often in weariness and in the night hours, have penned the letters that have made the work vivid at the missionary meeting.

All these working together and in delightful accord with the American Missionary Association enable us to report as the financial result of the year: Contributions received through State Organizations $30,111.29. Additional from Local Societies sent directly to the field or to the American Missionary Association treasury, $3,124.57. Total, $33,235.86. This is the largest amount yet contributed through Women's Organizations to the work of the American Missionary Association. We are glad and grateful for this substantial help through Woman's organized work for missions.

One of the encouragements is that the gain this year is in actual contributions by the missionary societies of women. The American Missionary Association classifies its receipts, whether received through Women's State Organizations or not, under the several headings, Church Collections, Sunday Schools, Christian Endeavor, Women's Societies, and Individuals, so that while we credit to Women's Organizations all contributions they remit, the classification reveals the source of the gifts. We count increased help from Women's Societies an encouragement because we all recognize that Women's Organized Work is chiefly for the women of the church and congregation, to extend and strengthen the Woman's Society of the church. Here is the greatest need and here the opportunity for largest influence. We do not undervalue the work for children; the training of the young to missionary spirit and benevolence is most essential. Much other valuable service is given also, in missionary instruction in Sunday Schools, etc., but mainly such service is in behalf of the missionary standard of the Sunday School, and not as a distinct part of the Woman's Organization. So we look upon the evidence of growth in Women's Societies, as one of the best signs of progress.

Experience has shown clearly that it is in the local society, the auxiliary, that the most important work is done in laying the foundation of knowledge of the whole field of missions, and what the work involves financially and otherwise for each of the National Societies having it in charge. Until an auxiliary understands this, it cannot fully appreciate the responsibility of the Woman's State Organization, its Plan of Work and the importance of facilitating that plan by contributing regularly, liberally, and through the treasury of the State Organization. The amount that a State Organization pledges to raise for the American Missionary Association is dependent—has to be dependent—upon contributions from local auxiliaries. Loyalty of the auxiliary, therefore, to the State Union and its Plan of Work is one of the important features of success.

Intelligence of the local auxiliary as to the work and relative requirements of each National Society, influences the amount of contribution; thus intelligence is also an important feature of success. A local auxiliary may give fifty or seventy-five dollars more or less, through the State Organization having only a general knowledge that it will be used for missions in this country. Perhaps the sum looks large to the auxiliary, and there is a feeling that it has done its part. But if you look at missionary work in its several divisions under each of the National Societies, and think of the amount from your offering that will reach this or that division of the field when apportioned by your State Union, then how the amount will dwindle, and what a small proportion perchance may come to the American Missionary Association for such a great work as this, which includes the Negro race, the Southern Mountaineers, the Indians and Eskimo, the Porto Ricans, the Chinese and Japanese on the Pacific coast and Hawaii. It is definite, and accurate knowledge of the missionary field in its several divisions, what there is to do and what it costs to do it, that enables a local society to do its utmost.

The advance in intelligence and intelligent contributions gives us all courage to work on and work harder than ever before. Sincerely appreciating the steady growth in contributions we yet realize that $33,235.86 through Women's Organizations for this A. M. A. missionary work is not an ideal amount; $50,000 is probably a reasonable standard for this portion of the missionary field, and this amount we believe will in the near future be raised for A. M. A. missions so extensive, so important and urgent. We can reach it by annual advance. The new year just opened is the nearest future. Let us purpose and work to cover the largest possible distance toward this standard; $50,000 through Woman's Work for A. M. A. missions.

The outlook for the coming year is hopeful. Text Books for mission study are in quite general use and demand. The Interdenominational Text Book on Home Missions for 1908-09, "The Call of the Waters," is a study of the development of this country as civilization has pushed forward ever making a new frontier. In connection with this the field of the American Missionary Association can be included in a study of early and later Indian conditions; the place and influence of the Negroes as slaves and freemen; the isolation, deterioration and present uplift of the Southern Mountaineers, and in missions among Orientals whose coming to the Pacific coast affects conditions there.

The book is intended only as a suggestive outline to be filled in by research and historical study.

As an aid to this, and also for independent use, the American Missionary Association has prepared a program on the Indians; also a Text Book will soon be issued on conditions and work among the Negro race, and the Southern Mountaineers.

Women's local missionary societies following after methods adopted in Bible Schools, have begun to establish Home Departments of the local auxiliary. This is an important movement which can but result in bringing into the active membership a larger proportion of women members of the churches. The American Missionary Association furnishes new and interesting leaflets, illustrated sketches of mission fields, for free distribution in the Home Department of Women's Societies. Through the Woman's Bureau we will also take individual names of such members, to whom the field letters may be sent.

A missionary representative is assigned to any society or group of societies or State Union for the amount of support, $400. Auxiliaries combining in such support receive letters from the mission field. The system of shares is continued by which any society contributing $25 may have a part in the support of some field missionary and receive her letters. For scholarships of $100 and $50 pupils are selected and contributors informed of their progress. The development of Domestic Science in industrial departments of many of our schools affords an interesting work for those who wish to assign their contributions thus. Exigencies are continually arising in connection with our schools and other missions in which unforeseen expense is launched upon the A. M. A. treasury, and these exigencies are named when contributors ask us to designate their money where most needed.

We plan thus a variety of definite work for those who find it necessary to the raising of funds. But all who can contribute straight, leaving the Association free in its application of the money to any part of the field, do much toward lightening burdens and facilitating the missionary work.

The kind and variety of work in the A. M. A. field is known and appreciated. The missionaries of the Association in the year just closed included four hundred and eighty-four women workers, faithful and self-sacrificing, using time and strength in the battle we are waging against ignorance and iniquity. Your interest, prayers, contributions, give support and courage. It is a hard battle and continuous in which we sometimes meet temporary defeat, but are raised up again to win success. We cannot do our work either on the mission field or in the home churches except under the ablest leader, and we not infrequently brace ourselves with a stanza from that good old hymn of Luther's in Carlisle's version:

Through our own force we nothing can,
Straight were we lost forever;
But for us fights the proper Man,
By God sent to deliver.
Ask ye who this may be?
Christ Jesus named is He.
Of Sabaoth the Lord;
Sole God to be adored;
'Tis He must win the battle.

In this great missionary undertaking we are indeed "workers together with God."

AUDITORS' CERTIFICATE.

We have employed Frederick C. Manvel, Certified Public Accountant of the State of New York, to examine the books and accounts of H. W. Hubbard, Treasurer of The American Missionary Association, for the year ending September 30th, 1908, and herewith submit his statement of the results of his work as a part of our report.

We have also made a careful examination of all bonds and other securities held by the Association and find the same to agree with the records in the books and balance sheet of same date.

The Treasurer's Bond was submitted to us and found to be in order.

EDWIN H. BAKER,
JOHN E. LEECH,
Auditors.

New York, October 9, 1908.

MR. EDWIN H. BAKER, } Auditors.
MR. JOHN E. LEECH, }

New York, October 9th, 1908.

GENTLEMEN:

I hereby report that I have made the customary audit of the accounts of the Treasurer of the AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION for the fiscal year ended September 30th, 1908.

The clerical accuracy of the book-keeping has been proven by monthly examinations of the footings and comparisons of the cancelled checks with the cash book entries and verification of the figures in the monthly statements and reports. The detailed accounts have been carefully kept and the same system and methods which have been noted and commended in former reports have been maintained.

Certificates of balances to the credit of the Association have been obtained from the several Trust Companies and Banks and found to be in accordance with the Treasurer's Books.

I have verified the figures in the Trial Balance of the General Ledger, and the statement of the Resources in the general Balance Sheet has been verified by a personal examination of the securities by the Committee, in which I assisted.

The current receipts of the year have exceeded the payments by the amount of $8,033.26, which, deducted from the debit balance in the Current Fund account, $54,951.18 brought over from last year, makes the debit balance at the close of this year in this account $46,917.92.

As the result of this audit I am able to report that I have found the records of the transactions of the year correctly entered, the balances as stated and the books and papers in good order and condition.

Respectfully yours,
FREDERICK C. MANVEL,
Certified Public Accountant of State of New York.

BRIEF HISTORY.

The American Missionary Association was formed in 1846, its distinctive characteristic being freedom from all complicity with slavery and caste.

The object as stated in its constitution is, "To conduct Christian missionary and educational operations, and diffuse a knowledge of the Holy Scriptures in our own and other countries which are destitute of them, or which present open and urgent fields of effort."

It began its work in Foreign Missions in Africa, Siam, Sandwich Islands, West Indies; and its work in our own country, in the Western States and among the Indians.

In 1848, it began work in the South among whites and blacks, although attended with great opposition and danger.

In 1852, it undertook to reach the Chinese in California, the plans ripening in 1870 to successful work.

In 1861, during the civil war, it began the enlargement of work in the South, which has been marked by steady progress and success.

In 1882, it transferred its Foreign Missions and enlarged its Indian work by receiving the Indian Missions of the American Board. In 1891 it established a mission in Alaska.

REPORT OF THE EASTERN DISTRICT FOR 1907-08.

REV. GEORGE H. GUTTERSON, District Secretary.

The record of work in the Eastern District for the year just ended, as far as it can be expressed by statistics, is as follows:

Number of churches visited during the year	79
Of these 25 were visited for the first time.
Number of Conferences visited	3
" Women's Meetings attended	5
" Men's Clubs attended	4
" other Meetings attended	4
" addresses made before C. E. Soc	4
" " " " S. S.	27
Total number of addresses	152
Number of letters written	6,811
Leaflets sent out	34,172
Collection envelopes sent out	27,726
Postals sent out	855
Callers received	2,893
Invitations received	216

During the year a series of meetings, called the Homeland Rallies, was undertaken in a number of towns in Massachusetts. Representatives of all the Home Missionary Societies united in conducting these meetings. Services were usually held both afternoon and evening, the attendance, though not large, was enthusiastic and encouraging.

An encouraging feature in the work of securing larger gifts from the churches for all the missionary boards is to be found in the Systematic Benevolence Plan, which is under operation in all of the New England states. Massachusetts and New Hampshire probably made the most thorough beginning of all the states in this new plan.

The General Committee furnishes the amount required for the several societies, and each local conference working with the State Committee, undertakes to make the apportionment to each state. This is probably the most difficult part of the problem. The basis for apportionment has been either the yearly home expenses of the church, or the total of its annual gifts to the several societies. Taking these figures to start with, the various conferences, knowing the condition of each with their burdens and possibilities, recommend the amount that, in their judgment, should be raised.

The new plan is certainly businesslike, and, if it can be universally adopted, ought to result not only in larger gifts for missionary work of the denomination but also in an increased feeling of brotherhood among the churches themselves.

The work of the Association has been greatly helped during this year by the presence of Miss Jennie L. Blowers, a teacher in Porto Rico, now back on the Island. Her campaign was in Maine chiefly. We have, also, been helped by our efficient and esteemed Superintendent of Southern Church Work, Rev. George W. Moore, D.D. His work was in the western part of Massachusetts, where he visited most of the churches, attended associations and roused great interest in the work. As in years gone by so in this, we have availed ourselves of the aid of Rev. Wm. N. DeBerry, of Springfield, Mass., who is always welcome in the churches.

The department of slides has been reconstructed and increased, so that now we have sets of slides on all forms of the work. These have been catalogued under various topics. There is an increasing demand for these slides.

Some few years ago an attractive Library was prepared, containing books on the different phases of the work of the Association. This Library has been on its travels among the rural districts of Massachusetts chiefly, with great acceptance to all who have had the use of it. It will be kept in constant use.

NATIONAL FEDERATION OF WOMAN'S CONGREGATIONAL STATE HOME MISSIONARY ORGANIZATIONS.

MRS. B. W. FIRMAN.

The third Annual Meeting of the Federation was held in Pittsfield, Massachusetts, May 13-14, 1908. During the year one of the most important events has been the joining with women of other denominations in the formation of an Interdenominational Council of Women for Home Missions. This bids fair to become an important factor in the missionary endeavors for our land. We have also had a part in the Home Mission Study Conferences at Northfield, Massachusetts, and at Winona Lake, Indiana. We shall be actively represented in these next summer. Our study book for the year is "The Call of the Waters." It is hoped that our Congregational women and young people will get a new idea of the frontier and feel a greater responsibility for all of our country. Congregational Work continues to graciously give the Federation one of its pages. We hope at an early date to join in the new Homeland Magazine.

In connection with the Annual Meeting of the American Missionary Association in Galesburg, Ill., a special meeting of the Federation was held which proved helpful in its results.

The president has spoken in fifteen states during the year.

The officers of the Federation for the ensuing year are: President, Mrs. B. W. Firman, 1012 Iowa Street, Oak Park, Illinois; Vice-Presidents, Mrs. James L. Hill, Salem, Mass.; Mrs. F. Eggert, Portland, Ore.; Mrs. H. B. Wey, Atlanta, Ga.; Secretary, Mrs. G. H. Schneider, 919 Warren Avenue, Chicago, Ill.; Treasurer, Mrs. H. A. Flint, 604 Willis Avenue, Syracuse, N. Y.

Following is a list of the organizations now federated: Alabama, California (Northern), California (Southern), Colorado, Connecticut, North Dakota, South Dakota, Florida (including Georgia Mission Circle), Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Louisiana, Massachusetts and Rhode Island, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, Oklahoma, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Tennessee, Utah, Vermont, Washington, Wisconsin.

Reverence for Personality.

By Rev. H. C. King, D.D.

Delivered at the Annual Meeting, Galesburg, Illinois, October 20, 1908.

Revelation 3:20.—"Behold, I stand at the door and knock: if any man hear my voice and open the door, I will come in to him, and sup with him, and he with me."

John 8:6.—"But Jesus stooped down and with his finger wrote on the ground."

The text in Revelation states the basic principle in all God's treatment of men, and in all the personal relations of men with men. At the door of human personality even the Christ stands and knocks; he will not force the door.

The incident in John illustrates in a single case, the response of Jesus to this basic and eternal principle of reverence for the person. For one who has ever felt the intolerable sense of shame that arises when he has been an unwilling spectator of the needless public humiliation and breaking down of the self-respect of a servant, a child, a wife or a fellow-man, it is hardly possible to misinterpret this action of Jesus as he stoops down and writes upon the ground. He would not share, though unwillingly, in the cruel, brutal, needless, humiliation of even a sinful woman, by adding to her load of shame, as much as the weight of his pitying look. She is no thing that she should be thus bandied about of men, but a person, herself made in the image of the Eternal God. He cannot bear that the sanctities of the inner person should be thus brutally laid open to the brazen gaze of men. And the conduct here ascribed to Christ in this interpolated incident in the Gospel of John—the present position of which no critic defends, but the inimitable truth of which none denies—is characteristic of his attitude throughout his ministry. As I have elsewhere said, "Jesus seems constantly to be standing with a kind of moral shudder between the spirit of contempt in the Pharisees and Sadducees, and the outraged personality of the common people, even of the publicans and sinners; he feels the contempt even for these least as a blow in his own face."

Now, the principle so illustrated in the spirit and ministry of Christ, we may not forget, is a fundamental, moral principle. For there must be for every man, in Howison's language, "that recognition and reverence of the personal initiative of other minds which is at once the sign and the test of the true person." It is this principle which Kant affirms in his Practical Imperative: "So act as to treat humanity, whether in thine own person or in that of any other, in every case as an end withal, never as a means only."

It is this same sense of reverence for personality to which Hegel exhorts, and which Lotze insists has been the guiding principle in all the moral development of the race. It is blindness to it, too, of which Professor James writes so piquantly in his essay "On a Certain Blindness in Human Nature." The principle of reverence for personality is fundamental and inescapable.

At the same time it may not be forgotten that it is only another way of stating Christianity's own fundamental assumption of the essential and inestimable worth of man. In Harnack's language, "Jesus Christ was the first to bring the value of every human soul to light, and what he did no one can any more undo." And Wundt adds, to the same purport, "Humanity in this highest sense was brought into the world by Christianity. Although many of the features of Christianity have here also been anticipated in Judaism, still the Jewish virtue of compassion never shook off the chains of tribal feeling, while Christianity enjoins the love of all mankind as a duty which stands above all other duties, excepting only those toward God himself."

This is "the enthusiasm of humanity" of which Ecce Homo speaks: "Being a reverence for human beings as such, and not for the good qualities they may exhibit, it embraces the bad as well as the good, and as it contemplates human beings in their ideal—that is, in what they might be—it desires not the apparent, but the real and highest welfare of each; lastly, it includes the person himself who feels it, and loving self, too, only in the ideal, differs as much as possible from selfishness, being associated with self-respect, humility, and independence, as selfishness is allied with self-contempt, with arrogance and with vanity."

Here, then, in this principle of reverence for the person as a person, we have both a fundamental moral principle, and one belonging to the very essence of Christianity. We have, thus, we may be sure, one of the inescapable laws of life, the supreme condition, indeed, of fine personal relations; and that means the supreme condition of character, influence and happiness. To fail here, we may not forget, is to fail at the center of life, to sap our best endeavors, to cut ourselves off as individuals, as a nation, as a civilization, from the highest achievement. For the supreme test of individual, or nation, or civilization, is this test of reverence for the person as such, our own and others.

leads me to say, that no greater problem can confront us in our national life than the question, whether we are to be true, as individuals and as a nation, to this principle of reverence for personality as such. And the spirit of reverence has its severest test in the relation of race to race, and most of all in the relations of blacks and whites. The very field of the American Missionary Association, thus, almost compels my theme. No more difficult, no more delicate, no more vital problem confronts the American people than the problem of the true solution of the relation of race to race in this nation. And in these race relations we may be perfectly certain that no evasion, no compromise, no merely mechanical method, can give us peace at last. Nothing less than genuine loyalty to this one deep-going, far-reaching, fructifying principle of reverence for the person can solve our problem, or put us in the way of solving it. And reverence for the person involves, first, genuine self-respect; second, a like genuine respect for the liberty of others; and, third, respect for the inner worth and personality of others.

No more serious blow, in the first place, can be given to the growth of child, or man, or race, than to break down self-respect. This insures, in each case alike, lack of self-control, without which no worthy achievement along any line is possible. The man who has no reverence for his God-intended destiny, who has no belief that he is called to an "imperishable work in the world," will gird himself to no high task. The only measure of other men one possesses is himself. He can interpret the Golden Rule itself, and the measure of his obligation to others, only in terms of his own claim on life. To fail to be true to that divine calling implied in one's own individuality—to "renounce one's right as a living soul" to the exploitation of even one's dearest friends, is to surrender the very basis of character.

Ultimately, too, a man's sole gift to men or to God is himself; if he does not value that, but falls into imitation of others, he has no contribution to make. For as a great German philosopher has naively suggested, if two of us are just alike, one of us can be spared. In Browning's poem of "The Boy and the Angel," you will remember that even the archangel could not take the boy's place. "I miss," God said, "I miss my little human praise." The greatest discovery of life, thus, for man or for race, next to the discovery of God—and the two discoveries are likely to be coincident—is finding oneself,—what Emerson calls one's "net experience." And in loyalty to this true self, lies one's chief happiness, too. It is vain, therefore, to expect character, influence, or happiness in either a man or a race without basic self-respect, And no man can keep a genuine self-respect, it must be added, while he is seeking to degrade others. As Booker Washington has put it,

"We are fast learning in every part of America, that one man cannot hold another man down in the ditch without remaining in the ditch with him."

Nor, in the second place, is it possible to keep one's own character without fundamental respect for the liberty of others. We can never escape the truth of Fichte's old contention, that he becomes a slave who treats another as a slave. Character deteriorates inevitably and steadily wherever the attitude of simple domination—the spirit of the "boss"—comes in. There is nothing in the universe of God so damning as this bossing spirit of contempt. We are but feebly alive to its corroding power upon the boss himself—whether man or race. Arbitrary power is perilous to the character of him who exercises it. It was even more imperative for the moral life of Georgia, that the chain gang be abolished, than for the direct victims of the system. The system contradicted the spirit essential to any even decent civilization.

Equally impossible is it, to be truly influential with others—to make a good or useful child or man or people, without that respect for their liberty, that means the calling out of their own will—the explicit eliciting of their purpose. There is no such thing as laying character upon men from without. Like rest, it cannot be pasted upon a man; it must be an active achievement. We are following an utterly abandoned psychology and pedagogy, if we dream of so lifting, even into serviceableness, any child or man or people. You canot have intelligent help without developing intelligence, and you cannot have trustworthy help without developing trustworthiness, and that means eliciting the will.

And, once more, there is thrust on every thoughtful student of civilization, and of the evolution of refining personal relations, the conviction that the very flower of character is to be found in a delicate recognition of the inestimable value and sacredness of the individual person. Wherever that respect for the person is replaced in any degree by the willingness to use the person as a thing, as means only, and not as an end in itself; wherever the spirit of contempt is allowed to come in—there character deteriorates; there all true influence over others is surrendered; there all the happiness of really fine personal relations has vanished. The cynic can be neither a good man, nor a good leader, nor a happy human being. Bishop Brent thus illustrates the lack of this spirit of reverence for the person: "The mistress of a household, on coming downstairs one morning was greeted by her maid, who was dusting in the hall, with a 'Good morning,' and 'Do you know, Mrs. Z—, that I have been with you five years to-day?' 'Have you?' was the response, 'You have left some dust on that chair.' The mistress boasted doubtless that she had 'reminded her servant of her place.' No further comment is needed. The maid thought herself to be a person, but was reminded that she was a thing."

Let us, then, make it forever clear to ourselves that, whether we are thinking of our own growth, or of any possible help of others, we cannot evade or escape the reach of this principle of reverence for the person, any more than we may escape the omnipresence of God. We may not heedlessly set aside the supreme moral counsel of the race, and not suffer the consequences. We cannot repudiate the reverent spirit and method of Jesus for the contempt of the Pharisees and remain truly Christian.

It is such considerations as these, therefore, that lead me to say that, whether as individuals or as a nation, no problem confronts us so serious, as just this of our inner spirit of reverence; and we cannot shirk the fact, that the test of that spirit is found as nowhere else in the relations of the white and black races. We may not deny the gravity of the issue. Both whites and blacks, north and south, are here on trial as nowhere else. Are we together to be equal to the emergency? Dare we attempt soberly, thoughtfully, and with all charity, to apply this great principle of reverence for the person to the relations of the two races?

1.—SELF-RESPECT.

First of all, then, there must be self-respect on both sides. The Negro must respect himself and his race. All the circumstances of his history have made imitation of the whites more easy and natural, and yet his future demands self-reverence as nothing else. Let him hear Emerson saying, "Trust thyself; every heart vibrates to that iron string." And let him say with Emerson, though in no spirit of shallow, unteachable conceit, "We will walk on our own feet; we will work with our own hands; we will speak our own mind." Let him be sure of the truth of Tennyson's golden words,

> "Self-knowledge, self-reverence, self-control,
> These three alone lead life to sovereign power."

Let him take to heart Whitman's direct exhortation to him, "Commence to-day to inure yourself to pluck, reality, self-esteem, definiteness, elevatedness."

I am glad that the Colored National Baptist Association approved the movement to supply Negro children with well-formed Negro dolls. As Collier's says: "There is more involved than appears on the surface in encouraging little Negro girls to clasp in their arms pretty replicas of themselves. The white race does not monopolize beauty or lovableness, and it will be a happier day for all when this is realized."

And self-respect requires, first of all, that a man should really deserve respect, that he should know that he has a calling of his own to fulfil, and means to have self-control enough to fulfil it, that he should not fail in those conditions which give the qualities of character or influence, whether his achievement is recognized or not. But if he fulfil the conditions of self-respect, he can hardly fail of winning ultimately the respect of others. The Negro has the hard task, which confronts every growing man and every developing race, to make himself capable, valuable, indispensable, capable of self-support, and of work that needs doing; having a valuable individual and racial contribution to make; then, with his marked individuality, finally demonstrating that the nation cannot spare him, that his unique contribution is indispensable to the perfected national life.

All this means that the Negro must know himself, must come to consciousness, find himself, see his own individuality, his own possible contribution to the race and to the life and work of the world, and believe in the value of that for which it is given him to stand. He must not allow himself to be betrayed into a mere imitation of the whites, that must necessarily shut him out from his own true self and service. He cannot afford, the nation cannot afford, that he should be a mere echo of the whites. What Herrmann says of the individual, holds for the race: "Religious tradition is indispensable for us. But it helps us only if it leads us on to listen to what God says to ourselves." Let the Negro, then, first of all, believe in himself; let him develop—what some of his wisest leaders seem genuinely to have—real race pride, and pride in association with his race. Let him take pride in his race's marked individuality—for no race is more individual—in its unique endowments and possibilities. Elaborate deductions of Negro music from other music have been attempted; but the very fact that the deduction has to be so labored and extended, indicates that the Negro has at least a marked and peculiar musical endowment. It would be an immense pity to lose out of our national life the singularly appealing power of the genuine Negro melodies. Both whites and blacks may well remember, too, that practically the only original folk-lore the nation has, is Negro folk-lore, though it has been interpreted to us by a southern white. And who would willingly let die the delicate quaintness of humor and imagination of "Uncle Remus" and "Daddy Jack"? Both whites and blacks may be reminded, also, that, as a great philosopher has pointed out, the qualities that have made the Anglo-Saxon so often dominant are not altogether enviable qualities; they have their distinctly ungenerous, hard, selfish, domineering side, that any race may well avoid. The so-called "John Bull attitude" the Negro need not envy. As contrasted with this, the pure Negro seems often to have a temperamental kindliness of disposition, a good-nature, a readiness to make the most of a situation, and to find none insufferable, that, while it may often be an obstacle to advancement, has a great gift to make to the content and happiness of life. It is possible to make life quite too strenuous, to live so completely in the future, as never really to live in the present—to take no enjoyment in life as it passes. And this is the sure danger of the American rush. The Negro's tendency to content has in it, thus, a great element of strength, and much suggestion for an over-enterprising people that has become frantic in its haste.

All these characteristics of the Negro are connected with his unusual emotional endowment. And the whites may well be on their guard against that "certain blindness in human beings," which should keep them from at least some imaginative appreciation of the powers of insight, revelation, and enjoyment involved in such emotional capacities. Dangers, this immense emotional endowment surely has; but let one measure its worth by remembering that the sense of reality itself roots in feeling, and by recalling the difference between the hours in which life seems cold and dead, and those in which in warmth of feeling his being tingles with the sense of life's meaning.

And we may not forget, what Stanley Hall and Washington have both recalled—the positive genius which the Negro seems to have for religion. His natural religious endowment is probably unsurpassed by that of any race, unless it be the Jewish. And the modern Jew is hardly his rival here. That his religious capacity needs much intelligent direction is undoubted, but quite unwonted religious capacity he certainly has. He is a natural seer, and the more utilitarian the triumphs of the race, the less it can spare the Negro, with his undying sense of another world and another life and of the presence of God in the world.

I have attempted no exhaustive analysis of the Negro mind; I only suggest that such qualities as these may well make the decriers of the Negro hesitate, and give to the Negro himself a just race pride. The very fact that he naturally excites such race antipathy, indicates that he has a rarely marked race individuality, and that of itself is promise, on the one hand, of much compensation for himself, and, on the other, of power to render an indispensable service to mankind. The Negro, then, must relentlessly deny himself the weakening luxury of self-pity, great as the temptations to it are. He may justly respect himself and take pride in his race. For I cannot doubt that President Stanley Hall is abundantly justified when he says that if the Negro can be made to accept without "corroding self-pity, his present situation, prejudice and all, hard as it is, take his stand squarely upon the feet of his race, respect its unique gifts, develop all its possibilities, make himself the best possible black man and not desire to be a brunette imitation of the Caucasian, he will in coming generations fill a place of great importance and of pride both to himself and to us in the future of the republic."

And just because the Negro respects himself, and for his own sake, he will not press the demand or make a bitter struggle for so-called social equality. (I say "so-called" social equality, for real social equality is giving to all equal opportunities of social development and enjoyment, not at all necessarily prescribing just what associates any should have.) No one could ask that this point should be put more admirably than that clear-sighted Negro, Professor Kelly Miller, has put it. He says the "Negro's sense of self-respect effectively forbids forcing himself upon any unwelcome association. Household intercourse and domestic familiarity are essentially questions of personal privilege. . . . The Negro is building up his own society based upon character, culture, and the nice amenities of life, and can find ample satisfaction within the limits of his own race. . . . But the Negro ought not to be expected to accept that interpretation of social equality which would rob him of political and civil rights as well as of educational and industrial opportunity. . . . The Negro and the white man in this country must live together for all time which we can foresee. They must mingle in business and in public life. All their relations should be characterized by mutual respect, courtesy, and good will. In all purely personal and social matters let each, if he will, go unto his own company." Professor Miller is here only claiming for his own people the attitude which the Independent recommends to the Jews: "Jews can make their own social world like other people, and there are ways in plenty to meet others socially if they want to, even though certain clubs and resorts exclude them. Where they are not wanted they will not want to go. Men and women must choose their own company, and not feel hurt if kissing goes by favor."

Like a self-respecting man, then, who does not wish to go where he is not wanted, the Negro may well remember that he has in good degree the self-sufficiency that belongs to any race. He is not to be shut out of life nor from any of the best things of life simply because he is shut away from the whites. In no bitter and in no exclusive spirit, let him say to himself, "As truly as any race, my race can be self-sufficient." For his own sake, at present at least, this probably means that it is wiser and more self-respecting not to fight separate schools, separate cars, etc., provided only that the accommodations are the same, and that the separation of the races is truly maintained, in that the schools and cars of the blacks are not made a dumping ground for the less desirable whites. Justice the Negro wants, not necessarily social mixing.

And I wonder sometimes if the providential meaning of this seemingly hard forcing of the black back upon himself may not be that the nation is not to be allowed to lose the irreplaceable gifts of this truly gifted people, as it has already too often wastefully thrown away so many of the peculiar gifts of incoming immigrants.

Above all, the Negro has the very difficult task of not allowing himself to be betrayed, even by injustice, into bitterness, resentment, suspicion and hatred. The only mortal wound a man's enemy can give him is to provoke him into an unworthy spirit, to tempt him to lower himself to the level of the attack made upon him. I do not say that I should be equal to the demand made upon the Negro, but, nevertheless, as long as moral principles abide, and a man's empire is his own spirit, so long the only way out of such a situation as that in which the Negro finds himself—the only complete triumph—is to hold himself above it, to keep sweet, to grow by moral victory, to gain the conquest of that meekness that inherits even the earth,—maintaining oneself at one's best even under provocation. And so the race's greatest leaders have borne themselves. For, in another's words, "No one long wants to oppose the man whom opposition never embitters. But the man who tries to overcome opposition by showing that he resents it, and by hurling himself against it, only builds it up the stronger. Keeping sweet in spite of opposition is never a sign of amiable weakness; only the strongest can do it. Therefore such keeping sweet is an irresistible attack on the opposition, and will convert it to friendliness or agreement, if anything can."

And in this difficult problem of the relation of the black and white races, the white, too, must keep his self-respect. Undoubtedly with the many differences between individuals and races, the feeling of uncongeniality must often be present, sometimes in such marked degree that some kinds of association, at least, are better not attempted. But even then, the feeling is not one to be proud of, and one needs to recognize a certain limitation and blindness in himself, that prevents him from entering with sympathetic understanding into the life and thought of the other man or race, and finding some larger basis of agreement. While, then, we recognize race antipathy as a fact, with a measure of justification, we may not justify it as a final good, but rather, in the language of a far-sighted southern writer, see it as one of the greatest present obstacles to the progress of the human race. "The great field for humanitarianism in the future—for that matter the one great direction of true civilization—is not the field of mere religious propaganda, but the adjustment of race differences. The task is to find honorable and peaceful ways of lessening the dislike that most races of men have for other races—to find ways of living and working together in a world over which no one race can rule in our stage of civilization, now long past the tribal organization. And this must be done without national decay. Yet it was out of mere tribal organization that national strength and race strength originally came." With some shamefacedness, therefore, though race antipathy is closely connected with a vigorous race consciousness, we may recognize as a natural fact to be taken account of, the often marked general uncongeniality of the white and black races, showing itself in very different ways in different people. It is not wise for any of us to ignore the fact, nor unnecessarily to rasp this feeling of uncongeniality in others.

But no feeling of uncongeniality can justify essential injustice, and the white cannot keep his own self-respect, however brilliantly he may argue, if he refuses complete justice to the Negro, or refuses obedience to the finer fundamental moral and Christian principle of reverence for the person. And any attempt to deny that the Negro belongs to the human race, and has all the rights of a person, simply proclaims the denier hopelessly belated, and exposes him to the just scorn of all men, whatever his pretensions. There is not the slightest room for argument at that point. And that there are still a few brutal men who can so talk is only a sign of the mortal wound that slavery of the black gave to the white. The enslaver cannot easily escape the curse of slavery, in its bitter blinding reaction on his own inner spirit. The dark inheritance does not belong to the black alone. The whole national life still suffers and must long suffer from it.

To preserve his own self-respect, therefore, the white man will be scrupulously fair, never denying the Negro his fair and equal chance, his chance for all the development of which he is capable. And, if only in answer to the instinct of self-preservation, he will not forget that such opportunity of self-development is necessary to preserve the Negro's self-respect, and that the nation cannot break down the Negro's self-respect and not sap, at the same time, his power of self-control. And there is nothing in all this dark and difficult problem that both races require so much as strenuous self-control. And there is to-day no folly so stupendous and so unforgivable as that the race that counts itself superior, should show lack of self-control exactly at this point of the relation of the races. The great proof of sanity and of evolution above the animal is power of self-control. Outrage provokes outrage; violence provokes violence, and cannot set its own limits. And we are naturally now seeing the same treatment applied by tobacco and cotton white-cappers to whites, whose acts are in any way not approved, as was formerly reserved for blacks. This, too, is a part of slavery's own curse; but it ought not much longer to keep us blind to Kant's great saying, "If law ceases, all worth of human life on earth ceases too." Here the interests of the two races are bound up indissolubly together. Neither race has any option. Just as at Atlanta in the riot, so always and everywhere, the leaders of the two races must consult together, and work together in mutual understanding and mutual respect for the uplifting of all. The steps that have to be taken in the development of the social consciousness anywhere, here too must hold. Such consultation and work together are inevitable, whether we like it or not, if our national life is to be preserved. They are just as certainly desirable, even if not forced. And they are indispensable, if either race is to come to its best.

II.—Respect for the Liberty of Others.

And in this problem of the relation of the races, we must respect throughout the liberty of the other man. We cannot force the attitude of the other anywhere, with gain, even if it were possible. The only real and permanent gain is in winning his will to the right attitude. Northerner and southerner alike must try, therefore, charitably, thoughtfully, to get the other's point of view—to recognize the sincere efforts on either side, to help in this difficult problem, and to seek all possible co-operation. Doubtless both have much to learn from each other. I often suspect that abstractly the northerner is more nearly right in his theory as to relation to the Negro; the southerner more nearly right in his individual concrete friendliness. It has been, for example, so difficult for capital, even with high aims, to get the exactly right cue in relation to labor, when only whites—and often those of high quality—are involved, that it would not be strange that, even with the best intentions, those close to the Negro problem should not see quite clearly the delicacy of the principle involved. On the other hand, the actual patient, long-continued friendliness may be all too lacking in the accurate theorist. The instinctive feeling of the southern white as to so-called social equality, may be connected with earnest desire to be absolutely just and fair to the Negro. And, even when we do not sympathize with the feeling, it is essential that we should not confuse the issues, in our judgment of another. Just as surely the northerner's instinctive recognition of worth in the black, even if socially expressed, intends no injustice to other whites. On both sides there must be liberty, and frank recognition of the other's liberty.

And just as certainly must all the whites respect the liberty of the blacks. Nothing but a weak-willed child without character can be the product of a steady policy of domination, never calling out the child's own will, giving him no chance to use his will. In this difficult problem of the relation of the races, we need to be reminded again of that far-reaching principle of Patterson DuBois that I have so often quoted, that the true father's attitude is never "I will conquer that child whatever it costs him," but "I will help that child to conquer himself, whatever it costs me." And the more paternal either north or south feels called to make the relation to the Negro, the less may it forget that the attitude of mere domination is not only impossible physically, it is even more impossible morally. The one thing that the nation cannot afford to do is to keep the Negro in leading strings, even if it could. For its own salvation, the nation must rather aim, at any possible expense, to bring the Negro forward as rapidly as may be to self-knowledge, self-reverence, self-control, that the Negro race may cease to be a menace or a problem, and become as a whole what it already is in part, a constituent, helpful element of the national life. Let us not repeat with the Negro the bitter mistake which Jane Addams reminds us we have so often made with the immigrant—the failing to see his worth, to take the real gift which he brings, to enlist his love and loyalty for the nation, but on the contrary even stirring his hatred and resentment.

III.—Respect for the Person.

And right race relations involve, also, reverence for the value and sacredness of the individual person. This highest development, this finest flower of civilization and individual development, it has been often complained the Negro peculiarly lacks. And north and south, we have tried to punish this lack of reverence for the person in the Negro with immediate, lawless, furious revenge. Even if the charge against the Negro were fully admitted, has the method proved effective? Can it ever, for any age, or any child, or any man, or any people, possibly be effective? Rather are we not cultivating with remorseless inevitableness great harvests of the very spirit we are seeking to root out. In our supposed superiority we violate the personality hardly less ruthlessly or less revoltingly than the brutal criminal we would punish. We sow to the wind, and reap the whirlwind, reap it in white and black alike, brutalizing more and more the whole national life. I draw no pictures; you know them as well as I. Just so far as we yield to this spirit, we are losing the very first elements of an ordered government and a decent civilization. The whole theory and method of lynch law are devil-inspired. They threaten everything that is sacred or valuable in the life of men together.

How are we to secure from the Negro and white alike this white flower of the moral and Christian spirit—reverence for the person? There is only one way, never, in the universe of God, who in his Christ stands ever to knock at the door of the human heart—never but one way—the way of contagion of character. Reverence alone can beget reverence. A child is not likely to rise to the sense of the beauty of delicate respect for the person, whose own self-respect is utterly broken down. It was a significant incident of which I heard the other day. The pupils of a certain teacher were so notably well-behaved, that a man was led to inquire of one of her little pupils, what she did to secure such a result. "Oh," the boy replied, "I don't know; she doesn't do anything; but she just walks around, and we feel as polite as anything." We have small hope of producing the delicate sense of reverence for the person in the less favored race, so long as the more favored race stamps the other spirit of contempt in awful barbaric examples upon it. There is only one way—the way of contagion of personal example. "But if this way be abandoned," as Ecce Homo says, "the effect will appear in a certain slow deterioration of manners which it would be hard to describe had it not been described already in well-known words. 'Sophistry and calculation' will take the place of 'chivalry.' There will be no more 'generous loyalty,' no more 'proud submission,' no more 'dignified obedience.' A stain will no more be felt like a wound, and our hardened and coarsened manners will lose the 'sensibility of principle and the chastity of honor.'"

The present situation as to race prejudice and race antipathy of all kinds is a divine challenge to us all of every race, and a solemn call to the re-dedication of ourselves to the finer fruits of the moral and Christian spirit—to the spirit of reverence for the person. Like Christ, we are to stand and knock at the door of the humblest personality. Like Christ, we stoop in shame wherever the inner sanctities of any soul are violated.

BRIEF HISTORY.

Organization. The American Missionary Association was formed in 1846. It is distinctively a Christian missionary society to spread the gospel of Christ wherever it has opportunity. It was organized with pronounced opposition to slavery, which then existed, and against all race and caste prejudice, which still exists. It was preceded by four recently established missionary organizations, which were subsequently merged into it. They were the Amistad Committee, the Union Missionary Society, the Committee for West India Missions among the recently emancipated slaves of Jamaica, and the Western Evangelical Missionary Society for work among the American Indians.

In the foreign field, in 1854, its laborers numbered seventy-nine, located in West Africa, Jamaica, the Sandwich Islands, Siam, Egypt among the Copts, Canada among the colored refugees and in North America among the Indians.

The home departments embraced two distinct fields, the West and the South. There were 112 home missionaries employed by the Association in 1860, fifteen of them being located in the slave states and in Kansas.

The missions in the slave states gave rise to some of the most stirring events in the history of the Association, which has the distinction of beginning the first decided efforts, while slavery existed, to organize churches and schools in the South on an avowedly anti-slavery basis.

Among the Negroes. The crisis so long impending came at length, and the Union armies, entering the South in 1861, opened the way for the instruction and elevation of the colored people. The Association felt itself providentially prepared to engage in this work, and the first systematic effort for their relief was made by it. Large numbers of "contrabands," or escaping fugitive slaves, were gathered at Fortress Monroe and Hampton, Va., and were homeless and destitute. The Association, on the 17th of September, 1861, established the first day-school among the freedmen. That little school laid the foundation for the Hampton Institute which the Association founded later, and was the forerunner of the hundreds that have followed.

The Proclamation of Emancipation, dated January 1, 1863, insured the permanent freedom of Negroes who reached the Union lines. The American Missionary Association rapidly extended its work. At Norfolk the school of the previous year now numbered 1,200 pupils. Teachers were also sent to Newbern and Roanoke Island, N. C., to Beaufort, Hilton Head, St. Helena and Ladies' Island, S. C., and to St. Louis, Mo., and its force was scattered over the field held by our armies in the District of Columbia, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Florida, Louisiana, Kentucky, Tennessee, Mississippi, Arkansas, Missouri, and Kansas.

Close of the War. Freedmen's Bureau. Boston Council. The year 1865 was marked by the close of the Civil War, by the establishment, by act of Congress, of the Freedmen's Bureau, and by the holding of a National Council of Congregational Churches in Boston, which recommended to the churches to raise $250,000 for the work among the freedmen, and designated this Association as the organization providentially fitted to carry it forward. The Association accepted the responsibility, appointed district secretaries at Chicago, Cincinnati and Boston, and collecting agents in other portions of the northern states. It also solicited funds in Great Britain, and succeeded in securing that year a little more than the $250,000 recommended by the Council. Its receipts from all sources ran up from $47,828 in 1861 to $253,045 in 1856, and $420,768 in 1870.

But in the South there came a reign of terror under the infamous Ku-Klux-Klans—the Thugs of America. The colored people were often assaulted by mobs, dragged from their homes at midnight, and shot down in the streets. But there was no want of courage on the part of our teachers to enter or remain in the field; the number of teachers, which was 320 in 1865, was enlarged to 528 in 1867, 532 in 1868, and 533 in 1870.

Permanent Educational Institutions. It was during this very period that the beginnings were made for most of our permanent educational institutions. The Association must train the teachers and preachers for this people.

The Association now sustains Atlanta Theological Seminary, Georgia; Fisk University, Tennessee; Talladega College, Alabama; Tougaloo University, Mississippi; Straight University, Louisiana; Tillotson College, Texas, and Piedmont College, Georgia, together with 66 schools of lower grades planted at strategic points in the lowlands and highlands of the South. There are also one school among the Indians, twenty-six among the Chinese and Japanese on the Pacific Coast, one in Alaska and one in Porto Rico. Educational and church work is also developing in Hawaii.

Theological departments have also been maintained in Howard University, Talladega College, Fisk University and Atlanta Seminary. Industrial instruction first began in southern mission schools in Talladega, Ala., and was early introduced into many of our schools and has been constantly extended. Talladega College, Tougaloo University and Joseph K. Brick Normal School have large farms. In all the larger institutions mechanical arts are taught to the boys, and household work, cooking, sewing, washing, nursing, etc., to the girls. From these schools go forth annually hundreds of well-qualified teachers and ministers.

Church Planting. Simultaneously with the founding of these permanent institutions the Association began the planting of churches among the freedmen. They were formed mainly in connection with the educational institutions, and were intended to be models of true church life. The work of church planting has been pressed forward with a steady hand until the churches now number 238 located in nearly all the states of the South, among the Negroes, the Highlanders, the Indians and Chinese in the West, and in the island of Porto Rico, with fruitful results. Sunday-schools, temperance efforts and revivals of religion have been marked features in the work. Christian Endeavor Societies were promptly organized and have been rapidly multiplied.

Mountain Work. The early labors of the Association in home mission work were directed to the white people of the West and South. The mountain region of the Central South embraces West Virginia, southwestern Virginia, southeastern Kentucky, western North Carolina, eastern Tennessee and portions of northern Georgia and northern Alabama. It is 500 miles long and 200 miles wide, and contains a population of about 2,000,000, seven-eighths of whom are white. Churches, preaching stations and schools have been established along or near the line of railroads traversing the mountain districts, or in regions not yet reached by such communications, where thousands of Highlanders live. Schools, churches and missions are now established in the mountain regions of five southern states. The schools give prominence to normal and industrial training, sending out each year a large number of well-trained teachers, who, taking charge of the district schools, are making them over after the best models. Strategic points are occupied by these institutions, such as Evarts, Ky.; Grand View and Pleasant Hill, Tenn.; Joppa, Ala.; Saluda and Blowing Rock, N. C. The preaching of an intelligent gospel and the establishment of Sunday-schools, Mission Bands, Mothers' Circles and Christian Endeavor Societies contribute greatly to the development of these interesting Highlanders in their domestic and social life as well as that distinctively religious.

The Indians. Some of the earliest labors of the Association were among the Indians. In 1852 it had twenty-one missionaries stationed among the Indians of the Northwest. Various causes conspired to the gradual diminution of these missions. But in 1882 an arrangement was made with the American Board by which it transferred to the Association its Indian missions in this country, and the Association withdrew from missions in foreign lands. At the time of the transfer the Association had missions in Skokomish, Wash., Leach Lake, Minn., and Spokane Falls. The transfer from the Board committed to its care the mission and school at the Santee Agency, Neb., Oahe, S. D., with outlying stations on the Cheyenne and White Rivers, and the mission and school at Fort Berthold, N. D. Since these missions and schools came under the care of the Association the facilities and force of workers have been increased, and missions have been added at Fort Yates, N. D.; Rosebud, S. D., and the Crow Agency, Mont. The churches number twenty-two, with a membership of 1,567. Schools number one, with 382 pupils. The outstations number forty-five.

Alaska. Our Alaskan Mission at Cape Prince of Wales was formed in 1890. It it now entirely supported by the special contributions sent to our treasury for this purpose. In connection with the educational and mission work a herd of reindeer is in the care of a missionary. The report of our missionaries in Alaska presents a very hopeful picture of work among the Eskimos.

Chinese and Japanese in America. The American Missionary Association was one of the pioneers in mission service among the Chinese immigrants to California. It began the work as early as 1852. In 1874 Dr. W. C. Pond, pastor of the Bethany Church, San Francisco, was appointed superintendent.

The number of workers is forty-eight, and schools twenty-six, located at Berkeley, Fresno, Los Angeles, Marysville, Oakland, Pasadena, Riverside, Sacramento, San Bernardino, San Diego, Santa Barbara, Ventura and San Francisco.

Over a thousand of these pagans have come into the Christian life, and a number of them have returned to their native land as missionaries.

The converted Chinamen have long desired the establishment of missions in their native country, to which, if they should return thither, they might resort as a Christian home, and from which they might go forth for mission work among their countrymen. The Chinese Missionary Society, composed of those who have been converted in Chinese missions, and which was organized in 1886, and commenced work in China in 1890, has already contributed above $15,000 to missions in China. With this they have established headquarters at Canton with property worth $40,000. They have also property in Hong Kong valued at $9,250. They have also a twenty years' lease of a good chapel in Ci Ning City, where they have organized a church.

Porto Rico. The American Missionary Association follows the flag. It did this in the Civil War, bringing the blessing of Christian instruction to the Negroes. It followed the same course at the close of the war with Spain. Porto Rico came under the flag and became a part of the national territory. The responsibility for the Christian instruction of the people fell with especial force upon our American churches. The American Missionary Association carefully investigated the field through representatives who were sent to the island. The need was found to be very great. There was an immediate demand for well appointed Christian schools for the instruction of children and youth and also for the preaching of a broad and free gospel to the people. In 1899 eight teachers were sent to this field to establish and maintain these schools, and an evangelist to preach the gospel as widely as possible throughout the island. Eight churches, with 607 members, are now organized.

Blanche Kellogg Institute is located at Santurce, near San Juan, a strategic position for a large work. The pastors also hold a circuit of preaching stations through the eastern portion of the island, where there are scarcely any other missionary efforts. There is great need for increased income to the Association to meet the demands of this large and growing field.

Hawaiian Islands. The Association, in 1904, by the urgent request of the Hawaiian Evangelical Association, undertook to aid the latter in its entire work among the native Hawaiians, and the Chinese, and Japanese, in those islands. To meet the imperative demands of this important work the A. M. A. has pledged for this year the sum of $8,500.00. These demands will be seen from the following facts. The Hawaiian Islands consist of a group of eight inhabited and four uninhabited islands. They are situated 2,100 miles from San Francisco and 3,400 miles from Japan. The people of Hawaii are made up of native Hawaiians, about 40,000; Chinese, 25,767, and Japanese, 61,111. In religion the population is divided as follows: Buddhists, 40,000; Mormons, 4,886; Roman Catholics, 26,363; Protestants, 23,773. The Hawaiian Islands seem to have been providentially situated so as to form the training school of missionaries for the Orient. In the providence of God many Chinese and Japanese have settled here. Back of this work in Hawaii there lies the great field of missions in China and Japan. There is also every inducement possible in the line of home missionary responsibility to support generously this work in our new island territory. This is the gateway to Asia and means great things in the regeneration of that vast region.

Bureau of Woman's Work. Formed in 1883. It gives direction and efficiency to the various lines of womens' aid to the American Missionary Association. Women's State Missionary Unions and organizations co-operate in raising funds for the prosecution of the work of the Association.

Publications. The American Missionary magazine is issued in ten monthly numbers by this Association each year. It contains fresh information from the mission fields, the reports of importance of various committees and other matters of value to those studying these great mission fields. The magazine is published at fifty cents per year. It is generously illustrated, and presents in new form fresh material in each issue.

Congregational Work, the organ of all our Congregational societies, represents each month the work of the American Missionary Association.

A large number of interesting leaflets, bringing the most recent information obtainable, are also pubished. They are issued for general use and distributed as desired among those interested in these great national and religious problems.

The American Missionary Association.

They shall also collect funds, and perform such other duties as may be required. They shall keep in constant conference with the New York office, and every month shall send to it, for the Executive Committee, a report of their work the previous month and of the condition of the interests of the Association in their several districts.

ART. VII.—CHECKS AND PAYMENTS.

All checks upon the bank accounts of the Association may be signed by (1) the Chairman (or Vice-Chairman or Temporary Chairman) of the Executive Committee (2), a Corresponding Secretary, or (3), the Treasurer. Any two of these signatures shall render a check valid, but no check will be valid with one signature only. All transfers of stock, conveyances of real estate and other instruments requiring the seal of the Association shall be signed in the same manner, except that the Treasurer may sign receipts for money and for legacies, when paid in full or on account, and, if required, affix thereto the seal of the Association. The Treasurer may also sign and affix the seal of the Association, if required, to any papers in any legal proceeding in which the Association may be interested when specially authorized so to do by the Finance Committee.

All payments of the Association shall be made by check payable to order, except petty cash expenditures, which shall be paid by the Treasurer and at convenient times be aggregated, and a check shall be drawn to his order therefor.

No disbursement shall be made without authority of the Executive Committee.

ART. VIII.—CLAIMS FOR DISBURSEMENTS BY OFFICERS AND EMPLOYEES.

All claims for disbursements by any officer or employee shall be accompanied by vouchers, except for telegrams, postage and traveling expenses, and charges below twenty dollars in amount, all of which shall be certified by the claimant to the Treasurer, with the items.

SERMON.

By Rev. Nehemiah Boynton, of Union Church, Boston.

"And it came to pass, when they were gone over, that Elijah said unto Elisha, Ask what I shall do for thee before I be taken away from thee. And Elisha said, I pray thee, let a double portion of thy spirit be upon me." II Kings, ii:9.

For contrast and for counterpart there are few incidents in the Bible which will compare with the meeting and the parting of Elijah and Elisha. The imagination of childhood never fails to kindle through the recital of the one; the expectancy of age never ceases to nourish itself upon the other. The meeting, you will remember, is a scene of society. A well-to-do farmer is tilling his meadow land, accompanied by twelve teams of oxen and servants to match. There is the stir and hilarity incident to associated work everywhere. There is the surprise of a stranger presence, the casting of the mantle; there is the feast of parting and of sacrifice—the victims, the oxen, just now tilling the field; the fuel, the plows which had but just now been vexing the earth. There is the rugged obedience of Elisha, who, at the command of a stern surrender, we are told, "arose and went after Elijah and ministered unto him." It is the prophetic hour in Elisha's life.

The attendant of the parting is a great solitude. The scene is the beetling crags of the mountains beyond Jordan. The senior prophet, silent in the first interview, is eager in conversation now. There is a pointed question and an impassioned answer; there is a whirlwind, chariots and horses of fire; there is a vision, a departing prophet, a remaining mantle and an orphaned Elisha trembling with the sense of the great responsibility which waits for his shoulders at the portal of the new life to which his obedience and loyalty have summoned him.

Elijah's question was not a mere interrogatory, it was the summary of a life. Elisha's answer was not a simple impulse, it was an expression of character. For "a man cannot, on a sudden emergency, lift himself out of the circumstances in which he has been rooted, nor peel off his character as if it were only skin deep." It was because Elisha had inhaled the bracing air of Elijah's influence, because he had discerned no arid belt in the territory of Elijah's soul, because the wealth of Elijah's character in its supreme purposes overlaid the poverty of its incidental weakness; because Elijah's character was true, strong and symmetrical; because discernment, devotion and denial all were his, that Elisha, in the splendor of a great abandon and Election of President of Fisk University.

Chairman Charles A. Hull announced to the meeting that the Trustees of Fisk University, at a meeting in the afternoon, had elected Rev. George A. Gates, ex-President of Pomona College, Cal., President of Fisk University, Nashville, Tenn.

Secretarial Paper.

The Secretarial Paper, entitled "The Point of Pressure," was presented and read by Secretary Charles J. Ryder, N. Y.

Hymn No. 560, "Lift up your Heads, Ye Gates of Brass," was sung.

Resolution.

The following resolution was adopted:

A year ago the American Missionary Association approved of a proposition which implied the propriety of using the Centennial year of Lincoln's birth as an occasion for securing endowment of chartered institutions. The rise of "The Together Campaign" made that enterprise impracticable. Now, however, the urgent need of our institutions presses upon us the importance of carrying out as speedily as possible the proposition of a year ago. We therefore request the Executive Committee to take all necessary measures immediately to secure adequate endowment of our chartered institutions. The recent completion of the first hundred thousand dollars for Piedmont College, thus securing the large gift by Dr. Pearsons, encourages us to think that as much may soon be secured for each of the other institutions. The election of Dr. George A. Gates to the presidency of Fisk University and the peculiar need of that institution seems to give it a natural precedence, but the enterprise should not pause until the needs of all have been at least partly met.

We commend to all our Sunday-schools the annual observance of Lincoln Memorial Sunday by appropriate exercises commemorative of our great President's life and work and by an offering for the enterprise of the American Missionary Association, which Lincoln made possible.

Addresses.

Secretary C. H. Patton, A. B. C. F. M., Mass., addressed the Association upon "The Together Campaign, in Retrospect and Prospect."

An Address upon "The Brotherhood and the Belated Races" was given by Mr. Frank Dyer, Ill., General Secretary Congregational Brotherhood of America.

An Address upon "The Young People's Missionary Movement and the A. M. A." was given by Secretary H. W. Hicks, N. Y.

Hymn No. 412, "O Jesus, Thou Art Standing," was sung.

The Quartet sang "There's a Balm in Gilead."

BUSINESS SESSION.

The Resignation of President Bradford.

The Association, having received a communication from its President, Rev. Dr. Amory H. Bradford, Montclair, N. J., communicating his desire that the Association consider his resignation, the following action was taken:

The American Missionary Association accepts with sincere regret the resignation of Rev. Dr. Amory H. Bradford as its President, and places upon record its high appreciation of his services rendered the Association, as a Pastor, as Life Member, and, officially as President, and member of the Executive Committee.

The Association deeply regrets Dr. Bradford's enforced absence from this Annual Meeting and it joins him in the hope of a speedy return to that health and strength which will permit him again to take part in the work to which he and this Association have so long been devoted.

Death of Justice Robert Roberts Bishop.

The Association, having learned of the death of Justice Bishop, Vice-President of the Association, the Committee on Resolutions presented the following, which was adopted:

It is with profound regret that the American Missionary Association records the death of Justice Robert Roberts Bishop, Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of Massachusetts, at Newton, on October 7th. Justice Bishop was an eminent jurist, and for many years an honored Trustee of Phillips Academy and of Andover Theological Seminary. He had served this Association faithfully for three years as a Vice-President, having been twice re-elected to that office, and was in full sympathy with its aims and methods. To his family, kindred and friends, we, members of the Association assembled in Annual Meeting, extend this expression of sympathy, a sympathy made deep and tender by the sense of a loss which we share with them.

(1) To project a campaign on systematic and comprehensive lines which shall have as its objective the lifting of the gifts of our churches to the ideal called for by the apportionment plan, namely, two million dollars a year, realizing, however, that this apportionment is upon the basis of the minimum requirements of the societies, and that if great advances are to be made this year many churches who are fully able to do so must double, treble or even quadruple their present apportionments.

(2) To seek during the course of this campaign, as a basis for present and future missionary activity, the adoption of the following cardinal missionary methods by each local church:

(a) A Missionary Committee.
(b) A Weekly Missionary Offering Plan.
(c) An Every-Member Canvass.

SIXTY-THIRD ANNUAL REPORT
OF THE
OF THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION,

COVERING THE YEAR ENDING SEPTEMBER 30TH, 1909.

GENERAL SURVEY.

For the fourth consecutive year the American Missionary Association comes to its annual meeting with a credit balance on the year's account. Through the efforts of the Joint Missionary Campaign the hampering debt of four years ago has been entirely wiped out. The total receipts of the Association for the year amounted to more than half a million dollars, and the year closed with four hundred and forty-seven dollars in the treasury. It has been a year of unusual solicitude, with harrassing economies in the mission fields and strenuous effort on the fields of support; we have fallen short of the full amount apportioned us by the National Advisory Committee, even when we include the special contributions for the debt,—but we rejoice in the work done and in the support it has received, and as we meet to-day to review the past and lay new plans for the future, like Paul when he saw the brethren who "came to meet him as far as Appii forum," we thank God and take courage.

We rejoice also in the newly emphasized community of interest which binds together the seven missionary societies maintained by our Congregational churches. Fellowship in the common work of the kingdom is no new thing for us—this we have always recognized and enjoyed—but there has developed of late a growing consciousness of the essential unity of all our missionary work, and a more distinct and general recognition of the reciprocal relations of our missionary societies in the prosecution of this work. The three-fold ministry of Home Missions, Missions at Home and Missions Abroad, forms a comprehensive unity of endeavor, with a clearly defined and logical diversity of service, the recognition of which must appeal irresistibly to our churches and assure their continued confidence and support.

Each one of our seven societies takes its natural and necessary place in this three-fold classification. The American Missionary Association is engaged in "Missions at Home," among the unprivileged peoples of our own land. It devotes itself to its own particular field of service with a profound sense of its obligation to the needy millions to whom in the name of the churches it carries the message of sympathy and hope, but it also recognizes the privilege of serving with the other missionary societies in the inspiring fellowship of a still larger ministry, at home and abroad, until the Kingdom of Christ shall fully come.

The report of the work of the Association for the past year is made in six divisions covering the following mission fields: The South, Porto Rico, the Indian Reservations of the Northwest, Alaska, the Orientals of the Pacific Coast, and Hawaii. Each one of these fields has its distinctive racial characteristics demanding specialization in method of missionary service, while in all fields and with all races the service we render takes the two-fold form of education and evangelization.

The work of Christian education in the South forms a large part of our missionary endeavor. The public school system of the South is steadily improving in nearly all the states. Schools for the higher education and industrial training of white students are being rapidly multiplied. The South is advancing in intelligence and wealth and the means of culture. But the South is still a missionary field, and will remain so for years to come. How this is so is explained by a distinguished pastor of Atlanta in a recent home missionary address in that city, on "The Backward Peoples," in which he divides the twenty-six million people of the South into four great classes, three of which he designates as "backward," and describes as follows,—"five million white people who are congregated around the cotton mills; two million white people in the mountain section, and eight million Negroes." "The problems with which we are confronted," he says, "spring from these three classes of backward peoples." Together these three classes make up more than half the population of the South, and it is among them that the educational work of the Association is being carried on.

The larger number of our schools is for the Negroes, who form the most numerous, the most destitute and the least privileged class of all. For these unfortunate people we have maintained in whole or in part during the past year more than sixty schools.

A third of these are small ungraded country schools held for a few months in connection with our Negro churches, in order to supplement the three or four months' public school if there be any such in the community. These little schools are maintained at the slightest possible cost and have given the first start in life to many a colored boy and girl. A number of churches keep up similar schools at their own charges and these are not included in this report.

A large proportion of our schools are the academies or normal schools—often called in southern parlance "colleges"—schools of secondary and elementary grades, with normal and industrial features, which furnish special opportunities for education not otherwise to be obtained. There are thirty or more of them, in city and country; they are the "high schools" of the colored people, teaching morals and religion, giving instruction in the manual and domestic arts and, wherever possible, in agriculture, and providing the means for mental discipline.

At the head of our system of Negro schools stand our "chartered institutions," six of them, in as many different states. These are our chief asset—individually the most important and far-reaching of all our schools,—Fisk University in Tennessee, Talladega College in Alabama, Tougaloo University in Mississippi, Straight University in Louisiana, Tillotson College in Texas. These chartered institutions afford opportunity for the "higher education," and seek to train leaders for the Negro race. The range of their instruction is as broad and varied as circumstances will permit; they have collegiate, normal, secondary and elementary courses, with facilities for the more thorough training in the industries; two of them have large model farms; three maintain regular college departments in which there are a hundred and fifty-six students; two theological seminaries, one in connection with Howard University and the other at Talladega College, prepare men of all denominations for the Christian ministry. The Association believes in "higher education" for the Negro—in the words of a distinguished Southerner, "as high as he can take." Just what this may mean is indicated by the statement of Bishop Bratten of Mississippi, when he says: "The Negro is capable of development to a point whose limit I have not yet discovered."

A marked feature of the last year's work has been the extension of agricultural instruction and a more adequate equipment in some of our schools for the teaching of the industries. At Emerson Institute in Mobile Mr. Emerson has added to his former benefactions by providing a manual training building, with a complete printing outfit. At Straight University the new Thony La Fon Industrial Hall has been equipped with up-to-date machinery and sets of tools. Avery Institute at Charleston has secured additional land and a new boys' shop. Beach Institute at Savannah has a new manual training room. At Dorchester Academy in McIntosh, Ga.; Lincoln Academy, Marion, Ala., and Lincoln School, King's Mountain, N. C., important advances have been made in agricultural work. Talladega College has added a professor of agriculture to its teaching force and has greatly improved its model farm. The new hospital for the nurses' training department at Talladega stands unfinished and unfurnished because of the lack of funds.

A crisis is being rapidly reached in some of our larger city high schools, notably at Memphis and Macon. These city high schools are among our oldest institutions—some of them have been in operation for forty years or more—they have grown steadily, with an increasing number of pupils, higher standards of education and a broader range of work. The relative expense for their maintenance is not great. Le Moyne Institute costs the Association less than five dollars a year for each pupil; it is largely self-supporting. What these schools need is new equipment. Their buildings have become inadequate; some of them are old and dilapidated. They need enlarged grounds, new buildings and additional facilities for instruction. These schools fill an important place in our educational scheme and have a distinct mission in the elevation of the Negro people. They have furnished and must continue to furnish competent teachers for the public schools and intelligent leaders in business and professional life. Those which do not measure up to these requirements are being closed. Those which do, should be given a fair chance. The Association is facing a serious problem in connection with these schools. The principal of Knox Institute, Athens, Ga., has secured a gift of $15,000 from Mr. Andrew Carnegie, which will provide a new building and enable the school to open a boarding department. Without this gift the future of the school was problematical. Its continued usefulness is now assured. The future of other and even more important schools is dependent on similar benefactions.

A very significant item of the year in connection with our white schools in the South is the reported completion of the hundred thousand dollar endowment for Piedmont College. The officers of the college have persevered in a long and laborious canvass for this money, encouraged by the offer of twenty-five thousand dollars from Dr. D. K. Pearson. Your Committee has been impressed with the absolute necessity of securing this endowment if the college is to continue its splendid work for the boys and girls of the mountains, and the Association has been willing to bear its full share of the burden. It is to be hoped that this is but the beginning of still larger things for Piedmont.

Through the generosity of a member of our Committee, Atlanta Theological Seminary has been able to build a substantial central hall with lecture rooms, library and dormitory. Another friend of the institution has provided a residence for its president. The Seminary is doing a noble work in training preachers for the white Congregational churches of the South.

Saluda Seminary in the mountains of North Carolina is rejoicing in a fine new dormitory for girls and has renovated its old building as a recitation hall. The citizens of Saluda have borne an honorable part in making these improvements. Pleasant Hill Academy in Tennessee, overcrowded with students, has added a wing to its school building. Grand View Normal Institute is making advances in agricultural and other industrial work. Black Mountain Academy in Kentucky and Joppa Institute in Alabama have new principals and are entering upon a larger future. Marked religious interest with many conversions is reported by some of our mountain schools.

Education and evangelization go hand in hand on our southern field. Our schools are Christian schools with a pronounced religious life. More or less directly connected with our educational work, the organization and maintenance of unsectarian Congregational churches, standing for a pure life and an ethical religion, have been from the beginning a distinctive feature of our missionary endeavor.

A significant illustration of this co-operation between church and school for the betterment of the people, has been furnished in the third biennial session of the "National Convention of Congregational Workers among the Colored People," recently held at Birmingham, Ala. Delegates came from all over the South and the convention continued four days. Practical questions concerning church life and work were eagerly discussed and the mission of congregationalism among the colored people was intelligently and forcibly set forth. One full day was devoted to the consideration of the educational work of the American Missionary Association, following a program prepared by our superintendent of education, and the papers and addresses by both white and colored teachers were illuminating and suggestive and will be permanently helpful.

The monthly reports from our colored pastors during the year have been unusually encouraging. They show improved church attendance, evangelistic activity and increased contributions for self-support. There are exceptions, of course, but as a whole better work has been done than heretofore. Several churches have been building meeting-houses or parsonages or otherwise improving their property. The great institutional church at Atlanta has been completed and dedicated. The church at Louisville has assumed self-support. Lincoln Centennial Year has been observed in various ways by song and sermon and missionary gifts.

Our mountain churches are few and weak. Demorest, Ga., has dedicated a new church building and has a new pastor; Williamsburg, Ky., maintains a vigorous and active life; Crossville, Tenn., is hopeful and plans for larger things; Pleasant Hill has been spiritually quickened and has received a goodly number of young people to its fellowship. But in general it must be said that our mountain churches have made small gains as organizations, whatever influence they may have exerted upon the other denominations. There are many churches in the mountains, native to the soil, but there are few sections of the country more spiritually destitute. Congregationalism has a message for these poor people—a message of good will and peace, an intelligent gospel to proclaim and ethical standards of Christian living to set forth—but it has found it difficult to face the intensely sectarian prejudices of a scattered and isolated people, tenacious of their own religious traditions and resenting interference from outside. Our mountain schools are flourishing, while our churches make slow progress. A new and higher type of Christianity must come gradually, through education. The largest promise for our own churches is to be found through the general enlightenment of all the churches. In this enlightenment our churches must bear their part, but for the best permanent results, the well-instructed church and the consecrated Christian school must work together.

By an arrangement of comity with the other denominations working in Porto Rico our Congregational churches, through this Association, are held responsible for the evangelization of the eastern portion of the island. The first Protestant sermon was preached in Fajardo in December, 1898. We have now ten churches with five hundred and ninety-one members, and regular preaching services at twenty-two out-stations. Two ordained missionaries with their helpers have carried this work until last summer, when the Rev. Thomas Gray and wife went out to reinforce the mission. The work has been unusually hard on our faithful missionaries during the past year. One of the lady assistants has broken down in health and returned home, while the health of Mr. Scheibe and family has been such that he feels compelled soon to retire. The mission has reached a most interesting stage of its development when the immediate future is bright with promise, and it is to be hoped that consecrated workers may be found to enter the field and reap the fruit of past labors. The era of church building has just begun.

Blanche Kellogg Institute at Santurce has had a prosperous year, but here, too, illness has compelled the retirement of the principal and his wife, and we look forward to the new year with much solicitude. The new buildings, Christian Endeavor Hall and Adams Chapel, have proved to be admirably adapted to the needs of the school.

Our Indian missions are in six reservations—Santee, Rosebud, Cheyenne River, Standing Rock, Fort Berthold and Crow. Here again the interesting work of developing permanent church organizations under native pastors gives good promise for the future. The Indians are rapidly settling down to civilized life. Intelligent and devoted Christian men can be found, trained in our Santee school, who under missionary guidance can be relied upon as pastors and evangelists. Our churches have a substantial membership, active in good works. Their reported contributions for the past year average $2.66 per church member. They need encouragement and the missions deserve more generous support from the Association. Two or three small meeting-houses ought to be erected at once and two missionary homes should be enlarged or rebuilt. The necessity is most pressing on the Crow Reservation, where the faithful missionary and his wife, after laboring on alone for fifteen years in a large backward tribe of pagan Indians, find the time now ripe for constructive work. With the full approval of the missionary council they are asking for a new church, a school house, a lady missionary teacher and money for the support of native workers. The native missionary society of the older missions will support the native workers. Our missionary would like to go out and collect funds for the new church. They ask help from us for the new day school and the missionary teacher.

The Santee Normal School continues its good work under Dr. Alfred Riggs, and reports a most auspicious opening of the new year. Much needed repairs have been made on some of the buildings, the farm and stock are in excellent condition, and instruction in the industries is systematically given to both boys and girls. The correspondence school has a hundred and forty-five pupils on the various reservations; it is conducted with great care and furnishes the best possible means for reaching former students and others who are unable to leave their homes.

The school at Oahe is supported by private subscription and does not legitimately come within the province of this report. The school building belongs to the Association and is sadly in need of repair.

ALASKA.

The Alaska-Yukon Exposition at Seattle has led the nation on a voyage of discovery. What had been supposed to be "a territory of ice," has been found to be a vast, habitable country, with untold mineral wealth and agricultural possibilities beyond the dreams of men. We are glad to have a mission in Alaska. There are no waving fields of grain in or about the Eskimo village of Wales, but it is probably the largest Eskimo village in the world and it certainly has the largest Eskimo church. Our mission reindeer-herd paws off the snow and feeds and grows fat on the rich moss, and our Eskimo brethren get a living by hunting walrus and seal on the ice floes of the Behring Sea. There are no other inhabitants. It is a lonely life for the missionary and a most trying one. One year's experience has been enough for the good man who has last served us there, and our faithful and heroic Mr. Cross has self-sacrificingly left his family once more and gone back alone to carry the work another year, when he expects to be relieved by some brave young missionary with a good wife who will give permanent service, for Christ's dear sake, to these simple and trusting people. This is our year's report for Alaska,—except to say that the services of the church have been regularly maintained and the reindeer herd has yielded unusual revenue, and we are looking for a missionary for this most distant, and in many respects most interesting of our mission fields.

The work among the Chinese and Japanese of California is under the direct supervision of the California Oriental Mission, which is auxiliary to the American Missionary Association. The real property is vested in the Mission, with reversionary rights to the Association; the property consists of mission houses in several different cities. The annual missionary budget is made up by the California board, and amounts to about $15,000 a year, on which the Association makes a definite grant of $5,000, and the balance is raised by the energetic superintendent, Dr. Pond. The most of this balance is collected in California, about half of it from the American churches and friends of the Mission and half from the Chinese and Japanese.

For many years the Mission converts have been encouraged to unite with our English-speaking churches, so that they might come into closer touch with mature Christians, but more recently it has been deemed wise in several places to organize Oriental churches or branch churches, where they may enjoy a common fellowship, build up their own Christian institutions and exert a more positive influence upon their own people. Ten such churches or branch churches have been organized, four Chinese and six Japanese, with an aggregate membership of 517. The contributions of these churches during the past year for church and mission work were $10,267—an average of twenty dollars per church member!

An event of great significance to the work during the year has been the completion and dedication of the new Chinese Mission House at San Francisco, in place of the one destroyed by earthquake and fire. The new building is a substantial structure of five stories, with full accommodations for church, mission and school work, and apartments for the Chinese pastor's family. The building cost $30,000.

The Japanese church at Seattle is not included in the above statement. This church was organized two years ago and has forty-seven members, several of whom are graduates or former students of Doshisha College, Japan. While they are securing a church home for themselves and laying the foundations for future growth, the Association is making an annual contribution toward the support of their pastor.

HAWAII.

Secretary Oleson, of the Hawaiian Evangelical Association, reports continued interest, with substantial gains in the native Hawaiian, Union and Japanese churches and a loss in the Chinese work. A large number of the Orientals, especially Japanese, are returning to their own country. The Hawaiian Association expends upwards of $60,000 annually in its mission work, toward which our Congregational churches of the mainland contributed last year, through the American Missionary Association, $8,500. Secretary Oleson gratefully recognizes these gifts and says: "Generous co-operation from the mainland is well-nigh imperative. But it is not a money question alone. Comradeship in Christian effort is an even greater need in our comparative isolation. The American Missionary Association has given us royal support, and not a little of the new spirit of courage and hope among our workers is due to the conviction that we have not only the gifts but the prayers of the people of God on the mainland."

FINANCIAL.

Under a kind Providence and the hearty support of the churches and friends of the Association your Executive Committee is able to report all obligations paid and a balance of $447.56 in the treasury for the work of the new year. The donations were $18,413.70 in excess of the previous year. Through the efforts of the Joint Missionary Campaign Committee there has been received the additional sum of $46,917.92 in full payment of the old debt of the Association.

More than one-half million of dollars.

This is the fourth consecutive year that the Association has come to its annual meeting without any debt on the year; this, however, has required severe cutting and retrenchment where the needs were great for continued support and enlargement. It is the policy of the Executive Committee to conduct the work within the regular receipts.

RESERVE LEGACY PLAN.

Your Committee desires to call attention to the Reserve Legacy Plan which was adopted by the Association some years ago. Each legacy or bequest to the Association for its regular work is divided into three equal portions, one-third to be apportioned to the expenses of the current year, one-third to the expenses of second fiscal year and the remaining third to the third fiscal year.

The advantages of this arrangement are that it tends to equalize the legacies received so that the amount available for use is approximately uniform from year to year. This plan also enables the Executive Committee to know in advance, approximately the amount available from legacies for any given year, and thus to adjust the appropriation to the probable receipts.

The friends of the Association in making bequests to it are assured that these bequests when not designated as for endowment or similar objects are not expended in a single year, but are expended over a period of three years. The Executive Committee, however, may, at its discretion, in the case of the receipt of any one legacy of $25,000.00 or more, distribute the amount over a longer period, or may appropriate the whole or any part of it as they shall deem of greatest advantage to the work of the Association.

On the Reserve Legacy Plan there was available for the current work of the year $76,418.52 and from legacies received on the year there was available the sum of $29,866.40, making a total of $106,284.92.

CONDITIONAL GIFTS.

The donations received on the conditional gift plan are, when available, distributed under the reserve legacy plan, thus equalizing these gifts over a period of years.

There was received in conditional gifts during the year the sum of $20,000, and there was transferred to current work and special work the sum of $20,700, which became available by death of the donors or by the relinquishment of any further claim for an annual sum in semi-annual payments during the lives of the donors.

The conditional gift plan assures an annual sum in semi-annual payments which is fully as much as can be expected from any safe investment and the donors are relieved from any care or anxiety as to the investment of money, and they also have the satisfaction while living of placing their gifts in the care of the Association for its missionary work. The Association's financial record and business methods give abundant security to all donors.

Your Committee most earnestly commends this conditional gift plan to those who desire to aid the Association in larger donations than they can make at any time unless they are assured of an annual sum available for their use during their lives.

BUREAU OF WOMAN'S WORK.

The total received this year through Women's State Organizations and local societies contributing directly to the national treasury is $31,419.33. This includes some contributions from Sunday Schools and C. E. Societies passed to us through the State treasuries. We recognize the helpfulness of the women's organizations and thank them for the share they have taken in bringing the Association through the year without debt. There has been a steady increase during the year in requests for missionary information and for definitely assigned in the clear vision of a single eye, asked not for the luxury of wealth or for the leverage of power, but for the plethora of spiritual possession in the equipment of which he might go to his work; to his work and not to Elijah's. He had no thought of imitation, he had no desire for reproduction; he had absolutely no time for success. "There are those," says Thackeray, "who have no reverence except for prosperity and no eye for anything beyond success. Such people are living in the world, faithless, hopeless, charityless." Elisha was not of these. He had caught the secret of the soul that was passing, and for himself he craved it. He was ready for any sacrifice. He would not shrink from changed conditions; he was not unwilling to face his new life, its intricate problems, if only he might bring with him the javelin of a mighty faith, tipped and tempered at the forge of a glowing, God-given spirit. He was not afraid of to-morrow, if only he could inject into its veins the spirit of yesterday. He did not care for man if only he could lose himself in God.

Elijah's question is often asked, Elisha's answer often heard. Yesterday is forever taking leave of to-day; the generation that is passing is forever saying farewell to the generation hastening on. Earnest souls everywhere, as they look abroad upon the earth, are bound to get a view into the life which has been royally lived by those who have gone before, and when the question is asked, "What shall I do for thee, before I be taken from thee?" such souls everywhere, as they look forward in hope and backward in retrospect, exclaim, "I pray thee, let a double portion of thy spirit be upon me."

I wish to discuss simply and briefly to-night three principles which seem to me to be inherent in the spirit which should dominate people like ourselves as we address ourselves to the problems, missionary especially, which are ours in the world of the present.

I remark, in the first place, that the spirit which should be ours must be a spirit of discernment. However true it may be that the books which our friends from over the sea write concerning us are dull and stupid in many respects, it is certainly beyond dispute that the pen always limbers and the style is always piquant as these friends speak to us of the esteem in which we hold ourselves. That famous saying of Col. Higginson's, "Nature said one day, hitherto the English has been my best race; let us put in one drop more of nervous fluid and make the American," has been the theme of almost endless variation. Mr. Carlyle declares that we are "the never-resting locomotive country." Max O'Rell affirms that he will never recover from the surprise which was his upon meeting on the Germanic a merchant from New York, who, when he left his home in the morning, had no idea of crossing the ocean, but having formed his purpose during the day, at the spur of necessity, simply sent word to his wife, "Do not wait dinner for me; I am off for Europe." The artist who accompanied Thackeray to this country nearly forty years ago was also very much surprised in one of our great cities at finding himself at a table where the courses were served with what appeared to him to be unseemly haste, and upon inquiring the reason was calmly told that this was an "express table" especially for those who were bound to catch a train.

This "drop of nervous fluid," however, is not lost in the grip of the tourist. It is confessedly the inspiration of that splendid enterprise which makes the people of our republic foremost in the world in social achievement, in commercial adjustment and in political accomplishment. It is the ingredient of that strong and abiding sense of a manifest destiny which we cherish—a destiny which each succeeding year reveals to be no "dear deceit"—about which Mr. Bryce has said that we American people believe that a divine providence has ordained that we should have a hand in giving a larger liberty and a truer freedom to the world than it ever had before, and that this glorious expectation will certainly be accomplished by the outstretched and overruling hand of God himself. Our optimism as a people is simply the profundity of our repose upon the impregnable granite of the promises of God. Who can turn the pages of American history, for example, without lifting the heart in gratitude to the God of nations who has directly guided us? John Fiske tells us that the discovery of America was the most stupendous event in the annals of mankind. Who of us can be sufficiently grateful that, at the daybreak of modern history, when this world of ours was discovered, the power was lodged, not in the hand of the Spaniard or of the Frenchman, but in the hand of the Saxon? It is the Saxon, with his spirit of liberty, with his energy, with his push, to whom we owe very much of what we are to-day. The spirit of the Saxon, with his rugged nature and with his stout and devoted heart, is the salt of our national life. It has inspired us for our life-battles; it has tempered us in the hour of victory; it has imbued us with a courage apart from which we ourselves would have been no longer brave in the world. Thank God for the Saxon and for the power of the Saxon in our American life.

The circumstances which are about us in our land to-day, however, cannot fail to enlist the earnest sympathy of those who look with pride and interest upon this fair republic. We have now about sixty-eight million people, representing all grades of intelligence and of ignorance, of spirit and of spleen. They have come from every land under the shining heavens and have brought their families with them. They are here—and here to stay—to throw the weight of their power and influence into the arena of our national life. We have the Negro in the South, struggling as never before for his second, his real, emancipation. We have the Chinese at the Golden Gate; we have the Indian on his reservation; we have the German with his socialism; we have the Russian with his anarchism; and all these people are here among us with the first thought of acquisition, and few relatively of them feel in any deep and virile way a work to which contributions might be applied, which encourages us to look for increased receipts in the future.

The securing of financial support is only one of many responsibilities of the Bureau of Woman's Work. To obtain and supply a great variety and range of missionary news, to assist new organizations in the churches, to encourage the faltering societies, to help in plans for public meetings, to be in sympathetic touch with our women missionaries in the field, to link them to some helpful band of women in the home churches, is only a suggestion of the stream of influences that pass through this valuable department of the American Missionary Association.

AMONG OUR CONSTITUENTS.

The year just closing has been one of encouragement and presents a hopeful outlook for the future. The year upon which we are just entering, judged by every prophetic indication, should be one of the best that the Association has ever realized.

In the mission fields the encouraging condition of schools and churches has already been dwelt upon in this report. Among our constituency the year has also been one of large encouragement.

The financial statement in the Treasurer's report indicates that $18,000.00 more in contributions was received from the constituents than was true last year. This of itself is both encouraging and somewhat surprising when we remember that $46,000.00 additional came from the Together Campaign Fund for debt.

The Together Campaign, entered upon last February, absorbed the attention of the churches as well as of individuals For months it occupied almost the entire time of the secretaries of the A. M. A., who, with the representatives of the other societies, were busy in this remarkable and stupendous movement. Missionaries from our fields joined heartily in the campaign and added much to its success. The history and satisfactory outcome of this movement are familiar to the churches. The American Missionary Association joined in it with cordial and hearty co-operation. The division of the income from the campaign, being pro rata according to the debts, the amount received was comparatively a modest sum. The relief from the burden of debt, however, is in itself of great value and renders more efficient our entire service.

Notwithstanding, however, the abundant financial success of the Together Campaign, it was not this that marked its greatest value. The spirit of unity, the cordial and loving fellowships, the impressive representation of the world-field of missions through this campaign furnished the elements of great and abiding value. That the blessing of God and a baptism of spiritual power were upon this whole movement many pastors and members of the churches across the whole country testify. The missionary work of our denomination in magnitude and hopefulness and the great responsibility of our churches to maintain and enlarge this work were never more keenly felt than they are to-day. Our denomination is lifted upon a higher plane of philanthropic and missionary efficiency and is recognized by the churches of other denominations as holding more than ever before a commanding position in the world's redemption.

The Pacific District, consisting of the churches on the Pacific slope, was created during this year by the Executive Committee. The necessity for this new district was apparent and pressing. The long and faithful ministry of Dr. W. C. Pond in behalf of the Chinese on the Pacific slope is familiar to our churches and can scarcely be overestimated in its value. The special appeal for this form of work has been heard gladly and responded to generously by the churches of the Pacific States. Our other departments of the work of the A. M. A., however, have had no adequate or continuous representation among these important and growing churches. Your committee realized that the churches of that western region had a right to know immediately of the large and multiform fields of service that had fallen to the care of the A. M. A., multiplying year by year. A resident secretary among these churches on the Pacific slope, to be called upon for public work in churches and associations, keeping in touch with pastors and church treasurers, seemed essential to the development of the interests of the Association and that the churches might have the value of his cooperation and inspiration. Rev. George W. Hinman was elected for this responsible position. Secretary Hinman was for many years a missionary of the American Board in China. During the Together Campaign he was prominent as a speaker in different groups. Before going to his western field he visited the schools and missions of the Association in the South and was received with hearty appreciation. The A. M. A. has opened a District Office temporarily in Seattle, Washington, and Secretary Hinman has entered upon his work with many encouragements. Our constituent churches have welcomed him with genuine sympathy and the future promises hopefully for large increase of interest and contributions to the general work of the A. M. A. from this great and rich Pacific region. A little later the office will be permanently established in San Francisco.

The Apportionment Plan, inaugurated by the Advisory Committee of our National Council, has already proved its wisdom. During the ensuing year, if the churches will generally meet their assignment as made by the State Apportionment Committees to the full amount, the work of the Association will move forward with great energy. It is the purpose of your committee to co-operate during the year in every possible way with the state and local apportionment committees as well as the Advisory Committee that the full amount in each church may be realized.

Campaigns for representatives of this Association have been arranged during the past year by the Apportionment Committees of different states. The experiment has proved unusually satisfactory and successful both to the churches and to the representatives of the Association. We urge the method upon the Apportionment Committees of other states and our secretaries or missionary representatives will be glad to fill such appointments.

Our higher institutions of learning present a perplexing and at the same time a most important feature of the financial problem of the Association.

The recommendation made by the Association at its Sixty-second Annual Meeting that the Executive Committee make a special effort during the Lincoln Centennial year to raise the needed endowment of five of our chief institutions was made impossible to realization by the inauguration of the Joint Missionary Campaign. The conducting of two campaigns of such vast magnitude was evidently unwise and impracticable, and your Committee regretfully deferred action until some more convenient season.

The noble chartered institutions under the care of the A. M. A. merit and demand immediate endowments. The very prosperity of these institutions and their development and success render impossible the older methods of support. Hat collections and donations from the churches are no longer sufficient for the maintenance of these institutions. Especial attention is called to this need in the Secretarial Paper and your committee would emphasize the importance of securing sufficient endowment funds for these institutions that their future might be safe and efficient. No appeal before our philanthropic constituency has a larger claim than this.

The increasing work of the American Missionary Association, the many new problems of philanthropic, patriotic and missionary importance which are coming into this field in addition to the important problems already included, are more and more appreciated by our constituency. The field is nation-wide, including both Continental and Insular United States. Many peoples representing peculiar racial characteristics that need to be studied industrially, intellectually, morally and spiritually all unite to make the appeal of the A. M. A. upon the constituents of our churches and patriotic and philanthropic individuals more powerful to-day than ever in the history of the American Missionary Association.

Your committee would call especial attention to two volumes which have recently been issued by the Pilgrim Press of Boston, Mass. These volumes are of unusual importance and interest to our constituency. They are as follows:

"A Crusade of Brotherhood," by Augustus Field Beard. A history of the American Missionary Association for the last sixty years is given in interesting fashion by Secretary Beard. The men who organized and carried on the Association, the principles of its work, with the institutions which exemplify them, and its present condition and outlook, are fittingly commemorated. The book is invaluable, not only as a record of a splendid work, but as showing the general development of the United States during the period.

"Christian Reconstruction in the South," by H. P. Douglass. A thoughtfully considered and carefully prepared volume on a vitally important subject. Dr. Douglass takes a broad and comprehensive view of the subject, prefacing his discussion of the assimilation of the Negro population with a general view of the foreign peoples of the United States. The author writes impartially, but with convictions based on thorough study.

Obituaries.

Mrs. Emma C. Newkirk, who was born May 23, 1870, was graduated at Talladega College in June, 1897. She was married to Rev. W. D. Newkirk on the day of her graduation. Mrs. Newkirk was a faithful assistant in the work of her husband for eleven years, and was president of the Woman's Missionary Union at the time of her death, in August last.

The death of the Rev. J. E. B. Jewett, occurred in his native town of Pepperell, Mass., October 4, 1908. Mr. Jewett was born in 1821 and was graduated from Dartmouth College in 1843, and from Andover Theological Seminary in 1849. In 1882 he and his wife entered into the service of the American Missionary Association. He was pastor of the church in Dudley, N. C., for four years, and thence was transferred to Greenwood, S. C., where as principal of the Brewer Normal School and pastor of the church he remained six years. He spent one year in Beaufort, N. C., and one year in Evarts, Ky., as principal of the schools in those places. He left an excellent record of consecration and fidelity, which was shared with his devoted wife who survives him.

Miss Patti L. Dawson, for four years a teacher in Albany Normal School at Albany, Ga., died on October 17th last. Miss Dawson was a graduate of Albany Normal School in the class of 1901. The following year she left Fisk University, finishing the normal course there in 1903. She entered the work of the American Missionary Association as a teacher in Albany Normal School, where she taught until in the spring of 1908 she was compelled by ill health to leave the schoolroom. As a student and as a teacher Miss Dawson showed rare earnestness. Her work as a teachar was characterized by sincerity, faithfulness and marked efficiency.

The American Missionary Association and the colored people in the South have met with a great loss in the death of Rev. William J. Larkin, whose earthly life came to its close on Christmas day, 1908. Mr. Larkin was a man of sterling qualities and noble Christian character. He was a forceful and inspiring preacher, a thorough Bible student, a clear and magnetic teacher and an able business manager. Of a strongly sympathetic nature, he was greatly beloved not only by the students, but widely by the colored people wherever he was known.

Mr. Larkin began with the American Missionary Association in December 1889 and continued until 1908 when poor health compelled him to relinquish work. He was indeed a good and true man.

In the death of Mrs. William H. Holloway, the wife of the pastor of Bethany Church, Thomasville, Georgia, the church has sustained a severe loss. Mrs. Holloway was greatly interested in the activities of the church at Thomasville, and for eight years had given earnest service and devotion to that work.

The Association having learned of the death of Justice Robert Roberts Bishop, Vice-President of the Association, the Committee on Resolutions presented the following, which was adopted:

"It is with profound regret that the American Missionary Association records the death of Justice Robert Roberts Bishop, Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of Massachusetts, at Newton, on October 7. Justice Bishop was an eminent jurist, and for many years an honored Trustee of Phillips Academy and of Andover Theological Seminary. He had served this Association faithfully for three years as a Vice-President, having been twice re-elected to that office, and was in full sympathy with its aims and methods. To his family, kindred and friends, we, members of the Association assembled in Annual Meeting, extend this expression of sympathy, a sympathy made deep and tender by the sense of a loss which we share with them."

Oscar Atwood, A.M., who died at Prairie Du Sac, Wisconsin, October 20th, was for fifteen years President of Straight University, New Orleans. He was sixty-seven years of age. President Atwood went to Straight in 1890. He was a native of Cambridge, Vermont, and a graduate of the University of Vermont in the class of 1864. President Atwood took with him to Straight an excellent experience as an educator, and an accuracy of scholarship and high ideals of accomplishment and of character which brought Straight University into the front rank of institutions for the colored people. He did faithful and noble service, and will be greatly mourned by thousands whom he helped upward in life.

ANNUAL REPORT

OF THE

BUREAU OF WOMAN'S WORK,

FOR THE YEAR ENDING SEPTEMBER 30, 1909.

MISS D. E. EMERSON, SECRETARY.

In the experience of missionary societies, as of individuals, some of the years stand out clearly distinct from the others marking the unusual in either material or spiritual progress. Such is the year just closed in the work of the American Missionary Association; a year of intense watchfulness of the income and outgo, a year of heavy clouds of uncertainty causing deep concern, and of a final burst of clear sunshine. In the retrospect we count it a year of mercies. The cancelling of the old debt brought relief and thankfulness; but not until the close of the twelve months with its appropriation to all departments of this great mission field provided for, its obligations met, could the joy of the American Missionary Association be full. We praise God, and we give thanks to all who by their timely offerings have made this a year of freedom.

Women's organizations have had a part in this good work as follows: Contributions through thirty-two state organizations, $28,384.60. Additional contributions from local societies, $3,034.73. Total, $31,419.33.

This is less than we reported last year, but we feel confident that Women's Societies have had a larger share in the support of the work of the A. M. A. than is shown by these figures—an unrecorded share. It has perhaps not been clearly understood that according to the present arrangement contributions for the work of the Association from Women's Societies sent through the State Unions, may apply on the apportionment of churches that have adopted the Apportionment Plan.

As we recall the early years of Woman's Organized Work, the small beginning in pledges on the part of Women's Societies, the steady although slow advance, it is clearly apparent that the crediting of donations from this source has been an encouragement to progress.

An important movement during the past year was the organization of the Council of Women for Home Missions. It is interdenominational. Already nine Women's Boards are represented, including Congregational Woman's Work through the Federation of State Organizations. As stated in its leaflet on history and constitution, "The purpose of the Council is to integrate the work of all Home Mission Summer Schools or Conferences, to provide interdenominational text-books for Home Mission Study Classes, to provide literature for interdenominational use, to arrange a service for an interdenominational Day of Prayer, to care for Home Mission interests in schools and colleges, and, in general, to promote interdenominational fellowship and co-operation among Women's Boards and Societies. It is believed that the Council will prove to be a valuable factor in broadening the outlook of Home Mission women, and in making more effective their efforts to extend the gospel of the Kingdom in the homeland."

The fourth Thursday in February has been chosen for the Day of Prayer and all are urged to observe it.

We certainly have reason to hope for good financial results from the growth of mission study. There is a steady stream of inquiry for information. A Secretary must needs be alert to keep up with the demand for material on a great variety of missionary topics. The A. M. A. furnishes "helps," through its new leaflets, and three programs on the A. M. A. work are planned for in the list of Federation programs for the year. The material for the first, on "Alabama," is now ready for circulation. For those who will use the latest text-book, "From Darkness to Light; the Story of Negro Progress" (price 30 cents), special pamphlets have been issued by the A. M. A. canvassing the situation from various viewpoints and showing particularly what has been accomplished through work of the A. M. A. Two new books have been published (price $1.25 and $1.50), "The Crusade of Brotherhood" (a history), by Secretary Beard, and "Christian Reconstruction of the South," by Superintendent Douglass, both of which will be useful in connection with the text-book of the year. For current news there is the combined magazine, "The American Missionary" (subscription 50 cents), helpful to every leader of missionary meetings.

During the year, speakers have been provided in response to many requests from Missionary Societies and especially for County and State Annual Meetings of the Women's Organizations. In this connection itineraries have been planned so as to reach the greatest number of societies possible without too great an outlay of traveling expense. While the results of all this and of the influence of the "Together Campaign" on women's circles are not apparent this year, except in a manifest desire to learn more about the work, we look yet for an abundant harvest in larger financial support, which we trust may begin with this new year.

But let us now turn to the sections where our mission work lies. Fourteen of our Women's State Organizations are supporting in full forty-five missionaries located among the colored people and American Highlanders in Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, North Carolina, South Carolina and Tennessee; among the Indians at Santee, Neb.; Elbowoods, N. Dak.; Little Eagle, S. Dak., and Crow Agency, Mont.; in Porto Rico at Santurce, Humacao and Fajardo. These and other State Unions aid in other parts of the field, including Alaska, the Chinese and Japanese on the Pacific coast and in Hawaii. Every part of our A. M. A. field is thus in touch with Woman's Organized Work. If this means interest in and love for these missions, how large the outcome should be. Many a bit of sunshine goes to the field in response to the "missionary letters." Many a burden is lightened through the well-filled missionary boxes providing bedding and furnishings for the many dormitories and mission homes. For in its great system of Christian schools the A. M. A. has many house mothers or matrons, as well as teachers, showing how to make and keep a comfortable, properly furnished, well ordered home.

In no line of missions, Foreign or Home, is there the peculiar isolation that pertains to a large portion of the A M. A. field which makes recognition by home friends very precious. One of these missionaries in the depths of her conviction of the need of the work has recently opened her heart to us thus: "The need of money is apparent everywhere. Above all things we need to teach these people to be neat and sanitary in their living, but what can be done unless the people who are back of this work in the churches of the North see our need and come to our assistance. The teachers here are sacrificing a great deal, more than we would care to tell, in coming to this work, but although we are in a great measure cut off from society on account of the work in which we are engaged, although we must as missionaries teach for a fraction of what the teachers of the North are receiving, and do more work to reduce the expense of more teachers, we do this willingly, not because we need to, but because there is need that we should. All cannot leave their homes to come to this work. Those of us who have no homes or who can be spared from them, and are willing to cut ourselves off from better salaries, better advantages, better living and general recognition of our own race in the place where we work, come to this work that a race, and our country through that race, may be benefited. Many teachers are loaded with work to the breaking point. They do it voluntarily and so cheerfully that no one realizes the sacrifice they are making, yet they continue with unabated enthusiasm in the work which has come to mean a substitute for home friends, society and everything. Personally I have not yet reached such height of self-sacrifice. I intensely want the good and pleasant things of life, yet this work holds me for some subtle reason I do not myself understand. It may be just God's wish and will for me. I think it is."

The writer of this relinquishes a position of honor in educational lines and a liberal salary to take up missionary work among the Negroes in the South. There are others whose life at home would be full of social delight and honor with abundant opportunity for usefulness, and yet year by year they give of their very life in the training of leaders for the colored race, and in obscure places among other of the most backward peoples in this land.

What a field is this that appeals to the women of our home churches. It calls for laborers. It needs the best equipped Christian teachers dedicated to missionary service, willing to take hard places and only a moderate salary such as a missionary treasury can allow. It calls for laborers. It needs all the women in every church to be interested, to be informed, to contribute toward the maintenance of those who can go and are willing to go and do the hard work in any part of the field of the American Missionary Association. What can we do individually, what can we do through our Women's Organizations, toward meeting these two great needs in the coming year?

sense of personal responsibility for the dignity of our Government. One quarter of these people find their homes in our cities, and the urban problem is confessedly the unsolved problem in American life. It is here that our Sabbath desecration centres; it is here that our socialistic and anarchistic schemes are concocted; it is here that we find our largest difficulty in the relations which exist between labor and capital; it is here that the great industrial battles of the future are to be waged. Here is the peril point in the American life of to-day. But the thing to which I direct especial attention is this: that here, also, is the opportunity, here also is the hope. Out of the very things which give us disquiet to-day there is to come the sound of a great victory and of a matchless triumph.

Take, for example, our great national peril. Everybody knows what it is. Mr. Horton, in that beautiful volume of addresses to the Yale students upon preaching, says, "it is the power of material progress, it is the ferment of growing lucre, which forbids the entrance of the spirit of God;" and he beseeches those young men, starting out upon their life-mission, to set their faces like flint against the temptations which in this direction will be addressed to them, lest this fair land of ours, the latest born of time and the future hope of the world, shall become a "race shrivelling in the sunshine of its prosperous years." Mr. Carlyle, you remember, was never very much impressed when any one told him that this country was growing rapidly, because he could not see what advantage there was in having forty million dollar-hunters in the country over against twenty million hunters of the same kind.

Against the reign of the plutocrat every reformer lifts up his voice to-day. We are told that one of the great perils of our land is this: that so much of the capital, so much of the wealth, of the conntry is being concentrated into the hands of the few. Now what is happening? While the reformer is lifting up his voice, and while you and I are anxiously looking for a solution of this problem, that great giant which is known as public opinion, is laying a heavy hand to-day, as never before, upon the shoulder of the American Crœsus and is telling him that he is not his own and that the money which fills his coffers must in fair proportion, at least, be given back again to the land which has given it to him. The rising tide of a strong public opinion is making it every day more and more impossible for a man to hoard up great riches in this land of ours simply for the satisfaction of his own selfish desires, with no care or no thought for the institutions of the land, on the one hand, or the satisfaction of the crying needs of the country on the other. Our religious, our philanthropic and our educational institutions are receiving the silver streams which flow from the rich man's pocket-book to-day as never before; and the thing which but just now has been dreaded so thoroughly in this country as a great peril is to be seen, I believe, in the days that are to come, to be one of the great sources of benediction, because the wealth which to-day is concentrated in the hands of the few, is through them to be poured out with lavish prodigality upon the country's needs.

Oh, it is a blessed thing to be able to discern the signs of the times. You remember, on one occasion, when James Russell Lowell was our minister to England, some one in public playfully chaffed him with the fact that all the English storms came from America. Mr. Lowell very wittily replied that that was because of our system of protection—that we could afford to make better bad weather than anybody else. And he spoke truly, because the bad weather which we are making, is continually generating tempest winds whose mission it is to compel the old Ship of State to forge ahead rapidly.

Some one has said that whenever we make any change, howsoever small, in our national housekeeping, there is always some one who will arise and declare with the alderman that the country will wake up to find its throat cut in consequence; whereas the fact always is that the United States wakes up, shakes itself, looks around and goes about its business as if nothing had happened. It is easy to cry, "Ichabod, Ichabod, the glory is departed," but he who has the spirit of those who have gone before us cannot fail to cultivate the sense of a great discernment by virtue of which he shall see that, in the providential hand of God, what we call our great American perils are to be translated into greater American blessings.

William Lloyd Garrison was once addressing a little company of contrabands, the shackles from whose feet had been just now struck off, and he said to them, "Now you are free, let us give three cheers," and there was wonder of eye and speechlessness of lip. They did not know how to cheer. Alas for them, alas for all in this land of ours who, with equal possibility and with enlarging opportunities, know not how to cheer!

The spirit of discernment, dear friends, fails not to see the peril, fails not to discern the task; but it sees—and oh, it thanks God for the vision! it sees that in the providential hand of God this land of ours is being moulded more and more to the purposes and to the larger uses of the God of yesterday and of to-day and of to-morrow. It sees out of chaos order springing, out of ignorance the gleaming eye of intelligence, and out of the unfavorable situation it sees the dawn of a better and brighter day. The spirit of discernment is always confident; it lays its emphasis, not upon disparagement, not upon peril, but upon opportunity and power. It believes in the dirge, but it believes that the place of the dirge is the funeral; the hallelujah chorus it confesses is the only symphony for a triumphal march. The spirit of discernment understands that this land of ours is to be Immanuel's land, that not only America belongs to the future but that the future belongs to America, and that both America and the future belong to God. This spirit is always confident; it has the beat and the throb of a mighty conviction; it is alive with certainty; it never sobs, it always sings!

"United States, the ages plead Present and past in undersong,
Go put your creed into your deed
Nor speak with double tongue.

Be just at home. Then write
Your scroll of honor on the sea,
And let the broad Atlantic roll
The ferry of the free."

I suggest to you, as a second characteristic of this spirit to which I am urging you, that it is the spirit of a great devotion. The spirit of a great devotion is always the counterpart, in a loyal soul, of the spirit of a clear discernment. When men see clearly they act nobly and loyally. It is not strange that Elisha clave unto Elijah after he had been permitted by the prophet to see the radiant and the glorious vision which met his eye. The late Chief-Justice Chase has said that the sending of the electric current across the sea is the greatest achievement of modern times, and John Bright declares that he who accomplished this feat is our modern Columbus who, after crossing the ocean more than forty times in twelve years, has succeeded in mooring the new world close alongside of the old. Cyrus W. Field was a man who saw the vision of a stupendous possibility, and the vision tarried. The electric spark could cross the sea—that was the vision. It should—that was the purpose. Difficulties after difficulties arrayed themselves in serried column and hurled themselves against this man of vision and this man of devoted purpose. His friends fell away from him; his money once and again was lost; the hungry sea snatched his cable from his grasp over and over again, and still in the dauntlessness of a great faith, the man pushed on. "What would you do," said Lord Clarendon one day to Mr. Field, "if the experiment should fail and should not prove a success? Suppose, for example, that you should lose your cable when the sea had half been crossed, what would you do, Mr. Field?" "What would I do?" said the intrepid soul, "I would charge it all to profit and loss and begin again." And so he did, and for twelve long, weary years that man, baffled by every fortune and meeting almost every possible difficulty, still pursued with the eagerness which is born of conviction, the consuming purpose to which he had given his life, his influence, his brain, his money, his all. And when at last the experiment was a success, the first living words which went flying upon their lightning way under the sea were these: "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will to men." It is simply an illustration, my friends, taken out of the world of commerce, of this fact: that loyal souls who see clearly will always act devotedly. We need not tarry to look into the world of art or of science or of literature for further illustration of this thought. We can come at once to the thought which is uppermost in your mind and in mine to-night and affirm that, so far as devotion is concerned, in its spirit, in its principle, in its illustration, it finds its choicest manifestation in missionary literature. There is none choicer save that which is found in missionary life.

For where does the missionary receive his inspiration? Where indeed, but from the vision which meets his eye of the cross in the glorious sky with its sign, "By this conquer." Beneath the persuasion of that legend he turns away from home and friends and loved ones to seek the larger and the deeper purposes of his life. On his mission of love he crosses the ocean and dwells in the uttermost parts of the earth. Because he sees in his own land, America, an opportunity precious and pressing for the establishing of his faith, he girds himself in the heroism of a great purpose; and, turning his back upon comfort, upon salary, upon preferment, upon power, upon all those things which minister to the ambition of the average man, he takes his way, perchance, into the lowlands of the South to live a fettered life so far as occasion for a wide reach of power is concerned, but a life which is continually fed in its spirit by a sense of the sublimity of its mission, and which asks no choicer, no dearer occupation in the world than the blessed privilege of ministering to God's lowly ones.

And not only the sons of vision, the daughters of vision are there as well. Many of them are of gentle blood; they have left homes of comfort and refinement; they have subjected themselves, to say the least, to all the inconveniences of the life to which they go, but still, with countenances so radiant and with hearts so fully at rest because of the inspiration of the purpose which sends them forth, that if you should meet them upon the most gloomy day and ask them what was the prospect, they would answer you in the words of that missionary who after ten years' labor had not seen a single soul born into the kingdom, "What of the prospect?" "Bright, bright as the promises of God." These heroes and heroines in the Southland are doing matchless work; God bless them every one. The women, by the beauty, the nobility, the sacrifice of their lives are wringing from unwilling lips the exclamation which years ago in the early church voiced the wonder of the Roman, "What women these Christians have!"

I want to say, however, that this spirit of devotion to which I have alluded is, especially in our missionaries, a spirit of wide comprehension. They cannot be restrained. You perhaps read in the paper not very long ago that some one visited the monastery of Father Ignatius, who was in this country lecturing some two years since, and who is a very distinguished monk. It was in the middle of the winter, and the monks barefooted were entering the chapel, having come across the snow. The observer remarked, "Ah, there goes Father Ignatius; he is propagating Christianity by cultivating chilblains!" Everybody knows what was the truth that was underneath the witticism—that these friends had been caught and held in the

AUDITORS' CERTIFICATE.

We have employed Frederick C. Manvel, Certified Public Accountant of the State of New York, to examine the books and accounts of H. W. Hubbard, Treasurer of The American Missionary Association, for the year ending September 30th, 1909, and herewith submit his statement of the results of his work as a part of our report.

We have also made a careful examination of all bonds and other securities held by the Association and find the same to agree with the records in the books and balance sheet of same date.

The Treasurer's Bond was submitted to us and found to be in order.

EDWIN H. BAKER,
JOHN E. LEECH,
Auditors.

New York, October 11, 1909.

MR. EDWIN H. BAKER, } Auditors.
MR. JOHN E. LEECH, }

GENTLEMEN:

In accordance with your instructions I have made an audit of the accounts of the Treasurer of the AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION for the fiscal year ending September 30th, 1909, and hereby report that I have found the same correct, with the same system and methods employed in every part of the work which have been noted and commended in former reports.

The detailed accounts have been carefully kept and have been examined monthly as to the clerical accuracy of the work. The cancelled checks for the payments have been compared with the entries in the Cash Book, the footings and postings have been verified and the monthly reports and statements have been reviewed and compared.

Certificates of balances to the credit of the Association have been obtained from the several Banks and Trust Companies and in every instance have been found to agree with the books of the Treasurer.

I have verified the figures in the Trial Balance and compared them with the General Ledger and the Resources have been verified by a personal examination of the securities by the Committee, in which I assisted.

The receipts this year on the Current Fund account have exceeded the payments by the sum of $47,365.48, and leave a credit balance in this account at the close of the year of $447.56 instead of the debit balance of the previous year of $46,917.92.

Respectfully,

FREDERICK C. MANVEL,
Certified Public Accountant of the State of New York.

New York, October 11th, 1909.

toils of the incidental so firmly and so thoroughly that they had forgotten the deeper demands of the essential. A missionary cannot be caught in the toils of the incidental. The essential is the abiding thought in all of his life. He sees Jesus Christ with no narrow vision; he understands that the Master comes to the world not only to save the soul but to save the life; he understands that the physical life and the intellectual life and the moral life must be ministered unto at his hand in order that there may be a platform broad enough built in the soul for the spiritual life to have its largest play and its highest exercise.

And so our missionaries in the Southland are teaching the young people the principles of nursing and of sewing; they are showing them how in simple fashion to keep house and take care of the homes which will one day be theirs. They are feeding their minds with the truths of science and of knowledge, not forgetting all the while to permeate these with the spirit of Jesus Christ, that thus lifting them to a rightness of character and an elevation of life through the forgiveness of their sins and the illumination of their spiritual perceptions they may place their hands in the hand of Christ and send them out into the world to fight their manly and womanly battles and to win—as, thank God, so many of them are winning to-night—their personal, their individual, their solitary but their not less glorious victories. God give to the churches of America a spirit of devotion which shall be as true, as loyal, as sacrificial as that which is the moving inspiration in the lives of our missionaries!

I want to suggest, before I close, one other principle with relation to this spirit to which I am directing your attention. It is a spirit of denial. I have said that it is a spirit of discernment; that it is a spirit of devotion; I say in conclusion that it is a spirit of denial. There is a story about Socrates that he once went through a bazar in which were exposed very many beautiful and costly articles for sale. He had no money with which to purchase; he had no desire for purchasing; and, as he turned away from the exhibit, he said to a friend, "How many things there are in the world which I do not want!" It was a testimony to the supremacy of the man's mind and to the sublime loftiness of his spirit. He had brought himself into touch with those things which were from above, and therefore there were multitudinous things in the world around him which he simply did not want. The test of any man's character is to be found in his relationship to those things he does not want, the things he can do without for the sake of something which is nobler and higher and purer.

I think it is a fair question to-day whether the church of Jesus Christ is not caught in the toils of an easy-going luxury. I think it is a fair question whether we, for the sake of our faith, are giving, as Mr. Spurgeon declared, anything more than the "cheese parings and candle ends." I think it is a fair question whether you and I have ever espoused a spirit of self-denial for the cause of Jesus Christ which is worthy to be named when placed by the side of the devotion of such lives as I have alluded to to-night. Heroism of life does not always consist in separating one's self from those things to which one has been accustomed. Many a time it consists in going into the life in the heart of which one spends his days, and there winning the victory which others have sought apart from the thoroughfares of the world.

You remember that story which they tell about Henry the Second of Germany, how he wearied of the occupations of the throne and of the anxieties of his royal life and so made his way across the country to the monastery of Bernard and asked if he might be received as a monk. Bernard at once recognized his royal visitor and was surprised. Pausing for a moment, he said, "If we receive you as a monk do you promise loyalty and allegiance to the order?" "I do," said the monarch. "And will you be obedient?" asked Bernard. "I will," replied the king. "Very well, then," said the monk, "I receive you as one of our brotherhood. Now go back again to the world from which you have hither come, mount the throne and live a king and still a monk." Henry the Second turned away, went back again to his throne and ever after ruled in the spirit of a great obedience, caring not first for himself but for those committed to his charge, and ever and always, because of the sacrifice which had come to his life, feeling the impulse of a great hope and of a great strength. Ah, friends, to take the principle of obedience and work it out in the arena of our own lives, that is heroism, that is dignity, that is achievement. To have such a vision of the possibilities of the kingdom of God in this land of ours that it will stimulate us, first, to a great devotion and then to a great denial in order that the devotion may be realized, that is to see the King in his beauty; it is to live not a solemn but a joyful life.

Do you remember what it says in the Old Testament about good King Hezekiah when he came to the throne, how he found the people immersed in their iniquity and in their sin? They had closed the temple doors, they had dismissed the priests, there were no burnt offerings and no incense; and the first act of the royal monarch was to open the temple doors, to reinstate the priests and to build the fires upon the sacrificial altars. The burnt offering was the offering of consecration, of confession, of self-devotement to God. And the Scripture reads with marvelous suggestion that "when the burnt offerings began the song of the Lord began also." The sacrifice wakens the song; it is life's most exultant strain; only those sing richly and purely who sing out of the depths of some sacrifice in which they themselves are forgotten and the thing they love better than life is enthroned.

May we not then ask ourselves, in these closing moments to-night, especially as we are in presence of this table of our Lord, whether we are personally putting into our lives a spirit of denial which will make them

REPORT OF THE EASTERN DISTRICT FOR 1908-1909.

REV. GEORGE H. GUTTERSON, District Secretary.

The Eastern District comprises the States of Rhode Island, New Hampshire, Vermont, Maine and Massachusetts.

Rhode Island has 43 churches, 15 of which do not contribute to the A. M. A.
New Hampshire has 187 churches, 65 of which do not contribute to the A. M. A.
Vermont has 213 churches, 61 of which do not contribute to the A M. A.
Massachusetts has 603 churches, 148 of which do not contribute to the A. M. A.
Maine has 263 churches, 130 of which do not contribute to the A. M. A.

Of the total, 1309, 419 do not contribute to the A. M. A. Of these 1309 churches, 204 are without pastors.

Summary of work in the Eastern District for the year 1908-1909:

Number of churches visited during the year	54
Number of Conferences visited, Women's Meetings, Men's Clubs, and other meetings	27
Number of addresses made before C. E. Societies	3
Number of addresses made before Sunday Schools	8
Number of miles traveled	9,559
Total number of addresses	110
Number of letters written	10,260
Leaflets sent out	39,726
Collection envelopes sent out	20,910
Postals sent out	1,609
Mite boxes sent out	6,042
Callers received	2,700
Invitations received	426

The most notable event of the year was the Together Campaign so called. This joint undertaking of all the Congregational missionary societies to raise half a million dollars, of which amount $273,097.84 was intended to pay off the debts of the three societies, the remainder to be divided between all the societies. In most instances this campaign was warmly welcomed by both pastors and laymen, the latter especially rendering cheerful and efficient service without which the campaign could not have succeeded.

This seems to have been the first merger of the Congregational missionary boards in the work of presenting the claims and securing gifts of the people. Apart from the financial success attained, the campaign was fruitful in a most sympathetic and cooperative spirit among the societies. It was a great campaign of information, not only for the speakers but also for the audiences.

This was intended also to call attention to the Apportionment Plan, which must be set up or further embarrassment will surely come to the treasuries of the societies. Excellent progress has been made in New England in getting support for the Apportionment Plan. The point to be aimed at is a gift from every church to all of the seven societies, and in order to secure this, a Missionary Budget and a Missionary Committee in every church and as far as possible a gift from every member of the church and congregation. This would equalize the burden and if fully carried out, would not be an exacting tax on any one.

In the Together Campaign the number of places visited by the District Secretary was 40; number of meetings held, 112; number of addresses made, 173; miles traveled, 4,992.

The work of the Together Campaign in the Eastern District as far as securing places, arranging dates, conducting a large correspondence and sending out large amounts of literature was all done in the Boston Office of the A. M. A.

In February an extra amount of work was done in connection with the Centennial of Lincoln's birth. A special summary of his life, with many extracts from his speeches, was sent out to the pastors in the District, with many leaflets concerning the work of the A. M. A.

REPORT OF THE PACIFIC DISTRICT FOR 1908-1909.

REV. GEORGE W. HINMAN, District Secretary.

By vote of the Executive Committee, May 11, '09, the Pacific District (Washington, Oregon, California, Arizona, Nevada, Utah and Idaho) was established, and Rev. George W. Hinman appointed District Secretary. Preliminary study of the Association's work in the South and a long illness in the summer postponed the opening of a district office till the middle of August, when temporary headquarters were established in Seattle.

Interest in the work of the Association in this district has been largely confined to the support of the local Chinese and Japanese missions, but considerable interest has been shown in the Alaska work, the neglected Indians of the Pacific Coast, and the American Highlanders. The liberal gifts to the California Oriental Mission, auxiliary to the American Missionary Association, by the California churches, are an assurance that a presentation of the Association's varied field to the churches of the whole district will result in larger contributions.

The offerings of the churches of the Pacific District to the Association during the last fiscal year amounted to $15,390.72, including legacies available for immediate use to the amount of $1,416.65. This total did not quite equal the amount for the preceding year, as the California offerings in that year were swelled by large individual gifts. This year the Together Campaign affected somewhat the amount of individual gifts, as many who are in the habit of making annual personal offerings to the work gave most liberally for the wiping out of the debts of the societies. One of the largest single gifts to the Together Campaign came from a loyal supporter of the American Missionary Association in Southern California. Washington and Oregon just held their own in gifts for the Association, in spite of the fact that the Exposition has drawn heavily upon the pocketbooks. Both states raised only about forty per cent. of their apportionment, but this was because in Oregon only 15 churches out of 59 made an offering during the fiscal year, and in Washington only 28 out of 174. The Woman's Home Missionary Unions in both states helped materially to swell the totals. In addition to their offerings to the treasury of the Association, two Seattle churches made liberal contributions to a special campaign in the local work of the Association for the Japanese. In California the offerings reported for the California Oriental Mission, auxiliary to the American Missionary Association, including the monthly offerings of the Chinese and Japanese in the mission schools, as well as the contributions to the general treasury of the Association, reach an amount somewhat larger than the apportionment for the state. But if only the gifts from churches and individuals in the churches are counted, approximately eighty per cent. of the apportionment is raised. In the other states of the district the offerings for the Association's work were double the amount of the preceding year, but still far below what might be reasonably expected.

In the short time the Pacific District office has been opened the work of establishing relations with the churches, women's societies, Sunday Schools and Endeavor Societies, by means of correspondence, public addresses and distribution of literature, has progressed satisfactorily, and a demand for presentation of the work and information about it is being developed. But at the beginning of organized work in this district it has seemed best to work as much as possible through the Systematic Benevolence Committees of the State Conferences in plans for developing interest and contributions for the Association. Such co-operation has been welcomed in the committees already formed or just forming, and promises well for the effort to reach every church with an authorized presentation of work for which Congregational churches are responsible. Greater responsibility for raising the apportioned budget of missionary funds is being assumed by the committees of several of the State Conferences, and the coming year may see organized campaigns under their direction for this purpose.

The furthering of general benevolence plans along the lines suggested by the National Council's Committee on Apportionment has seemed under the circumstances to be the best method of bringing up the special interest and offering to the Association. The secretary has been frequently called upon to speak for foreign missions, and has welcomed the opportunity for its own sake, and to call attention to the common missionary spirit of the work in foreign lands and in A. M. A. fields.

A most active interest in the Association's work is shown by the Woman's Societies of the several states, as shown by their study of the fields of work, as well as their considerable gifts. The presence in the churches of the Coast of many men and women who have done service in the schools of the Association and who are glad to witness to the need and efficiency of the Association's work, provides a force which may be utilized for the development of a larger sympathy.

The churches of the Pacific Northwest, struggling with home missionary problems, are yet ready for an advance in the broader missionary interest and giving, and would well repay a careful cultivation in the interest of the Association by one residing in the midst of that great region, but the requirements of the work in other parts will probably necessitate the removal of the district office to San Francisco within a short time.

NATIONAL FEDERATION OF WOMAN'S CONGREGATIONAL STATE HOME MISSIONARY ORGANIZATIONS.

MRS. G. H. SCHNEIDER.

The fourth annual meeting of the Federation, held at Elgin, Ill., Oct. 6-8, closed one of the best years of its history.

The States not federated are Wyoming, Montana, Idaho, North Carolina and Georgia. Maine having effected a Union and affiliating with us was the crown of the year.

Approximately $148,700 was contributed by these thirty-two federated states through regular channels for Congregational work. More important because more fundamental is the awakening, educational and molding power of the work of the women throughout our churches which this amount implies.

"The American Missionary" has been a great boon to the Federation by bringing under one cover all branches of home missions for which the women stand, and is in line with the plan long followed by the various state organizations. Its several pages allotted to us for programs and other communications are dearly prized.

Each year adds fresh proof that from an interdenominational standpoint the Federation has indeed "come to the Kingdom for such a time as this." Without it we would have no equipment for working with other denominations in a national way for home missions.

By attendance and supplying missionaries, lecturers and teachers we have contributed to the success of Summer Schools of Missions at Minnetonka, Minn., Winona, Ind., Boulder, Col., and Northfield, Mass., and gained much of the resulting benefits.

The President, Mrs. B. W. Firman, has spoken at seven annual meetings during the year and at many other gatherings that were of wide influence if not of a national character.

The officers are: President, Mrs. B. W. Firman, 1012 Iowa St., Oak Park, Ill.; Vice-Presidents, Mrs. James L. Hill, Salem, Mass.; Mrs. F. Eggert, Portland, Oregon; Mrs. H. B. Wey, Atlanta, Georgia; Secretary, Mrs. G. H. Schneider, 3361 Adams St., Chicago; Treasurer, Mrs. H. A. Flint, 604 Willis Ave., Syracuse, N. Y.

We are even now looking forward to "Boston, 1910." May we bring with us worthy records of wise, whole-souled endeavor!

The Bureau of Woman's Work of the American Missionary Association keeps constantly in touch with the Federation of Woman's Organizations, cooperating with them in many ways. A large correspondence from the mission fields of the A. M. A., gathered by the Bureau, passes into the hands of the women representing different State Unions under the Federation and this correspondence contributes much in the prosecution of their work. The American Missionary Association thoroughly appreciates the energy and wisdom displayed by the Federation of Woman's Organizations and its generous interest in this field of mission service.

Freedom through the Truth.

SERMON

By Rev. S. H. Woodrow, D.D.

Delivered at the Annual Meeting, Burlington, Vermont, October 19, 1909.

"Ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free."—John 8:32.

"I am the way, the truth and the life."—John 14:6.

The text contains three great words: knowledge, truth, freedom.

Each of these words introduces us to a great realm of thought, attainment or enjoyment. There is the realm of "knowledge," including all that man knows or ever can know. The realm of "truth" is the object of all scientific, historical, philosophical or theological study and the realm of "freedom," where body, mind and soul find room for their fullest development and their freest exercise.

There is in it the certainty of knowledge, "ye shall know"; the object of knowledge, "the truth"; and the result of this knowledge of the truth, "freedom."

True freedom can never be attained in any other way than through a knowledge of the truth and action in harmony therewith. "He is a freeman whom the truth makes free."

Ignorance shackles, knowledge liberates. Vice fetters, virtue frees. Each of these words has been a subject for discussion.

Can a man know anything? If so, what are the limits of his knowledge? Some have maintained that because human knowledge is not absolute it is not knowledge.

For our purpose we may assume that man knows and knows that he knows. Though his understanding is not infinite his knowledge is real so far as it goes.

One does not have to eat all the grapes in a vineyard to know the taste of grapes, or drink all the water in the ocean in order to be assured of its saline qualities, or to have seen every sunset in order to be certain that one sunset is beautiful. It behooves us, however, to be modest in our assertions, for as Edison has said, in speaking about electrical matters, where he is accounted a "Wizard," "No one knows one billionth of one per cent. about anything." Such modesty may well be commended to those scientists and theologians who are sure that they have measuerd the mind of the Infinite and are competent to instruct Him.

We must, however, hold fast to the possibility of knowledge and of its reliability within certain limits. We must also see that it is possible for "knowledge" to grow from more to more. This increase of knowledge during the past one hundred years has been perfectly stupendous. One can hardly catalogue the new subjects of thought and objects of investigation. Every realm of water, earth and air is being explored. Man seeks a knowledge of himself, and of the world and of the universe. Above all, he craves to know the great First Cause, the wisdom that planned and the power that executes.

Man can know more about more things than ever before, yet the knowledge but blazes the path where the great highway of verified knowledge is to run. All this study and investigation is that we may "know the truth."

In our day there is no assertion that we hear more often than that we should be "Seekers after truth."

Of the importance and desirability of such pursuit there can be no question.

But at once we are confronted by the question raised by Pilate and unanswered by our Lord, "What is truth?"

No conclusive answer has ever been given to that question.

We are all agreed that we should search for truth, but as to what it is and how we shall know it when we have found it are open questions.

Truth has to do with persons, facts and principles.

Of persons it means those who are genuine, sincere, frank and honest.

We say of him, "He is a true man."

He is gold not dross, reality not sham.

Truth in facts means conformity to reality. If the report conforms to what actually happened it is a true report.

If the scientist has accurately observed any phenomenon and correctly reported the results of his observation, it is a truth.

Principles are true when they are real and universal, not affected by time and place.

There are true men, real facts, absolute principles, and the object of all research and investigation is to know them.

We must bear in mind, however, that all knowledge and truth are not equally valuable for moral and religious purposes.

Hudson's discovery of the river that bears his name was of vastly more importance than the location of the North Pole.

The one was destined to float the commerce of the world; the other must ever remain the lonely dwelling place of a few polar bears.

The one discovery affected the lives of millions of human beings; the other will furnish a theme for discussion in learned geographical societies.

The sailing of the Clermont and the discovery of canals on Mars are both facts, but their relative importance for mankind is not the same.

The one revolutionized the water transportation of the world; the other adds an interesting fact to our astronomical knowledge.

It is of interest to discover the "harmony of the spheres," but it is of vastly more importance to discover how men can live together in unity and peace here on earth.

Then we have this other great word "freedom."

What is freedom? Is it liberty for every man to do "what seems right in his own eyes," or is it obedience to great principles and laws of truth and right?

Is it a subjective feeling or an objective condition?

Is it something that can be conferred or withheld by an edict of government, or something that must be acquired by years of struggle, and that having been acquired can never be taken away?

To the man who has been made free by a knowledge of and obedience to the truth "stone walls do not a prison make nor iron bars a cage;" and to the man whose mind is shackled by ignorance and his soul bound by sin no condition can be one of freedom.

We seek to enlarge the bounds of knowledge; we engage zealously in the search for truth because through this knowledge of the truth there comes that inner freedom of mind and soul that ultimately finds expression in just laws and free institutions.

What is that truth mentioned in the text that was to become the universal emancipation?

Surely it could not be truth in the abstract. Truth to be effective must be concrete and definite.

The answer is given in the second text, the declaration of the Master himself, "I am the truth."

A knowledge of the truth revealed and realized in and through the Lord Jesus Christ is the world's emancipator.

What the world has always needed is truth personified. Mother love in the abstract stirs no emotion, but mother love personified by the eternal madonna, the mother bending in love over the babe in her arms stirs every heart.

Patriotism in the abstract arouses no enthusiasm, but patriotism personified by the man who carries his country's flag through shot and shell and plants it upon the enemy's ramparts thrills every heart.

Abstract truth about the great First Cause stirs the intellect and quickens the imagination, but concrete truth in Jesus Christ revealing the Fatherhood of God and His unfailing kindness stirs the heart and gives impetus to the will.

I. Jesus, the Truth, the Great Emancipator.

Knowledge of Jesus, conformity to His character, obedience to His commands, the exercise of His spirit, have been freeing the world from ignorance, superstition, idolatry and sin.

Jesus emancipates the intellect. Jesus taught and illustrated the truth about God and man.

These are the foci in the ellipse of knowledge. All knowledge is of value as it throws light upon the character and work of God and influences the character and work of men. The world may be studied, as the product of God"s thought and the expression of His creative energy or as the workship and dwelling place of man.

All scientific facts of zoology, botany, geology, or astronomy but tend to broaden and heighten our conception of the wisdom and power of the Creator.

All these facts give us a better knowledge of our world and point the pathway for its utilization for higher ends.

All inventions have for their end a fuller, more complete life under improved conditions.

Concerning these two great objects of thought, God and man, Jesus is the perfect revelation, He is "the truth." As the truth He is the revelation of God's eternal purpose in actual and adequate concrete fact. He is God's charter of liberty for all mankind. Through knowledge of Him, individuals, nations and races are made free.

Jesus gives us a knowledge of God, the eternal God, who is above the immensity of space and before and beyond the onmarching centuries. Yet this God marks the lilies' growth and the sparrow's fall and delights to have us call Him "Father." Jesus reveals all men to us and defines our relationship to and responsibility for them.

He sets a little child in the midst and the child can never again be ignored or set aside.

He pictures a half dead traveler by the wayside and never again can men walk comfortably on their way while ignoring human pain and suffering that they are able to alleviate.

It was more than an accident that caused Jesus to describe the wounded traveler as being neglected by the priest and the Levite.

There is always a danger that we mistake the husk of religion for its kernel, the visible body for the invisible spirit. When the Church becomes so absorbed in her services that she forgets her service; so absorbed in her ritual that she forgets her mission; God has to take some one from among the Samaritans or outcasts to teach her a lesson of genuine Christian spirit and neighborly helpfulness. Jesus helped the Syrophenecian woman and the Roman centurion as an object lesson that those of other races and nations were not beyond the pale of His helpful ministrations.

Jesus reveals all men, in all lands, in all time as the objects of human love and the subjects of human helpfulness. No man can escape his responsibility for loving and worshiping God or for loving and serving men.

The intellectual emancipation of the race comes from an apprehension of the fact that there is "One God who is Lord over all blessed forever." This brings science, philosophy and theology into unison. It emphasizes the fact that all truth is God's truth because the universe is the expression of His eternal thought.

There can be no conflict between God's world and God's Word.

Facts of science and laws of nature are as truly God's facts and laws as are the data of ethics and the laws of spiritual development.

Science, and theology, as well as poetry, prophecy, yearn for that "far-off, divine event for which all creation groans."

A time when individuals shall be worthy to be called the "sons and daughters of God;" a time when all races and nations of men shall live in peace and mutual helpfulness under just and equitable laws.

The revelation through Jesus of the Eternal God as Father and all men as brethren has done more to emancipate the human mind from narrowness and prejudice than anything else.

2. Jesus is the emancipator of the affections.

Through Him we are delivered from vile and unholy passions and desires.

The world is dominated more by its feelings than by its thoughts. When the emotions are strongly stirred reasonings go by the board.

Jesus emancipates the world by inducing it to "Set its affections upon things above, not on things that are upon the earth."

The right direction of the affections is of even more importance than the right direction of the thoughts.

This will account for the many exhortations to love found throughout the Bible. Love the truth, love good, love your neighbor, love God.

The world is in bondage to sensual appetites and carnal passions and Jesus delivers these slaves to the earthly and temporal that He may make them citizens of the spiritual and eternal.

3. Jesus emancipates the will.

We are in bondage to what we serve, whether sin or righteousness.

A free act is an act that is in conformity with the laws of reason and the dictates of conscience.

Never till a man knows what is right and loves what is good and chooses to act in harmony with his knowledge and affection is he a free man. What is true of the individual is true of every group of men.

Wise government is only possible where men are wise; good government where men are good; free government where men are free. Self-government is only possible where men govern self.

Not till a majority of the people rise above the police standard of morals is a government by and for the people possible.

When a majority have risen above that standard they will have the government and rules they deserve.

This threefold emancipation marks the rate of human progress.

There must come first the emancipation of the human mind. The progress along a single line will suffice to illustrate what I mean.

When it was believed that rulers were gods or demigods men bowed in abject fear before them.

When that changed to the "divine right of kings," their acts were being brought nearer the Judgment bar of the people. When their actions were seen to be anything but divine the people began to question the right by which they ruled. Had rulers by divine right lived and ruled divinely it would have been a long time before the people would have questioned their rights and a longer time before they would have been able to overthrow their rule.

It was their undivine living and their inhuman rule that led the people to question their right and ultimately overthrow their authority.

Thus came the day when the people declared that rulers derive their power from the free consent of the governed. Then was born formal or political freedom.

Now there looms on the horizon a still larger idea, that of industrial freedom. There is as yet confusion of thought and diversity of effort along various lines, but the clock of time moves forward, never backward. The sun casts broken rays above the horizon before it rises in splendor.

Government by the people has been realized in a measure and has been a success where the people were wise and strong enough to be trusted.

But government "for the people" is yet to come. Laws are too often in the interests of the classes rather than the masses, but when the knowledge and character of the people are adequate to the responsibility we shall have government not only by, but for the people.

These changes have come about by enlarging and correcting the thoughts of men. Here Jesus has led the way by teaching the worth of every man and showing us that he is an end in himself and is not to be used merely as a means to an end. Because he is a man he has a right to self-development, self-realization and self-expression.

There comes also the age-long work of emancipating the affections. If you know in any age the things that people loved and sought after you have the measure of the age. The Greek loved beauty and it found expression in art and literature; the Roman loved power and it expressed itself in laws and armies; the Hebrew loved righteousness and it expressed itself in ritual and prophecy. All these degenerated. The love of beauty became a dilettante imitation of the great masters; love of power satisfied itself with gladiatorial shows; love of righteousness degenerated into formal prayers and empty ceremonies. Men became temple treaders instead of spiritual worshipers.

Our modern world will make little real progress till it is won to a love of the highest and best things.

There will be the higher appreciation of the beauty of nature and the grandeur of the universe; a higher appreciation and a keener enjoyment of the beauties of art and literature; above all, there will be that love of justice and fair dealing that expresses itself in humane and equitable laws, and that enlarging social consciousness that imparts moral strength and spiritual enthusiasm to all efforts for the world's betterment.

By loving and serving our brother whom we have seen we prove the genuineness of our love for the Father whom we have not seen as yet. There are many promising tokens of these finer moral perceptions and these higher spiritual enthusiasms, but as a people we are not yet much in bondage to the material.

Just now the craze for amusements, the love of money, and the lust for power seem to be paramount.

On every hand millions are expended to amuse the populace; on every hand there is the fierce struggle for riches and the ostentatious display of wealth, whether honestly or dishonestly acquired, seems to matter little; while everywhere there is the scramble for place and power.

Standing in the midst of our modern world Jesus would deliver us from bondage to things by teaching us that a "Man's life consists not in the abundance of things which he possesses," and win us from slavery to the sensual and material by lifting our affections to that which is pure and good.

3. Then there must be the free, disciplined will.

The will that holds the man to the path of rectitude and high endeavor, whatever the temptations to relax or be satisfied with something less than the best.

Our thoughts and purposes are better than our acts because a weak or irresolute will refuses to obey the commands of reason and the dictates of conscience. Oftentimes we give ourselves undue credit for our charitable feeling and kindly thought, forgetting that their real value is attained only when they crystallize in act.

When the acts of a people are in conformity with the laws of reason and the dictates of conscience, then the truth has made them free and they are free indeed.

This indicates the pathway of progress and there is no other.

It is the straight and narrow path over which individual souls have traveled out of the bondage of sin into the liberty of the sons of God. It is the long, hard road over which nations and races have traveled into the promised land of freedom. With a great price they have obtained this freedom.

This is the stony highway over which all the belated peoples must travel into the light and liberty of the sons of God.

It indicates the road and the goal. Those who are now traveling the road can be warned by the errors and profit by the mistakes of those who have already gone along. They may also be strengthened by their success and cheered by their achievements.

It is one thing to go along and blaze a trail; it is quite another to march in the king's highway.

None of us have traveled so far on the pathway toward the highest civilization that we can afford to be either proud or boastful. This threefold emancipation is what we need in ever larger measure and this threefold emancipation is what we must give to those who are on the road behind us.

This is the great and good work in which the American Missionary Association has been engaged for nearly two-thirds of a century.

Schools and colleges have been planted that the intellect might be freed; churches have been founded that the soul might be set free; industrial training has been given that the will might be trained and all the forces correlated, but our industrial training and our schools and churches will be of little avail, unless in every shop there is the sanctifying presence of the carpenter of Nazareth; unless in every school there is heard the voice of the Great Teacher; and in every church there shines forth the glory of the world's Redeemer.

Without this we can make carpenters and blacksmiths; lawyers and doctors; teachers and preachers, but we cannot develop a race of men whom the truth has made free and who therefore can never be again brought into bondage.

Jesus, the Truth, will lead in all the coming centuries as He has in the past. Those who follow Him will never walk in intellectual or moral bondage. The nations that know not Him shall utterly perish while those that know and serve Him shall flourish in strength and beauty while within their borders all men rejoice in freedom through the truth.

BRIEF HISTORY.

Organization. The American Missionary Association was formed in 1846. It is distinctively a Christian missionary society to spread the gospel of Christ wherever it has opportunity. It was organized with pronounced opposition to slavery, which then existed, and against all race and caste prejudice, which still exists. It was preceded by four recently established missionary organizations, which were subsequently merged into it. They were the Amistad Committee, the Union Missionary Society, the Committee for West India Missions among the recently emancipated slaves of Jamaica, and the Western Evangelical Missionary Society for work among the American Indians.

In the foreign field, in 1854, its laborers numbered seventy-nine, located in West Africa, Jamaica, the Sandwich Islands, Siam, Egypt among the Copts, Canada among the colored refugees and in North America among the Indians.

The home departments embraced two distinct fields, the West and the South. There were 112 home missionaries employed by the Association in 1860, fifteen of them being located in the slave states and in Kansas.

The missions in the slave states gave rise to some of the most stirring events in the history of the Association, which has the distinction of beginning the first decided efforts, while slavery existed, to organize churches and schools in the South on an avowedly anti-slavery basis.

Among the Negroes. The crisis so long impending came at length, and the Union armies, entering the South in 1861, opened the way for the instruction and elevation of the colored people. The Association felt itself providentially prepared to engage in this work, and the first systematic effort for their relief was made by it. Large numbers of "contrabands," or escaping fugitive slaves, were gathered at Fortress Monroe and Hampton, Va., and were homeless and destitute. The Association, on the 17th of September, 1861, established the first day-school among the freedmen. That little school laid the foundation for the Hampton Institute which the Association founded later, and was the forerunner of the hundreds that have followed.

The Proclamation of Emancipation, dated January 1, 1863, insured the permanent freedom of Negroes who reached the Union lines. The American Missionary Association rapidly extended its work. At Norfolk the school of the previous year now numbered 1,200 pupils. Teachers were also sent to Newbern and Roanoke Island, N. C., to Beaufort, Hilton Head, St. Helena and Ladies' Island, S. C., and to St. Louis, Mo., and its force was scattered over the field held by our armies in the District of Columbia, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Florida, Louisiana, Kentucky, Tennessee, Mississippi, Arkansas, Missouri, and Kansas.

Close of the War. Freedmen's Bureau. Boston Council. The year 1865 was marked by the close of the Civil War, by the establishment, by act of Congress, of the Freedmen's Bureau, and by the holding of a National Council of Congregational Churches in Boston, which recommended to the churches to raise $250,000 for the work among the freedmen, and designated this Association as the organization fruitful, whether we have ever seen a vision of the possibilities of the kingdom of God which drives us with the sense of a strong devotion and with the spirit of a great denial?

You remember the old monk, who, after many wrestlings with his own soul, at last secured the victory and wrote upon his Bible that little Latin legend "Pereat Adam, vivat Jesu." "Old Adam in me die; live Jesus!" Let the old monk's prayer be ours, and then if we will ask for it the Master will give to us for our toils and for our work the double-portioned spirit. It will be the spirit of a great discernment, by virtue of which we shall see wonderful things in the world to which the Master summons us. It will be the spirit of a great devotion, in the strength of which we shall hurl ourselves with a new purpose into the very heart and heat of the toil to which the Master appoints us. It will be the spirit of a great denial which shall never fail to give our souls songs in the night and inspiration in the hour of trouble. God give it to you, to me, and to all who in any way tonight are interested in the missionary welfare of this land of ours! Amen.

THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION.

CONSTITUTION.

ART. I. This Society shall be called the American Missionary Association.

ART. II. The object of this Association shall be to conduct Christian missionary and educational operations and diffuse a knowledge of the Holy Scriptures in our own country and other countries which are destitute of them, or which present open and urgent fields of effort.

ART. III. Members of evangelical churches may be constituted members of this Association for life by the payment of thirty dollars into its treasury, with the written declaration at the time or times of payment that the sum is to be applied to constitute a designated person a life member; and such membership shall begin sixty days after the payment shall have been completed. Other persons, by the payment of the same sum, may be made life members, without the privilege of voting.

Every evangelical church which has within a year contributed to the funds of the Association, and every State Conference or Association of such churches, may appoint two delegates to the Annual Meeting of the Association; such delegates, duly attested by credentials, shall be members of the Association for the year for which they were thus appointed.

ART. IV. The Annual Meeting of the Association shall be held in the month of October or November, at such time and place as may be designated by the Association, or, in case of its failure to act, by the Executive Committee, by notice printed in the official publication of the Association for the preceding month.

ART. V. The officers of the Association shall be a President, five Vice-Presidents, a Corresponding Secretary or Secretaries, a Recording Secretary, a Treasurer, Auditors, and an Executive Committee of fifteen members, all of whom shall be elected by ballot.

At the first Annual Meeting after the adoption of this Constitution, five members of the Executive Committee shall be elected for the term of one year, five for two years and five for three years, and at each subsequent Annual Meeting five members shall be elected for the full term of three years, and such others as shall be required to fill vacancies.

ART. VI. To the Executive Committee shall belong the collecting and disbursing of funds, the appointing, counseling, sustaining and dismissing of missionaries and agents, and the selection of missionary fields. They shall have authority to fill all vacancies in office occurring between the Annual Meetings; to apply to any Legislature for acts of incorporation, or conferring corporate powers; to make provision when necessary for disabled missionaries and for the widows and children of deceased missionaries, and in general to transact all such business as usually appertains to the Executive Committees of missionary and other benevolent Societies. The acts of the Committee shall be subject to the revision of the Annual Meeting.

Five members of the Committee constitute a quorum for transacting business.

ART. VII. No person shall be made an officer of this Association who is not a member of some evangelical church.

providentially fitted to carry it forward. The Association accepted the responsibility, appointed district secretaries at Chicago, Cincinnati and Boston, and collecting agents in other portions of the northern states. It also solicited funds in Great Britain, and succeeded in securing that year a little more than the $250,000 recommended by the Council. Its receipts from all sources ran up from $47,828 in 1861 to $253,045 in 1866, and $420,768 in 1870.

But in the South there came a reign of terror under the infamous Ku-Klux-Klans—the Thugs of America. The colored people were often assaulted by mobs, dragged from their homes at midnight, and shot down in the streets. But there was no want of courage on the part of our teachers to enter or remain in the field; the number of teachers, which was 320 in 1865, was enlarged to 528 in 1867, 532 in 1868, and 533 in 1870.

Permanent Educational Institutions.

It was during this very period that the beginnings were made for most of our permanent educational institutions. The Association must train the teachers and preachers for this people.

The Association now sustains Atlanta Theological Seminary, Georgia; Fisk University, Tennessee; Talladega College, Alabama; Tougaloo University, Mississippi; Straight University, Louisiana; Tillotson College, Texas, and Piedmont College, Georgia, together with 67 schools of lower grades planted at strategic points in the lowlands and highlands of the South. There are also one school among the Indians, twenty-four among the Chinese and Japanese on the Pacific Coast, one in Alaska and one in Porto Rico. Educational and church work is also developing in Hawaii.

Theological departments have also been maintained in Howard University, Talladega College, Fisk University and Atlanta Seminary. Industrial instruction first began in southern mission schools in Talladega, Ala., and was early introduced into many of our schools and has been constantly extended. Talladega College, Tougaloo University and Joseph K. Brick Normal School have large farms. In all the larger institutions mechanical arts are taught to the boys, and household work, cooking, sewing, washing, nursing, etc., to the girls. From these schools go forth annually hundreds of well-qualified teachers and ministers.

Church Planting.

Simultaneously with the founding of these permanent institutions the Association began the planting of churches among the freedmen. They were formed mainly in connection with the educational institutions, and were intended to be models of true church life. The work of church planting has been pressed forward with a steady hand until the churches now number 223 located in nearly all the states of the South, among the Negroes, the Highlanders, the Indians and Chinese in the West, and in the island of Porto Rico, with fruitful results. Sunday-schools, temperance efforts and revivals of religion have been marked features in the work. Christian Endeavor Societies were promptly organized and have been rapidly multiplied.

Mountain Work.

The early labors of the Association in home mission work were directed to the white people of the West and South. The mountain region of the Central South embraces West Virginia, southwestern Virginia, southeastern Kentucky, western North Carolina, eastern Tennessee and portions of northern Georgia and northern Alabama. It is 500 miles long and 200 miles wide, and contains a population of about 2,000,000, seven-eighths of whom are white. Churches, preaching stations and schools have been established along or near the line of railroads traversing the mountain districts, or in regions not yet reached by such communications, where thousands of Highlanders live. Schools, churches and missions are now established in the mountain regions of five southern states. The schools give prominence to normal and industrial training, sending out each year a large number of well-trained teachers, who, taking charge of the district schools, are making them over after the best models. Strategic points are occupied by these institutions, such as Evarts, Ky.; Grand View and Pleasant Hill, Tenn.; Joppa, Ala.; Saluda and Blowing Rock, N. C. The preaching of an intelligent gospel and the establishment of Sunday-schools, Mission Bands, Mothers' Circles and Christian Endeavor Societies contribute greatly to the development of these interesting Highlanders in their domestic and social life as well as that distinctively religious.

The Indians.

Some of the earliest labors of the Association were among the Indians. In 1852 it had twenty-one missionaries stationed among the Indians of the Northwest. Various causes conspired to the gradual diminution of these missions. But in 1882 an arrangement was made with the American Board by which it transferred to the Association its Indian missions in this country, and the Association withdrew from missions in foreign lands. At the time of the transfer the Association had missions in Skokomish, Wash., Leach Lake, Minn., and Spokane Falls. The transfer from the Board committed to its care the mission and school at the Santee Agency, Neb., Oahe, S. D., with outlying stations on the Cheyenne and White Rivers, and the mission and school at Fort Berthold, N. D. Since these missions and schools came under the care of the Association the facilities and force of workers have been increased, and missions have been added at Fort Yates, N. D.; Rosebud, S. D., and the Crow Agency, Mont. The churches number twenty-one, with a membership of 1,538. Schools number one, with 267 pupils. The outstations number twenty-four.

Alaska.

Our Alaskan Mission at Cape Prince of Wales was formed in 1890. It it now entirely supported by the special contributions sent to our treasury for this purpose. In connection with the educational and mission work a herd of reindeer is in the care of a missionary. The report of our missionaries in Alaska presents a very hopeful picture of work among the Eskimos.

Chinese and Japanese in America.

The American Missionary Association was one of the pioneers in mission service among the Chinese immigrants to California. It began the work as early as 1852. In 1874 Dr. W. C. Pond, pastor of the Bethany Church, San Francisco, was appointed superintendent.

The number of workers is forty-nine, and schools twenty-four, located at Berkeley, Fresno, Los Angeles, Marysville, Oakland, Pasadena, Riverside, Sacramento, San Bernardino, San Diego, Santa Barbara, Ventura and San Francisco.

Over a thousand of these pagans have come into the Christian life, and a number of them have returned to their native land as missionaries.

The converted Chinamen have long desired the establishment of missions in their native country, to which, if they should return thither, they might resort as a Christian home, and from which they might go forth for mission work among their countrymen. The Chinese Missionary Society, composed of those who have been converted in Chinese missions, and which was organized in 1886, and commenced work in China in 1890, has already contributed above $15,000 to missions in China. With this they have established headquarters at Canton with property worth $40,000. They have also property in Hong Kong valued at $9,250. They have also a twenty years' lease of a good chapel in Ci Ning City, where they have organized a church.

Porto Rico. The American Missionary Association follows the flag. It did this in the Civil War, bringing the blessing of Christian instruction to the Negroes. It followed the same course at the close of the war with Spain. Porto Rico came under the flag and became a part of the national territory. The responsibility for the Christian instruction of the people fell with especial force upon our American churches. The American Missionary Association carefully investigated the field through representatives who were sent to the island. The need was found to be very great. There was an immediate demand for well appointed Christian schools for the instruction of children and youth and also for the preaching of a broad and free gospel to the people. In 1899 eight teachers were sent to this field to establish and maintain these schools, and an evangelist to preach the gospel as widely as possible throughout the island. Ten churches, with 591 members, are now organized.

Blanche Kellogg Institute is located at Santurce, near San Juan, a strategic position for a large work. The pastors also hold a circuit of preaching stations through the eastern portion of the island, where there are scarcely any other missionary efforts. There is great need for increased income to the Association to meet the demands of this large and growing field.

Hawaiian Islands. The Association, in 1904, by the urgent request of the Hawaiian Evangelical Association, undertook to aid the latter in its entire work among the native Hawaiians, and the Chinese, and Japanese, in those islands. The Hawaiian Islands consist of a group of eight inhabited and four uninhabited islands. They are situated 2,100 miles from San Francisco and 3,400 miles from Japan. The people of Hawaii are made up of native Hawaiians, about 40,000; Chinese, 25,767, and Japanese, 61,111. In religion the population is divided as follows: Buddhists, 40,000; Mormons, 4,886; Roman Catholics, 26,363; Protestants, 23,773. The Hawaiian Islands seem to have been providentially situated so as to form the training school of missionaries for the Orient. In the providence of God many Chinese and Japanese have settled here. Back of this work in Hawaii there lies the great field of missions in China and Japan. There is also every inducement possible in the line of home missionary responsibility to support generously this work in our new island territory. This is the gateway to Asia and means great things in the regeneration of that vast region.

Bureau of Woman's Work. Formed in 1883. It gives direction and efficiency to the various lines of womens' aid to the American Missionary Association. Women's State Missionary Unions and organizations co-operate in raising funds for the prosecution of the work of the Association.

Publications. The American Missionary magazine represents the work of all the homeland societies and is issued monthly. The subscription price is fifty cents per year. It contains fresh information from the several mission fields and other material of especial value to those studying the comprehensive missionary work carried on by our Congregational churches. The magazine is generously illustrated and merits a wide circulation among the members of our churches and others interested in these great national and religious problems.

SIXTY-FOURTH ANNUAL REPORT

OF THE

OF THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION,

COVERING THE YEAR ENDING SEPTEMBER 30TH, 1910.

GENERAL SURVEY.

The working force of the Association for the past year has consisted of 822 missionaries, 305 of whom were Negroes, 37 Orientals, 30 Indians and 10 Porto Ricans. About 150 were ordained ministers. These have labored for seven groups of our humbler American brethren, sundered from the dominant stock of the Nation by racial barriers; and also for the mountain people of the South. Their fields have included all the fringes of our civilization from Alaska to Porto Rico. Generally they have been in the cruder and more backward regions and always on the outskirts of social privilege and esteem.

The two fundamental agencies of our missionary service continue to be the school and the church. Of schools small and great there have been 79 with 612 teachers and an enrollment of 16,507. Organized churches have numbered 217 with 213 regular pastors and evangelists. (The above figures do not include the auxiliary forces of the Hawaiian Evangelical Association supported by the American Missionary Association.) Besides the established institutions above enumerated, there has been a vast amount of evangelistic activity occupying some 200 outstations, as well as manifold out-reachings in educational and social service on the part of our schools, the whole constituting an array of Christian activities which no man can measure.

The total paid out during the year in support of this mission work, including administration and publicity, has been $472,244.47. We should be unfaithful to our deepest convictions did we not insist that these latter expenditures also should be credited to the missionary results of our work, and that the ministry to the churches of advocacy and reminder on behalf of neglected peoples under our flag, is as truly worth while from the standpoint of missionary education and the spiritual health of Christians as is any part of our missionary service. In appealing to the churches for financial support in this their work, we have been unfailingly conscious that we were preaching a gospel to them as well as making the gospel through them possible for tens of thousands of their less favored brethren.

The work of the Association goes on from year to year in intimate and responsive sympathy with its great environments, the vast agencies which serve the moral forces of the denomination, the modern church as a whole, the nation and the world. A year or even three years is far too short a time in which to report decisively the trend of movements on so vast a scale. Yet in the larger sense the successes and failures of our ministry are bound up with those of national righteousness, of the general missionary movement and the character of Congregational Christianity.

Within the nation the presence of the "little peoples" now and again presses itself on public conscience. The immediate past has seen a changed policy in the matter of Federal appointments of Negroes; a financial protectorate for Liberia; tremendous Indian land scandals; and important Porto Rican legislation. Oklahoma with less than 7% Negro population, and with no reasonable fear of political domination by that race has put the disfranchising "grandfather clause" into its constitution. On the other hand, the organization of the National Negro Conference and allied agencies and their definite establishment as agencies of agitation and public appeal, suggests a new alignment of the best modern spirit of social justice with the more radical aspirations of colored Americans, and is especially significant as the first confessed merging of the class struggle with the race struggle in America. Thus as a people we are kept aware of those problems upon which the Association has for a half century brought the gospel to bear.

Within the general missionary enterprise, there is increasing tendency to recognize the distinctive place of such work as the Association chiefly does, as a third essential form of Christian service, intermediate between foreign missions on the one hand and home missions in the sense of denominational extension on the other. This distinctive position has been acknowledged in the educational propaganda in the Young People's Missionary Movement, which during the past year enrolled many thousands in the study of two of our chief interests, the Negro and the Porto Rican. Through the Home Missions Council the entire Protestant work in Porto Rico and for the Indians has taken on new dignity and efficiency, and indeed has gone far toward unity of inter-denominational administration. A joint committee of this Council on Negro missions, promises to achieve like results in this larger and more complex field. Officers of the American Missionary Association have had place on all three of these committees. The new and far reaching principles of comity proposed by the Federal Council of Churches and now adopted by the majority of Home Mission Boards, already touch in some helpful measure and in the long run should largely affect the policies of our church work. We may add, however, that in respect to the duty of comity we have somewhat less to learn than many of our brethren. Though its Alaskan outpost is within sight of Asia and its field includes missions entrusted by many denominations to their foreign boards, the work of the Association has not been accorded direct recognition as within the scope of the Laymen's Missionary Movement. In bringing the appeal of that movement to the Congregational churches, our denominational forces of foreign missions have, however, been steadily loyal to the whole round of our common interests, and through them we have participated in the uplift of the great laymen's campaign of the past year.

Within the denomination the Association has shared the hopes, benefits and embarrassments of the great reorganizing movement now in process. The practical outcome of this participation appears in detail in the response of the churches in financial support as narrated below. Its consequent methods and problems are touched in the reports of the Advisory Committee for Systematic Benevolence and of the Commission of Fifteen on the relation of the Benevolent Societies to the National Council. The Association has been in constant and sympathetic conference with all the agencies ordained by the churches, local, State and National, for the furthering of missionary work, and has striven to perform its distinctive service with an abiding sense of its brotherly responsibility to and partnership with them.

In its interior administration the Association experienced during the year an unexpected loss in the resignation, for personal reasons, of Rev. J. W. Cooper, D.D., as corresponding secretary. He had served for seven years with rare fidelity and wisdom. His place was filled by the election of Rev. H. P. Douglass, D.D., who as superintendent of education had been closely associated with Dr. Cooper and who was personally familiar with much of the secretarial work.

We turn now to survey the work of the several mission fields. A statistical summary for each field will precede a statement of the year's work. Certain general tendencies will then be pointed out, as indicated by a review of the triennial period.

The 23 ungraded schools for Negroes are chiefly located in rural communities of North Carolina and Georgia and are in large measure the secret of our successful country churches in those states. They have stimulated better public schools and made for rural betterment in all lines. The administrators of the Jeans' Fund in a number of cases have found these little centers of ours promising fields for their beneficence. Such an one is Wadsworth, N. C., where the Congregational church building has been the only school house of the community, accommodating not only the four months' public school term but the supplementary mission school as well. Now the county has appropriated $200, the people have raised $100 and the Jeans' Fund added $200 for the erection of a school building. The mission school will share the new quarters. This little enterprise, the uplift of which now secures for a whole community something like decent school privileges, has cost the Association but $50 a year; and similar things have happened not once or twice.

Of our 12 elementary graded schools, 9 are for Negroes and 3 for whites. Of the former group, Trinity School, Athens, Ala., with its 7 teachers and some 200 pupils is typical. Here a fine teachers' home is just ready for occupancy, supplementing the school building recently erected. But its shop building is empty. Indeed, for no one of these schools has the Association been able seriously to begin provision for industrial instruction. Mound Bayou, Cotton Valley and Moorhead have unused lands and earnestly plead for agricultural equipment and instruction. We are glad to record that at Beachton, Ga., a new school building and teachers' home is in process of erection without cost to the Association, the material being the gift of a Philadelphia friend whose winter residence is near the school and the labor largely contributed by the community.

The white schools of this group are just now suffering peculiar embarrassment incident to improved school legislation which cuts off grants from public funds which they have long received. This was a desirable and inevitable step, but compels radical readjustments on our part. The public resources cannot for years begin to do for these communities what the Association has done. We are therefore standing by at increased cost to our treasury, continuing a religious ministry and carrying on small departments for advanced studies. At Black Mountain Academy a medical mission has begun under Principal Rowland, who is physician and preacher as well as teacher. Important beginnings also have been made toward experimental work in mountain agriculture, in cooperation with the national Bureau of Farm Management.

The 36 secondary institutions constitute numerically the largest and in many respects the most important group of our schools. They are about equally divided between country and city. Three years ago your Committee began the development of a group of distinctively agricultural high schools, planning so far as possible one in each state of our southern field. This plan has been steadily carried out and we now see nearing completion the skeleton of an organization and equipment which will enable some 8 institutions to do such work as is accomplished by the standard schools of this type in Wisconsin, Minnesota and elsewhere. Lincoln Normal School, Marion, Ala., has just occupied a convenient brick building for girls' industries, the second erected during the three years, chiefly by student labor, and has had an agricultural superintendent added to its force. The small Fessenden legacy now makes it possible to supply a school house addition, water works, a blacksmith's shop and domestic science equipment for this most promising school in central Florida. The new farm at Dorchester Academy, Ga., has been financially and educationally profitable. Shops, barns and stock have been added to the equipment of Lincoln Academy, King's Mountain, N. C., and the purchase of additional land has just been authorized. Brewer Normal School, Greenwood, S. C., has this summer erected a small wing of what it hopes may some day be an adequate boys' dormitory and thereby releases two little buildings which now become shop and laboratory. These two last named institutions have new principals especially chosen for their competence to develop schools of rural life. The Gloucester High School at Cappahosic, Va., has largely extended its farm operations and has sent its teachers for the last two summers to the Massachusetts Agricultural College for advanced study, but has been the least fortunate of the group in securing necessary buildings. A shop and a dormitory are imperative before it can enter upon its typical work. The J. K. Brick School, Enfield, N. C., with its magnificent domain of 1100 acres and increasing plant stands in a class by itself, and is to our schools of the rural arts what Fisk is to the higher education. It has just erected and is equipping a modern steam laundry. An agricultural expert has been secured for gardening and experimental farming in Grand View, Tenn., which is the white institution of greatest development along agricultural lines. Its farm operations have had the interested cooperation of government experts who regard them as throwing significant light on the possibilities of the mountain region. The institution has also been fortunate in securing gifts of fine live stock from northern friends. The striking developments of these rural schools have been secured with little direct cost to the Association's treasury, but larger annual support is necessitated by increased teaching force and enlarged plants. The skeleton of this group of distinct and unique schools approaches completion, but it is only a skeleton; and their appeal, both for better equipment in detail and for adequate support, should have great weight with all who believe that the destinies of the Negro and mountaineer are inseparably linked with rural betterment.

The city schools as a group have not fared nearly so well as the country schools. The plants were, many of them, built forty years ago and for radically different conditions. Many of them are now approaching actual physical dissolution, and at best they have not the character demanded by the present day. With the building up of southern cities these institutions are seriously feeling their lack of play grounds. Basements and attics have to be utilized for school purposes. Sanitary difficulties increase. The constituency of the Association has not hitherto responded to the appeal of the city institutions for the considerable sums necessary to house their work. Their case was put strongly in the last Annual Survey and strenuous but as yet unrewarded efforts have been made during the past year in their behalf. Many of these schools have made large gains in the educational quality of their work, but the fact remains that as a group they must suffer relative eclipse or receive adequate facilities. The day is not yet in sight when the South as a whole admits the right of the Negro to a high school education at public expense, and nothing is in sight to take the place of these mission schools. It is a satisfaction to report gains here and there. The continued beneficence of Mr. Ralph Emerson has provided a large addition for high school purposes to the Emerson Institute buildings, as well as largely increased equipment to the industrial shops and teachers' home of that institution. Knox Institute, Athens, Ga., has been radically enlarged through the gift of a handsome school building by Mr. Carnegie, in view of which the Association rebuilt the old buildings for dormitory purposes and is adding a principal's cottage.

Our higher institutions merit more individual comment and description than space permits. By the stricter academic classification of recent report, Straight University and Tillotson College are entered in the list of secondary schools. Each has carried on, however, some measure of collegiate work and maintains much of the ampler spirit of the higher institutions. Each enjoys the cordial and helpful counsels of representative white citizens on its Board of Trustees. A member of the Tillotson Board has recently made a conditional offer of $3,000 toward the erection of a building for mechanical industries, and strenuous efforts are under way to secure the necessary funds. Fisk University, Nashville, Tenn., has responded nobly in the temper of its students to the stimulating leadership of Pres. George A. Gates. A revised curriculum is being introduced, including a complete teachers' college course, demanded by the increased number and higher standards of the Negro schools. The financial problems of the University remain serious and indeed overwhelming unless an adequate endowment can speedily be raised. The institution is simply too large to be carried by its former methods of support. The concurrent action of the Trustees of the institution and the Executive Committee of the Association is just initiating a plan for raising this endowment. Prof. W. A. Waterman remains in the North to cooperate with this campaign and the Association has stood by in the hour of crisis with increased gifts, which seriously hamper its more general work and which cannot be long continued. Talladega College rejoices in the completion of the Andrews Theological Hall and the beautiful new hospital, the erection of which greatly stimulates the work of these two departments. It has also considerably extended its comprehensive heating and plumbing plant, and now, alone among our institutions, approaches modern standards of general equipment. Its work in scientific agriculture has gone rapidly forward. Tougaloo University also has largely extended its work in scientific agriculture, has developed the vigorous beginnings of higher training for teachers and contemplates turning its efforts for higher education chiefly into this channel. Within all these institutions great progress has been made in differentiating and honoring the college departments. At Fisk the grammar school has been removed from the main University campus. College men at Talladega are now to occupy a special dormitory and enjoy appropriate privileges and a similar arrangement is contemplated for college women. At Tougaloo, college women now will report to their own preceptress. In such ways, while work broadens, the higher institutions remind themselves of their chief function, the complete education of leaders. The regular theological course at Talladega has been separated from the "English course," and the grading-up process has also begun in the Howard Theological department.

Piedmont College for the white young people of northern Georgia, under the general control of its own Trustees, has begun to enjoy the fruits of its long struggle for the $100,000 endowment now happily completed. Part of the regrettable cost of the effort was the health of President H. C. Newell, who, however, is able to remain with the college in his former capacity as Dean, while Sup't F. E. Jenkins, D.D., of the national Home Missionary Society, temporarily assumes responsibility as president.

The larger tendencies of the triennial period in the educational field are evidenced by a 10% increase in teaching force while the number of institutions and their total enrollment has remained about stationary. The heart of any educational work is the adequacy of its teachers, and their increase proclaims the purpose of the Association to put qualitative advance before mere numbers. Indeed its deliberate policy is to leave elementary education wherever possible to the Southern communities. Gross increase in enrollment is therefore not to be expected.

The increase of teaching force is in supervisory and pedagogical departments, but most notably in the industries; as follows: home economics 14, mechanical industries 10, agriculture 5.

Underlying this tendency, there has been a persistent movement towards precision in the classification, organization and selection of the personnel of the schools. Their somewhat heterogeneous characters, institutionally considered, have been sharpened into definite types and made to approximate current American standards. This has involved selection of effort, elimination of studies as often as extension, and a firm decision not to attempt what cannot be reasonably supported. The whole tendency finally culminated in the thoroughgoing report of the Committee of Ten, authorized by your Committee from among the most experienced of our field workers. This Committee, after painstaking study, outlined comprehensive principles governing standard courses of study, equipment of schools and the preparation of teachers, in accordance with which a school Manual is being prepared. It also studied carefully the problem of receipts from students and decided that the economic gains, especially of the Negro constituency of the schools, warrants the early increase of tuition charges by 50%. Such a policy would raise the present annual receipts of $60,000 from tuition to $90,000.

The question of means for extensions and betterments of plant was also studied. Upward of $200,000 worth of buildings and equipment were added to the educational plant during the triennium. Very little of this cost has come from the current income of the Association and probably less than half from sources in any sense Congregational.

This more scientific valuation of our educational work and resources, and the standardizing of its methods, admits of a somewhat precise formulation of the amounts necessary for its support. The full $250,000 assigned to the Association under the Apportionment Plan from living donors, (assuming that income from legacies continues unimpaired and other work remains stationary) would just about decently maintain our present institutions according to the most modest standards. It would permit an increase of missionaries' salaries, as approved by the last annual meeting, and would support with adequate teaching force and current appropriations our work in its present stage. But it would not supply extensions of plant and betterments, the need of which was stated above, nor endow chartered institutions. We have just noted the sources from which betterments have formerly come, and the Fisk campaign for endowment. Any plan, therefore, which lessens the support of the Association from larger individual gifts, even though securing increased stated income from churches, would be disastrous. The work demands the full amount apportioned to us, without impairment of resources at other points. The alternative is radical reduction and the cutting off of whole institutions.

CHURCH WORK IN THE SOUTH.

Our southern churches among the colored people were never more influential or efficient. They do not, however, show a numerical gain and the increased cost of living has made the problem of their financial support doubly difficult. A social group which lives near the financial margin, very quickly registers in its expenditures for religious purposes any economic stress it experiences. Benevolence, however, has increased encouragingly, the churches generally accepting and heartily working the Apportionment Plan. The Association could not wisely, even had it the means, make up the fluctuating ability of the churches in the support of their pastors. Its share in their support is already proportionately excessive. The burden comes therefore upon our faithful and sorely tried brethren of the ministry, who need all sympathy.

Despite financial difficulties, improvements of property are reported on every hand and the tone of denominational church life is distinctly hopeful. The little group of Texas churches has come loyally to the support of Tillotson College, which they are helping through stated annual contributions. A state Woman's Home Missionary Union has also been organized. Louisiana shows almost the only general tendency of the year toward self-support. One of our pastors has been official organizer of the state Business Men's League. Our church forces of New Orleans have been successfully active in efforts for better public school facilities and in behalf of Straight University. The northern Alabama churches share the ups and downs of the iron industry of the Birmingham district and are urging the extension of institutional facilities for the service of the large Negro populations of the furnace towns. Georgia reports a large measure of prosperity. The rural churches are greatly profiting by the counsel and the oversight of the state Moderator and other brethren of the stronger fields. A pastor in Southern Georgia organized a Farmers' Institute Movement for his county and reports that the activity of his parish in hauling stones for a new school house went along helpfully with a revival service which he was conducting. At the North Carolina State Association every pastor but one was present and all the churches reported but his. From every field came up the word of fresh paint and rural prosperity. The city churches generally, share the need of city schools for buildings more adequate and better adapted to urban conditions. Institutional work in the First Church, Atlanta, is rapidly developing, the Association paying the salary of the head social worker.

Church work in connection with the mountain schools has been marked by fine interest and many conversions, and in the few considerable towns where we are located has been fairly sustained. But in the remoter country districts of the mountains we share with all denominations the institutional instability of the people. The characteristic mountain sects count their churches by the thousand but take for granted the chronic condition that more than half of them will not have regular pastors or stated services. From the Congregational standpoint such a condition must be acknowledged as failure. So far as resources allow, such fields should be occupied by trained women as religious workers. They will conduct Sunday Schools, household services and clubs for women and children, and will thus serve the community without incurring sectarian jealousy; but organized church life of the Congregational sort is rarely successful unless constantly sustained by the proximity of the missionary school.

The Porto Rican churches are recapitulating all the characteristic apostolic experiences. They show the beautiful ardor of first faith and a remarkable response to the social forces of the Gospel. A wholly new type of Porto Rican life has developed through thirteen years of Protestant evangelism, forming the nucleus of an intelligent middle class, never before known in the history of the Island. On the other hand there is the instability, the inexperience and the daily struggle with grosser sins within the church, which characterized New Testament Christianity. Membership increases rapidly but discipline cuts down the totals. Just now a new generation is coming on the scene. Little children of thirteen years ago are now young men and women, the first fruits of thorough evangelical training. They demand, and some of them must themselves be prepared to furnish, a more adequate ministry than the present native evangelists, who came late into the evangelical faith, without mental balance and with their old habits fixed upon them. The need of preparing such Christian workers promises to put new responsibility upon Blanche Kellogg Institute, the constituency of which hitherto has been limited to the city of San Juan. As a local institute its sphere has become limited by the removal of the public high school from the old city to a site in the suburb of Santurce very close to our institution. Dormitories and increased teaching force will be necessary to equip the school for its broader work.

Rev. John Edwards, the veteran of the missionary force, has been spending his first considerable vacation for eleven years pleading for funds for the erection of the much needed parish house for Fajardo. Rev. Thomas Gray has vigorously presided over the work in the Humacao District. Dr. and Mrs. E. W. Smith of Indiana are under commission and sail immediately to begin a work of medical evangelism and service with Naguabo as a center. The Congregational Church Building Society, continuing its helpful cooperation, has secured an excellent property for the Yabucoa church and promises to help in housing the Naguabo work. A neat chapel has been provided for Quebrada Seca through funds from the treasury of the Association.

The Indian work is in the midst of a crisis incident to the rapid settlement of the upper Missouri River region, the coming of railroads, and especially the distribution of lands in severalty. These forces are causing re-locations of Government stations and consequent movings and scatterings of Indian population, seriously affecting many mission fields. On one reservation the missionary reports 200 quarter sections sold by Indians to settlers this present season. As the old mission buildings deteriorate and new properties are inevitable, the question of new locations becomes acute. Governmental paternalism has made the Indian the most dependent of the dependent peoples. He now confronts the final phase of his American experience, in which as an individual he must learn to stand alone. Our missionary policy is earnestly directed to preparing him for this transition. The pupils of Santee Training School are being pressed to pay a larger portion of their support. The council of Indian Missionaries has voted to require the Indian churches to raise one dollar for every two given by the Association. Loyal financial response came from former pupils to aid in replacing the girls' dormitory recently burned at Santee. The lonely labors of Rev. J. G. Burgess and wife on the Crow Agency have been re-enforced by a mission school and teacher. On the Rosebud field there has been a 75% increase in membership during the last three years, indicating the vital accomplishment of the work in spite of native inertia, violent changes and small resources.

ALASKA.

A year ago the Rev. James F. Cross heroically returned to the cold vigil of his Alaskan ministry on the definite understanding that the Association should make permanent arrangements for his relief by the present autumn. Economic conditions are of unimaginable importance to a people, who like the Eskimo, have always lived from hand to mouth. Thus the whole prospect of the mission work was greatly complicated by the almost total failure of the walrus catch the past season. This necessitated the people scattering far and wide in search of food. On the other hand a most cheering experience was the celebration of the twentieth anniversary of the founding of the Alaskan Mission. No secretary or moderator of the National Council was present, but the people recounted the gains of the two decades of struggle out of paganism into the light, and thanked God and took courage. Mr. Cross now returns, leaving the work to a Christian physician, Dr. Chas. A. Thompson, and his wife, a trained nurse. Dr. Thompson has been in government service in Alaska and has had experience with the people and in the management of reindeer herds, the income of which continues largely to support the mission. His first work at Wales was to check an epidemic of typhoid fever. With the physical needs of the people in his charge, he will be unable to give adequate attention to the evangelistic work. The Association greatly desires to supplement his services by those of a regularly ordained man; and this romantic work, as worthy as Grenfell's, every whit, makes its enlarged appeal to the constituency of the Association.

ORIENTAL MISSIONS.

The California Oriental Mission reports a fruitful year. Its work has been well sustained under its indefatigable superintendent, Dr. Pond, and his devoted helpers. Expenditures for the work have been $15,464.60, including a grant of $5,000 from the American Missionary Association. The death of the Chinese veteran, Rev. Jee Gam, was an especially heavy loss to the Mission. He died at sea on his way to visit his old home in China.

Opportune legacies direct to the Mission have helped to reduce debts on mission houses and have just made possible the securing of a desirable property for the Oakland work. The Association has only a reversionary interest in these properties but reports them as important denominational assets. From the standpoint of current support, the year has been an especially trying one to Dr. Pond and his co-laborers, partly on account of a narrowing of the opportunity for special appeal incident to the increased adoption of the Apportionment Plan. The Association gladly cooperated with the efforts of the Pacific Coast brethren for the Christian care of their Oriental population, and welcomes their more definite expressions of purpose to have proportionate part in its general work, involving so varied an array of great national problems.

HAWAII.

The Association contributed $9,375.75 during the past year to the work of its auxiliary, the Hawaiian Evangelical Association, this sum including the support of six American and ten Oriental or native workers. The Hawaiian work, carried on under department superintendents, reports a total work as follows:

Native Churches	67
English Stations	7
Chinese Stations	14
Japanese Stations	14
Portuguese Stations	3

There are also four schools and four social settlements, besides book rooms, and the publication of The Friend in three languages. There have been substantial gains in religious interest, additions to membership and church erection.

The recent annual meeting of the Hawaiian Association celebrated the 90th anniversary of the landing of the missionaries by the erection of a memorial arch inscribed with a tribute to their services to evangelism, temperance and missions. It is worthy of record that the cooperation of the American Missionary Association in the Hawaiian work is no new relation, one of the organizations later merged in it having supported Mr. Green on Maui as early as 1842, while the American Board was working elsewhere in the Islands.

FINANCIAL.

The receipts of the American Missionary Association for current work for the fiscal year ending September 30th, 1910, were as follows:

Donations from Churches, Sunday Schools, Women's Societies, Young People's Societies, Other Societies and individuals	$188,944.84
Conditional Gifts released by death of donors	8,745.04
Received from the Joint Missionary Campaign Committee, Dr. L. C. Warner, Treasurer	2,406.00
Donations, total	$200,095.88
Legacies	91,286.81
Income	25,180.04
Tuition paid to Institutions	61,796.22
Slater Fund paid to Institutions	6,000.00
TOTAL	$384,358.95
EXPENDITURES	$386,792.84
Debt balance on current year	$2,433.89
Less balance in hand October 1, 1909	447.56
Debt balance September 30, 1910	$1,986.33

During the year the Committee faced a large deficit in receipts from legacies compared with the previous year. The actual decrease in legacies was $14,998.11 and in donations and other receipts $1,628.45 making the available receipts for the year $16,626.56 less than for the previous year. The expenditures as planned for the year were forced to be cut down and were cut down by the amount of $13,745.11, as compared with the previous year. Under the circumstances your Committee is greatly relieved that the debt instead of being as large as threatened has by generous gifts as well as severe retrenchment been reduced to $1,986.33.

It is very gratifying to state that the contributions from churches, Sunday schools and other organizations were $8,174.37 more than the previous year. The decrease in receipts from Conditional Gifts and other donations was $9,705.29. Receipts from Conditional Gifts or anticipated bequests fluctuate greatly from year to year.

THE DANIEL HAND EDUCATIONAL FUND.

The income and expenditures from the Daniel Hand Educational Fund are separate and distinct from the current funds of the Association. The income the past year was $80,652.28 which with the balance at the beginning of the year of $2,456.13 made a total of $83,108.41. The expenditures were $81,162.90, leaving a balance in hand and appropriated of $1,945.51.

There has been received as special income not included in current receipts the sum of $4,288.73 which has been paid to the institutions designated. There has been received for Endowment Funds the sum of $31,923.71, which, with the $8,000.00 for Endowment Fund for Piedmont College, to insure the completion of $100,000.00 Endowment for that Institution, makes the total amount credited to Endowment Funds $39,922.71. The Fessenden Fund for Fessenden Academy, at Fessenden, Florida, has been increased $500.00 during the year. There has been received from the estate of Daniel Hand for the Daniel Hand Educational Fund the sum of $14,211.42.

It is quite noticeable that the collections from Churches, Sunday Schools, Women's Societies and other organizations in the churches show a steady increase from year to year. This increase will be more marked as the Apportionment Plan is more fully established.

CONDITIONAL GIFTS AND RESERVE LEGACIES.

The Conditional Gift Plan is proving very satisfactory to persons who wish to place their gifts in the Treasury of the Association while they live and receive in exchange for their gifts the bond of the Association to give to them an annual sum in semi-annual payments during their lives or the lives of any persons designated. Under this plan our friends are relieved of the care and responsibility and at the same time are assured of an annual amount available for their use during life. These gifts when released by the death of donors are applied for the general work of the Association or for some designated work specified by the donors. Each Conditional Gift not specifically designated and in excess of $1,000 is divided into three parts—one part or portion becoming available on the current year, one part on the second year and one on the third year, as provided for in the Reserve Legacy Plan of the Association. Each legacy of more than $1,000.00 bequeathed to the Association, when collected, and not designated as endowment or for any specific object, and less than the sum of $25,000.00, is applied under the Reserve Legacy Plan. Legacies of $25,000.00 or more may, at the discretion of the Executive Committee, be distributed over a longer period, or the Committee may appropriate the whole, or any part of the amount, to such special objects as the Executive Committee shall deem of greatest advantage to the Association.

added to and amended, from time to time, under the direction of the Finance Committee, as to show at all times a correct statement of the property of the Association, and of any special trusts in its hands. All title deeds to real estate and certificates of stocks and bonds owned by the Association shall be in the charge of this Committee, who shall provide a proper place for their safe keeping. This Committee shall, when occasion requires, direct the sale and transfer of stocks, invest any funds of the Association not required or designed for current expenses, and in general shall have the oversight of the financial concerns of the Association, under the direction of the Executive Committee.

COMMITTEES ON SOUTHERN AND INDIAN AND CHINESE WORK.—It shall be the duty of the Committee on Southern Work and of that on Indian and Chinese Work to report to the Executive Committee, at its regular meeting every month, such suggestions or proposed action as shall seem to them desirable for furthering the efficiency and economy of the Missionary and Educational Work of the Association in their respective departments. They shall also have power to manage the current work of the Association assigned to them, subject to the general supervision and direction of the Executive Committee. Each of these Committees shall appoint its own meetings, keep books of record of its proceedings (the minutes of each Committee being read at the regular meetings of the Executive Committee) and may consult and advise with the Corresponding Secretaries, with the Treasurer of the Association, and with the District Secretaries and Agents in regard to its work.

COMMITTEE ON APPROPRIATIONS.—It shall be the duty of the Committee on Appropriations to consider the work of the Association carefully, and to present to the Executive Committee, at its meeting in May or June, a detailed statement of the amounts required in each department of the Association for the proper conduct of its work, and an estimate of the probable receipts of the Association, together with its recommendations as to the amounts which should be appropriated for the next fiscal year. This Committee shall consist of the Chairman of the Executive Committee, and the Chairmen of the first three Standing Committees.

SPECIAL COMMITTEES may be appointed from time to time as required. Standing and Special Committees can be formed only of members of the Executive Committee. All Special Committees shall examine and report upon every matter referred to them, with the facts in substance, and their opinions and recommendations, so that the Executive Committee may be fully enabled to act thereon.

APPEALS.—Every appointee of the Association has the fullest liberty of appeal to the Executive Committee. Such communications shall be referred to the Committee on Southern Work, or to the Committee on Indian and Chinese Work, according to the part of the field from which they come, for examination and a report on the matter involved, at the next meeting of the Executive Committee, when they shall receive careful attention in executive session.

ART. IV.—DUTIES OF CORRESPONDING SECRETARIES.

The Corresponding Secretaries shall conduct the correspondence of the Association and of the Executive Committee, except that which relates immediately to the Treasurer's department, and shall have the charge and direction of the work of the Association under the Executive Committee, and shall present to the various Standing Committees such suggestions and plans as shall seem to them desirable for the efficient working of the Association. They shall also prepare each month, and put into the hands of each member of the Executive Committee, before its regular monthly meeting, a schedule of the business which the Standing and any Special Committees may report to the Executive Committee for its action, and any other business they may desire to bring before the Executive Committee. It shall also be their duty to present to the Standing and Special Committees and to the Executive Committee all matters relating to their several departments, and to sign checks upon the bank accounts of the Association.

All appointments of missionaries, whether they are to act as pastors or general missionaries, presidents and professors of chartered institutions, principals of high and normal schools, district secretaries, field superintendents and other agents, and all matters involving questions of property or affecting the policy of the Association, shall be referred to the Executive Committee for final action.

ART. V.—DUTIES OF THE TREASURER.

It shall be the duty of the Treasurer to receive all money contributed or intrusted to the Association, and to give receipts therefor; to deposit it to the credit of the Association in such bank or institution as may be designated by the Finance Committee; to keep clear and accurate accounts of all sums received and expended by the Association; to make payments and remittances in accordance with, and never in excess of, the appropriations made by the Executive Committee; to endorse checks and drafts for deposit, and sign checks for the purposes of the Association; to report to the Finance and Executive Committees each month the receipts and disbursements for the previous month, and at the end of the fiscal year, for the year, and to keep all books of account required by them; to conduct the correspondence relating immediately to his department and to perform such other acts as are necessary to the faithful execution of the duties of his office.

His books of account and vouchers for payments shall at all times be open to the inspection of any member of the Executive Committee, and shall be submitted by him each month to the Finance Committee for their examination.

It shall be his duty to present to the Standing and Special Committees and to the Executive Committee such financial business as needs their action.

ART. VI.—DISTRICT SECRETARIES.

The Executive Committee shall appoint such District Secretaries as they may deem expedient, who shall visit churches and in other ways disseminate information concerning the condition and needs of the Association throughout the districts assigned to them. They shall also collect funds, and perform such other duties as may be required. They shall keep in constant conference with the New York office, and every month shall send to it, for the Executive Committee, a report of their work the previous month and of the condition of the interests of the Association in their several districts.

ART. VII.—CHECKS AND PAYMENTS.

All checks upon the bank accounts of the Association may be signed by (1) the Chairman (or Vice-Chairman or Temporary Chairman) of the Executive Committee, (2) a Corresponding Secretary, or (3) the Treasurer. Any two of these signatures shall render a check valid, but no check shall be valid with one signature only. All transfers of stock, conveyances of real estate and other instruments requiring the seal of the Association shall be signed in the same manner.

All payments of the Association shall be made by check payable to order, except petty cash expenditures, which shall be paid by the Treasurer and at convenient times be aggregated, and a check shall be drawn to his order therefor.

No disbursements shall be made without authority af the Executive Committee.

ART. VIII.—CLAIMS FOR DISBURSEMENTS BY OFFICERS AND EMPLOYEES.

All claims for disbursements by any officer or employee shall be accompanied by vouchers, except for telegrams, postage and traveling expenses, and charges below twenty dollars in amount, all of which shall be certified by the claimant to the Treasurer, with the items.

BUREAU OF WOMAN'S WORK.

Through this Department the Association has had the usual helpful and heartily appreciated co-operation of Women's State Organizations and local societies and the year closed with a slight increase in contributions.

The total received through the State Unions and directly from local societies was $32,476.24. Of the contributions through State Union Treasurers, which have passed on some offerings from Sunday Schools and C. E. Societies as well, a larger proportion than usual was from Women's Societies. It is gratifying that the work strengthens in this direction. These contributions except as otherwise assigned by donors are applied to women missionaries in various sections of the mission field. Correspondence on Plan of Work of the State Organizations, assigning of missionaries, procuring field news, assignment of box work, providing material for programs, and finding speakers for public meetings is part of the important work that is conducted through this Bureau in connection with our Women's Organizations.

AMONG OUR CONSTITUENTS.

With appreciation and gratitude we acknowledge the cordial response of the churches to the appeal of the American Missionary Association during the fiscal year just closed. A gain of eight thousand dollars in the sum of the churches' beneficence is an encouraging showing.

Another fact of importance and encouragement is the considerable increase in the number of churches contributing. We have appreciated the sacrifice on the part of the pastors and membership of the smaller churches in responding to the appeal of this work among the needy millions of our land, beyond the borders of their several parishes. No missionary literature is more impressive than that which comes from these pastors and churches, accompanied by gifts, often necessarily small, but breathing the spirit of devotion and Christian faith. We recognize the devotion of these smaller churches and their generous sympathy in this work, as well as that of the churches of larger membership and ability who have contributed in greater measure.

We have gladly cooperated during the year with state and local committees as well as pastors of churches in the efforts to make effective the Apportionment Plan. The apportionment to the American Missionary Association of $250,000 was received by us as in a sense a pledge from the churches that the Association could depend upon this amount from the gifts of the year to carry on this great work. In planning for the expenditures of the work, the Executive Committee made the conservative estimate that $225,000 could at least be depended upon. That only about $200,000 were realized is a disappointment no doubt to the committees of the churches who have the matter in charge and certainly to the Executive Committee of the Association.

The fiscal year of the A. M. A. ending in September may possibly account for the lack of the full amount of the apportionment. We are hoping that the months of October, November and December, which close the calendar year, will bring largely increased contributions to the treasury. This will relieve the situation and tend to carry out the plans of the churches. Much depends upon pastors and church committees to secure this increase.

There are certain elements in the working of the Apportionment Plan that it is important to consider. A considerable body of the receipts of the American Missionary Association come from individual donors who are interested in certain phases of the work of the Association, or desire to help some given institution. The estimate of the Apportionment Committee of the sum of Two Hundred and Fifty Thousand Dollars assumes that these personal gifts will continue and not be merged in the various amounts apportioned to the churches. It is not the deflection of gifts from one channel into another, but the enlargement of the body of gifts contributed through the collections of the churches, that the Apportionment Plan contemplates.

Another consideration of importance is that Two Hundred and Fifty Thousand Dollars, the sum apportioned to the American Missionary Association from the contributions of the churches, is only the minimum. With this amount and the contributions from special sources, it will be possible to carry on the work in a most economical, limited way.

The fact that the churches were striving to meet the amount assigned by the Apportionment Plan has made delicate and somewhat difficult the situation of the year. It has been our determined purpose to work absolutely in harmony with these committees, and in accordance with the plan adopted by the churches. We have not sought so to press the work that other organizations should suffer that the A. M. A. might have the larger prosperity. The presentation of the work and of the urgent needs of this great philanthropic and educational service has been entirely in accordance with the plans adopted by the Apportionment Committee.

We looked with hope upon the plan of the Brotherhood to cooperate with the churches in securing the full amount of their apportionment for this year. Your committee has appreciated their services and has been financially generous in its appropriation to reinforce the Brotherhood in carrying out their plan to encourage the churches to reach their apportionment.

Fisk University, passing through a period marked by the resignation of one president and the inauguration of another, was in sore need. Your committee made a special appropriation to meet this time of necessity. This special appropriation to Fisk contributed largely in securing several thousand dollars from other sources which would have been very doubtful without this relief. This marks for Fisk University, as is confidently hoped, a step of progress toward self-support which will ultimately put the institution upon its own endowment. The president and trustees have inaugurated a movement which they anticipate will be successful for an adequate endowment fund for this most important institution.

In laying out the schedule of appropriations for any given year these unforeseen necessities may arise rendering it almost impossible to meet even inadequately the needs of the work and at the same time keep within a given amount, especially when the income depended upon from the churches and sympathetic friends does not reach the amount anticipated. It is also to be borne in mind that a considerable falling off in legacies has embarrassed the situation.

In the Western District, with the office at Chicago, important changes have taken place. Rev. George E. Hall, D.D., to the painful regret of your committee, was seriously broken in health by the overwork which came incidental to the Together Campaign. Dr. Hall for a considerable time heroically struggled with threatened conditions of health, but finally found it necessary to tender his resignation. This was accepted with much regret by the Executive Committee.

Rev. Lucius O. Baird, D.D., was elected District Secretary of the Western District, and entered upon his work in the early months of the year. Dr. Baird was pastor in Omaha, Nebraska, for years. He came into this work holding the entire confidence and esteem of the churches, especially in the Western District where he was best known. He has brought to the service the rich fruits of wide experience, of thorough training and large and helpful acquaintance. The succession of strong men in the secretaryship of the Western District, running back to the efficient and saintly man, Dr. J. E. Roy, is still unbroken in the appointment of Sec. Baird.

The A. M. A. has held its department in the publication of The American Missionary, the joint magazine of the homeland societies. We can not report very confidently of the success of this union magazine. Every effort has been made to increase its circulation and to add to its interest. The subscription list is small and the expense of the publication has not decreased as we had hoped. In presenting the work of the A. M. A. before the churches, we have felt the loss of the special magazine which was formerly issued by the Association.

The testimony of many pastors to the effect that it is difficult to canvass for two publications representing different phases of missionary service is somewhat significant. Doubtless a large body of our missionary constituents desire a single magazine. It would seem comparatively easy to institute methods by which a large subscription might be secured for such a magazine that were not possible when four magazines were in the field. The difficulties, although somewhat less, are still felt by pastors and church committees in canvassing for two missionary publications. The American Missionary has maintained a high standard of literary and missionary value, and with energetic co-operation on the part of pastors and of church membership to secure a more extended subscription list, we hope the future will bring more adequate results. A reduction of the price for club rates just provided, it is hoped, will greatly multiply the circulation.

The future of the large institutions, planted by the A. M. A. and still maintained to a considerable degree under its auspices, demands an adequate endowment. The educational work in these institutions has largely outgrown the possibility of support from hat collections. It is too precarious for such a large enterprise and special gifts from generous contributors are demanded. We bespeak for these institutions the sympathetic attention of those people to meet the peculiar necessities of this condition. The endowment for all the institutions under the A. M. A. is pitiably small and the work suffers. Sufficient endowment is needed at once to put them above want and to equip them for the splendid service which they are so well fitted to give.

In leaflet and occasional publications there has been a steady demand upon the Association. There never has been a time when the problems in the field of this Association were more to the fore than is true now. The Negro problem of the South is still the greatest of all problems affecting the future of our nation. In the far west on our Pacific shore the increasing exigency of the problem of Oriental immigration is attracting wider attention. The literature published by the Association touching upon these various problems and fields of educational and philanthropic effort has a large place in clarifying the thought of the nation.

"A Crusade of Brotherhood" by Dr. A. F. Beard, and "Christian Reconstruction in the South" by Sec. H. Paul Douglass, are gaining wide circulation and have already proved of great value in creating wholesome sentiment and bringing reliable information to the thoughtful, Christian patriots of our land.

"Advance in the Antilles" prepared by Dr. H. B. Grose, and published by the Young People's Missionary Movement, has been circulated through the offices of the Association. A considerable number have been sold and numerous study classes are using this book. It has not been for gratuitous circulation, but has been sold by the Young People through the A. M. A.

A pamphlet entitled "Congregational Missionary Work in Porto Rico" prepared by Sec. Douglass, has supplemented the somewhat limited treatment of the work in Porto Rico in the larger book. A large number of this pamphlet have been sold and our Congregational young people are becoming familiar with the progress of the work of the A. M. A. in that interesting island. The completion of Christian Endeavor Hall, at Santurce, Porto Rico, is a permanent evidence of the interest of the young people of our denomination in this field.

With the experience of the past, the greater familiarity of the various state and local apportionment committees with the problems and their development, and with the profound and prayerful interest that the churches have in this great work, we trust that this year may bring to the treasury the full amount of $250,000 from living donors.

Obituaries.

Hon. Justice David J. Brewer, LL.D., of the Supreme Court of the United States, and senior Vice-President and firm friend of the American Missionary Association, was born in Smyrna, Asia Minor, in 1837, was graduated from Yale University in 1856, from Albany Law School in 1858. He began practicing law in Leavenworth, Kan., in 1859; was United States Circuit Court Justice 1884-89 and had been Associate Justice of the United States Supreme Court since 1889. He served on the Venezuelan Boundary Commission in 1896 and on the British-Venezuelan Arbitration Tribunal in 1899. He was the author of several books.

Justice Brewer was of missionary parentage. His father, upon his return from Smyrna, became one of the founders of the American Missionary Association and was upon its first Executive Board.

Rev. John Louis Ewell, D.D., Professor of Church History and Hebrew Exegesis, died in Washington, D. C., after a brief illness, in his seventieth year. Professor Ewell was born in Byfield, Mass. He was graduated at Yale, valedictorian of his class, in 1865. After a period of teaching, he was graduated from Andover Seminary in 1870. He had a highly useful ministry of twenty-one years when he was nominated by the American Missionary Association as their candidate for a professorship in the Theological Department of Howard University, the duties of which he performed with great fidelity and usefulness for sixteen years.

Rev. Jee Gam, the leader of our Chinese Christians in San Francisco, died while on his way to his native land on board the steamer before reaching Honolulu. He was stricken with apoplectic paralysis about six months before. Jee Gam came to California as a boy, and was taken into the family of Rev. Dr. Mooar. He was one of the first of their countrymen to be admitted to a Congregational church on the continent of America. For about forty years he had been connected with the A. M. A.

Miss Anna E. Farrington, who was well known in church and missionary circles of the A. M. A., died on December 1st. She went under the auspices of the American Missionary Association to teach the colored women and children of the Southern states, being stationed at times in Wilmington and other places in North Carolina, also in Alabama. She remained in the service twenty-eight years, engaged in many lines of work. Hundreds of young people in the South cherish the memory of her consecrated service.

Mrs. J. E. B. Jewett, died early in January, 1910. In 1882 Mr. and Mrs. Jewett entered the service of the American Missionary Association in the South, and continued in this work for twelve years, returning to Pepperell, Mass., in 1896. Mrs. Jewett was a woman of great strength and loveliness of character.

Miss Mattie Flint, of Marysville, Cal., who, for the past thirty years, gave her life's best efforts in Christian work for the Chinese, died during the year. Rich in character, with a great faith, earnest and patient in her service, her record was one of beautiful fidelity.

The Rev. J. C. Laster, pastor of the Tempting and Haw Branch Churches, North Carolina, died on June 20, 1910, having been in poor health for more than a year.

ANNUAL REPORT

OF THE

BUREAU OF WOMAN'S WORK,

FOR THE YEAR ENDING SEPTEMBER 30, 1910.

MISS D. E. EMERSON, SECRETARY.

We have closed a year of rewarding and hard work, encouraging in view of some unforeseen difficulties. It is greatly due to the helpful faithfulness and zeal of leaders in state and local women's missionary societies that there has been no backward movement but rather some advance.

The total contributions for the twelve months ending September 30 were $32,476.24.

Of this amount $4,348.47 was from women's local organizations, sent not through the state union treasuries but directly, and nearly all of it assigned for special work. Through the treasuries of the state organizations there was received $28,127.77. Except as otherwise assigned by donors these contributions are applied to the support of women missionaries or as shares in mission stations in all parts of the American Missionary Association field of missions.

Although the amount received through women's state organizations in the last year is a little less than in the preceding year, there are some marks of progress that give encouragement. Of the different sources of contributions, through state union treasuries, more than usual came from women's societies, showing a gain in the right direction, a strengthening of the main line of woman's work in the churches.

Another mark of progress in real helpfulness to the American Missionary Association is the more general adoption of a state "Plan of Work" wholly within the American Missionary Association appropriations to the field. Some state organizations have always done this, counting all "specials" as extra. It is only to the extent that this is done that the women's state or local organizations actually help the National Society to carry through its plan of work throughout the mission field without incurring debt. What are specials? All contributions so assigned by donors, that they must be paid to a mission additional to the amount of the budget assigned to that mission by the American Missionary Association in its plan of work and financial estimates for the year, are "specials." For more specific information correspondence may be had with the Bureau as to what items may be "specials."

A live, growing mission of necessity makes its wants known; simply to report it is sometimes a special appeal; and in so far as a response is extra, and not instead of help on the American Missionary Association appropriation to the field, the Association is not thereby limited. We welcome the closer adherence of state organizations to the American Missionary Association appropriations on field work.

But it is not only in the raising of money that women's organizations are good helpers. They have begun to render valuable aid as an outlook committee for the right kind of field missionaries. This is heartily welcomed by the American Missionary Association. Just as in the administration of state and local societies officers are sought who have fitness for the particular work required, so in the mission field the right kind of missionary worker has to be sought. In its extensive system of schools the American Missionary Association needs many women workers. The first requisite is physical health. Talent, learning, missionary zeal, are of no avail as substitutes. To good health add practical Christian character and special fitness and preparation for any line of teaching, also for work of preceptress and of matrons in large boarding schools. To interest such women in the work of the American Missionary Association, and to encourage them to enter upon it personally, will meet an urgent need. In every department, for the Indians, for the Mountaineers, for the Negroes, and in Porto Rico, the American Missionary Association needs well equipped women workers. Local societies may know of such in their own churches. State officers may come in contact with such at mission conferences. To guide them to the American Missionary Association is to make a contribution to missions.

The representation of women's state organizations through their Federation in the Interdenominational Council of Home Missions has already brought good results. Through this council home missions have had a larger place in summer conferences, more of our leaders have been in attendance, text-book study has been emphasized, and there has come a new awakening on the making of programs that will instruct as well as entertain. The interdenominational text-book for home mission study for 1910-11 is "Advance in the Antilles," and for special information the American Missionary Association has issued a pamphlet, "Congregational Missionary Work in Porto Rico" (price 15 cents), which will be invaluable to those who will study this line of missions.

The observance of the February Day of Prayer, called by the Council of Home Missions, was more general in Congregational societies than in the previous year, nearly 6,000 copies of programs having been called for. It is expected that even larger numbers in our ranks will observe the day in February, 1911.

As an aid to all this movement in women's societies, the American Missionary Association has through its Bureau of Woman's Work circulated without charge a great variety and amount of literature; it has conducted a large correspondence of special information on every line of mission work; it has assigned the box work from women s societies to all parts of its field, box work which has been of inestimable value to our schools and missions.

During the year the secretary has attended some of the state and county meetings of the unions and has responded to as many local calls as possible. To meet the need in this direction a missionary from the field was given leave of absence to assist in the public work, and by invitation of the state organizations was given itineraries in Maine, Vermont, Connecticut, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, with incidental work elsewhere. Other speakers have been provided also for public meetings.

In addition to this a large correspondence from the field has been conducted through the missionary letters of teachers assigned to state organizations for full support. Forty teachers have been thus assigned and many thousands of letters mailed to local societies participating in their support.

In every way have we endeavored to make more widely known the work and purpose of the American Missionary Association—the character of its field, its absorbing interest, the great and important part it has in the real Christianizing of America. The American Missionary Association recognizes the claim of the Eskimos and Indians, of the Orientals, of the Porto Ricans, and the Southern Mountaineers, but its great work is in the black belt of the South. "We can never win our land for Christ and leave the Negro out," was the remark of a prominent leader met at one of the summer conferences. Let us take it to heart; all with whom may yet linger a remnant of prejudice, or who have become weary of well-doing in this particular direction. God shall bless us and that right early, according as we follow His leading and share our blessings with all these His brethren within our own land who have so peculiar claim upon us.

AUDITORS' CERTIFICATE.

We have employed Frederick C. Manvel, Certified Public Accountant of the State of New York, to examine the books and accounts of H. W. Hubbard, Treasurer of The American Missionary Association, for the year ending September 30th, 1910, and herewith submit his statement of the results of his work as a part of our report.

We have also made a careful examination of all bonds and other securities held by the Association and find the same to agree with the records in the books and balance sheet of same date.

The Treasurer's Bond was submitted to us and found to be in order.

EDWIN H. BAKER,
EDWARD P. LYON,
Auditors.

New York, October 14, 1910.

MR. EDWIN H. BAKER, } Auditors.
MR. EDWARD P. LYON, }

GENTLEMEN;

I have examined and audited the books and accounts of the Treasurer of the American Missionary Association for the fiscal year ending September 30th, 1910.

I verified the footings, journalizing, postings and balances in the different books and compared the cancelled checks with the entries in the cash book. I compared the totals with the entries in the monthly reports from which the figures for the Annual Report are, in part, assembled, including those of the receipts as published in the American Missionary.

I have obtained from the several Banks and Trust Companies certificates of the balances to the credit of the Association, and found them in each instance to agree with the books of the Treasurer.

I have compared the figures in the Trial Balance Sheet with those in the General Ledger and in the statements of investments in which the Resources mentioned have been verified by personal examination of the securities in the Safe Deposit Company by the members of the Committee and the Auditors in which examination I assisted.

The Current Fund payments this year have exceeded the receipts by the sum of $2,433.89, and after deducting the balance on hand, October 1st, 1909, $447.56, leaves a debit balance in this account at the close of the year of $1,986.33. As the result of this audit, I am able to hereby report and certify that I have found the records of the year's transactions to be correctly entered and the balances as stated; the books and papers in good order, and the commendable methods, statistical reports and general system which have been in practice in former years are still maintained.

Respectfully,
FREDERICK C. MANVEL,
Certified Public Accountant,
State of New York.

New York, Oct. 14, 1910.

REPORT OF THE EASTERN DISTRICT FOR 1909-1910.

REV. GEORGE H. GUTTERSON, District Secretary.

The fiscal year of the American Missionary Association closing September 30, 1910, marked twelve months of unusual activity in the Eastern District. The Together Campaign left a wake of additional responsibility and labor. This campaign had proved successful among the New England churches and enthusiasm awakened by the meetings continued for some months. The secretary and those in the Boston office, together with representatives from the mission field, filled many appointments. These appointments represented churches in all the states included in the Eastern District and several in Connecticut.

In addition to this campaign work there was constant demand for letters, leaflets, collection envelopes and mite boxes to meet the growing interest in this work. The Boston office is especially favored in the large number of those who run in to talk about the mission work and other matters of church interest. The goodly number of 2,698 such callers visited our A. M. A. room in the Congregational House during the year.

The one great event in this district is the preparation for the National Council. This event calls together clans from all over the country who bring a message of good cheer and uplift to those of us who dwell in the city of the Hub. Never in the history of the Association has its work more closely related itself to questions of political and patriotic importance than is true to-day.

The Apportionment Committees of the several state Conferences and local Associations have been busy in their efforts to make effective the plan for an equable distribution of the responsibilities of missionary support. The election of an Apportionment Commission, contemplated at the National Council, will greatly reinforce this movement so that the support of these missionary organizations of our churches may be provided for leaving the secretaries and missionaries free to present the message of missionary appeal and education.

The World in Boston, as the vast exhibit is called, to be held next spring, calls attention again to the great missionary movements of the world. It is a stupendous undertaking and promises to be of unprecedented interest. The A. M. A. is cooperating in preparing the Negro Exhibit especially.

In the details of the office work it may be interesting to know that of the seventy-five churches visited by the secretary, thirty were new, never having been visited by an A. M. A. representative. Local Associations and state Conferences were included among the addresses of the year. The stereopticon is proving increasingly valuable in the exhibition of missionary work.

A campaign of much importance was carried on by the Eastern District Secretary in Connecticut, with the cordial cooperation of Sec. Ryder, in which a series of mass meetings was held, participated in by representatives of all our benevolent societies, Sec. Soule representing the Connecticut Home Missionary Society.

The National Civic Federation welcomed the Secretary of this district and there is manifest interest on the part of the students of these civic problems in the important work of the American Missionary Association.

REPORT OF THE WESTERN DISTRICT FOR 1909-1910.

REV. LUCIUS O. BAIRD, D.D., District Secretary.

No complete report of the Western District can be made this year because of the necessary retirement of Dr. Geo. E. Hall, its efficient Secretary, when the year was about half over. After a hard year, including strenuous work in the Together Campaign, Dr. Hall opened the present year with somewhat impaired health, but with a strong hope that daily strength would come for daily need. In this he was doomed to disappointment and his physicians made a peremptory demand that he lay down the work. This he reluctantly did, writing, "This is the greatest disappointment of my life."

The present Secretary took up the work April first. A five weeks' trip among the schools and churches of the South gave him a chance to see the needs of the work and the response of the people helped. The rest of the time has been taken up with getting in touch with the local field and in visitation among the churches and Associations of the District.

Key Men and Co-operation.

In seeking out key men in the local Associations and Conferences to push the interests of this Association in their own bodies, he has been much impressed with the readiness of the response. Not less than seventy-five such men each wrote five to fifteen personal letters to churches which had been remiss in their responsibility "concerning the offering." Both laymen and ministers seem ready and willing to do gratuitous work along the line of the Apportionment, the bare expense of postage and sometimes stenography being met by this office.

First Hand Information.

Another encouraging sign is the desire for first hand information. Some ministers expect to visit the Southern work and to see for themselves. One wrote that he was planning to give up going to the National Council, although a delegate, in order to have the money to make a trip of investigation. He felt that he would have more of a message for his people and could be of more service to the Kingdom by such an investment of his time and money.

Two Decades of Anonymous Service.

The year closes with another change in the Western Office, which brings much regret and a serious interruption in the work. Miss Frances H. Beatty, after twenty-two years of devoted attention to the routine matters connected with so wide a field, has felt that she has earned a release. She has accordingly accepted the invitation of a relative to be with her this winter. Miss Beatty knew the entire work of the Association, was an acceptable speaker at Woman's Meetings, and in the absence of the Secretary carried on much of the correspondence with tact and judgment. While personally acquainted with many she was unknown by name to the wider field of constituents and a countless number of churches whom she patiently served. To all such anonymous workers every great cause owes much of its success and gladly records its lasting debt of gratitude. Before she left, Dr. Armstrong, of the City Missionary Society, in behalf of her associates in the Chicago Congregational offices presented her with a token of esteem, and expressed for them their high regard of her presence among them.

The Problems of the District.

This district is up against the problems of the Association in concrete form. It impinges upon the Negro at its southern border and upon the Indian at its western. It has the Mountaineer in Missouri. The mask is off. Romance grapples with reality. Unfortunately, the unleavened mass is more in evidence than the salted few. In the Western and Pacific Districts the theory of brotherhood is put to the practical test by contact with individual samples of the races to be brothered, and the theory usually goes to pieces in the clash of race antipathy. In spite of these conditions the churches are teaching people to differentiate between the good and the bad of each color, and are increasing slowly their gifts.

The Large-Hearted East.

For some time to come the large-hearted and broad-visioned easterner must bear with the slower response of the westerner. But as that response comes it will be the result of a conviction born of a battle with the facts at close range. The hope lies in the fact that the closer people get to the real situation, the surer they are that the theory of brotherhood is correct. Whoever found a pessimist among the missionaries who have devoted their lives to this up-lift, or among the teachers who have crushed in their hands the thorns as they eagerly plucked the roses? The solution of the difficulties of brotherhood is more brotherhood.

REPORT OF THE PACIFIC DISTRICT FOR 1909-1910.

REV. GEORGE W. HINMAN, District Secretary.

The Pacific District, including Washington, Oregon, California, with its two State Conferences, Idaho, Nevada, Utah and Arizona, presents two distinct problems in relation to the work of the American Missionary Association. First, the problem of developing among churches where the pressure of home mission responsibility is still urgent an interest and an active support of a missionary work which is somewhat remote from them in place and thought, and second, the problem of relating a strong successful local work auxiliary to the A. M. A. With the broad inclusive work for the neglected and backward races in other parts of the country, the problem of developing a comprehensive sympathy which will do even more for the support of Oriental work while taking up also the moral and financial burden of work for Indians and Negroes and the mountaineers of the South, and the people of our new island territories.

Progress has been made in both these directions. The strong sense of responsibility felt by the churches of California for the support of Oriental work is a good foundation on which to build an interest in the whole work of the Association, and where that work can be adequately considered, as notably in the Woman's Home Missionary Unions, a broad interest is being developed. The work in Alaska, the work for the Southern mountaineers, and the Indian work, especially for the neglected tribes of Southern Oregon and Northern California, is now securing increased attention and support.

During the early part of the fiscal year the secretary had his office in Seattle, in the rooms occupied also by the Home Missionary Superintendent and the Sunday-school Superintendent. From that center the churches of the Northwest were reached and helpful acquaintances formed. In December the Association's office was established, by invitation of Dr. Pond, in the new building of the California Oriental Mission in San Francisco.

The Secretary has been cordially received at the State Conferences and many local associations and in the churches in all parts of the district which he has been able to visit. Calls have been relatively more numerous for general occasions than to present the work of the Association in the churches, partly because the magnificent distances between points in the district make it seem impracticable to call the secretary to distant points for a single appointment, partly because the adoption of the Apportionment Plan seems at first to make unnecessary the educational appeal of the secretary, and also because in California, the local work is being so extensively presented to the churches by the superintendent of the Oriental work.

The secretary has gladly cooperated with the state committees in several states of the district in forwarding apportionment plans and testifies to the loyalty of the churches to our missionary interest, and to the advance made in the support of missionary work through the influence of the Apportionment Plan. This has been especially marked in the smaller churches, very many of which have been added to the list of contributing churches. The larger churches, however, with well established plans for missionary offerings are less ready to adhere to the suggested percentages for the different societies, and often give in glaring disproportion to the various missionary interests.

The methods of state apportionment and collection of missionary offerings in the various states are quite different, and have been some more and some less successful in securing the desired end. The state committees are working faithfully to secure a contribution from every church for every society, and are experimenting to find the best plan.

Soon after arrival in San Francisco, I was elected a member of the Board of Directors of the Oriental Mission, and have given much time and thought to the study of its work and to planning with the superintendent and other directors for advancing its interests by bringing its work into closer touch with local churches and with the general administration of the Association's work. Much more needs to be done to co-ordinate this work with the Association's other missionary activities, to federate the work with similar work along the Coast, and to develop a still larger sense of connection between the local churches and the missions. All gifts for the Oriental Mission work are counted as gifts to the American Missionary Association, but a completely satisfactory adjustment of collections for the Association's general work and for the Oriental work has not yet been attained.

The response of the Sunday-schools to the suggestion of Lincoln Sunday observance was most gratifying. The concert exercises were used by a large number of schools, and not a few churches found this the simplest way to raise their A. M. A. apportionment.

The contributions of the states to the general work of the Association, though still relatively small, have been considerably increased during the past year, about 20%. Idaho has made an advance in gifts from the living of 140%, Oregon of 54%, Utah, 14%, and Washington, in spite of the strain of coming to self-support in home missions, has made a slight advance in its giving. In Nevada, Arizona and Northern and Southern California the offerings of the churches for the Oriental work have for the first time been tabulated on the same basis as the offerings for the general work, so that no comparison of their total offerings with those of previous years is possible.

BRIEF HISTORY.

Organization. The American Missionary Association was formed in 1846. It is distinctively a Christian missionary society to spread the gospel of Christ wherever it has opportunity. It was organized with pronounced opposition to slavery, which then existed, and against all race and caste prejudice, which still exists. It was preceded by four recently established missionary organizations, which were subsequently merged into it. They were the Amistad Committee, the Union Missionary Society, the Committee for West India Missions among the recently emancipated slaves of Jamaica, and the Western Evangelical Missionary Society for work among the American Indians.

In the foreign field, in 1854, its laborers numbered seventy-nine, located in West Africa, Jamaica, the Sandwich Islands, Siam, Egypt among the Copts, Canada among the colored refugees and in North America among the Indians.

The home departments embraced two distinct fields, the West and the South. There were 112 home missionaries employed by the Association in 1860, fifteen of them being located in the slave states and in Kansas.

The missions in the slave states gave rise to some of the most stirring events in the history of the Association, which has the distinction of beginning the first decided efforts, while slavery existed, to organize churches and schools in the South on an avowedly anti-slavery basis.

Among the Negroes. The crisis so long impending came at length, and the Union armies, entering the South in 1861, opened the way for the instruction and elevation of the colored people. The Association felt itself providentially prepared to engage in this work, and the first systematic effort for their relief was made by it. Large numbers of "contrabands," or escaping fugitive slaves, were gathered at Fortress Monroe and Hampton, Va., and were homeless and destitute. The Association, on the 17th of September, 1861, established the first day-school among the freedmen. That little school laid the foundation for the Hampton Institute which the Association founded later, and was the forerunner of the hundreds that have followed.

The Proclamation of Emancipation, dated January 1, 1863, insured the permanent freedom of Negroes who reached the Union lines. The American Missionary Association rapidly extended its work. At Norfolk the school of the previous year now numbered 1,200 pupils. Teachers were also sent to Newbern and Roanoke Island, N. C., to Beaufort, Hilton Head, St. Helena and Ladies' Island, S. C., and to St. Louis, Mo., and its force was scattered over the field held by our armies in the District of Columbia, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Florida, Louisiana, Kentucky, Tennessee, Mississippi, Arkansas, Missouri, and Kansas.

Close of the War. Freedmen's Bureau. Boston Council. The year 1865 was marked by the close of the Civil War, by the establishment, by act of Congress, of the Freedmen's Bureau, and by the holding of a National Council of Congregational Churches in Boston, which recommended to the churches to raise $250,000 for the work among the freedmen, and designated this Association as the organization providentially fitted to carry it forward. The Association accepted the responsibility, appointed district secretaries at Chicago, Cincinnati and Boston, and collecting agents in other portions of the northern states. It also solicited funds in Great Britain, and succeeded in securing that year a little more than the $250,000 recommended by the Council. Its receipts from all sources ran up from $47,828 in 1861 to $253,045 in 1856, and $420,768 in 1870.

But in the South there came a reign of terror under the infamous Ku-Klux-Klans—the Thugs of America. The colored people were often assaulted by mobs, dragged from their homes at midnight, and shot down in the streets. But there was no want of courage on the part of our teachers to enter or remain in the field; the number of teachers, which was 320 in 1865, was enlarged to 528 in 1867, 532 in 1868, and 533 in 1870.

Permanent Educational Institutions. It was during this very period that the beginnings were made for most of our chartered educational institutions. The Association must train the teachers and preachers for this people.

The Association now sustains Atlanta Theological Seminary, Georgia; Fisk University, Tennessee; Talladega College, Alabama; Tougaloo University, Mississippi; Straight University, Louisiana; Tillotson College, Texas, and Piedmont College, Georgia, together with 68 schools of lower grades planted at strategic points in the lowlands and highlands of the South. There are also one school among the Indians, twenty-four among the Chinese and Japanese on the Pacific Coast, one in Alaska and one in Porto Rico. Educational and church work is also developing in Hawaii.

Theological departments have also been maintained in Howard University, Talladega College and Atlanta Seminary. Industrial instruction first began in southern mission schools in Talladega, Ala., and was early introduced into many of our schools and has been constantly extended. Talladega College, Tougaloo University and Joseph K. Brick Normal School have large farms. In all the larger institutions mechanical arts are taught to the boys, and household work, cooking, sewing, washing, nursing, etc., to the girls. From the schools go forth annually hundreds of well-qualified teachers and ministers.

Church Planting. Simultaneously with the founding of these permanent institutions the Association began the planting of churches among the freedmen. They were formed mainly in connection with the educational institutions, and were intended to be models of true church life. The work of church planting has been pressed forward with a steady hand until the churches now number 211 located in nearly all the states of the South, among the Negroes, the Highlanders, the Indians, Chinese and Japanese in the West, and in the island of Porto Rico, with fruitful results. Sunday-schools, temperance efforts and revivals of religion have been marked features in the work. Christian Endeavor Societies were promptly organized and have been rapidly multiplied.

Mountain Work. The early labors of the Association in home mission work were directed to the white people of the West and South. The mountain region of the Central South embraces West Virginia, southwestern Virginia, southeastern Kentucky, western North Carolina, eastern Tennessee and portions of northern Georgia and northern Alabama. It is 500 miles long and 200 miles wide, and contains a population of about 2,000,000, seven-eighths of whom are white. Churches, preaching stations and schools have been established along or near the line of railroads traversing the mountain districts, or in regions not yet reached by such communications, where thousands of Highlanders live. Schools, churches and missions are now established in the mountain regions of five southern states. The schools give prominence to normal and industrial training, sending out each year a large number of well-trained teachers, who, taking charge of the district schools, are making them over after the best models. Strategic points are occupied by these institutions, such as Evarts, Ky.; Grand View and Pleasant Hill, Tenn.; Joppa, Ala.; Saluda and Blowing Rock, N. C. The preaching of an intelligent gospel and the establishment of Sunday-schools, Mission Bands, Mothers' Circles and Christian Endeavor Societies contribute greatly to the development of these interesting Highlanders in their domestic and social life as well as that distinctively religious.

The Indians. Some of the earliest labors of the Association were among the Indians. In 1852 it had twenty-one missionaries stationed among the Indians of the Northwest. Various causes conspired to the gradual diminution of these missions. But in 1882 an arrangement was made with the American Board by which it transferred to the Association its Indian missions in this country, and the Association withdrew from missions in foreign lands. At the time of the transfer the Association had missions in Skokomish, Wash., Leach Lake, Minn., and Spokane Falls. The transfer from the Board committed to its care the mission and school at the Santee Agency, Neb., Oahe, S. D., with outlying stations on the Cheyenne and White Rivers, and the mission and school at Fort Berthold, N. D. Since these missions and schools came under the care of the Association the facilities and force of workers have been increased, and missions have been added at Fort Yates, N. D.; Rosebud, S. D., and the Crow Agency, Mont. The churches number seventeen, with a membership of 1,208. Schools number one, with 291 pupils. The outstations number twenty-six.

Alaska. Our Alaskan Mission at Cape Prince of Wales was formed in 1890. It it now entirely supported by the special contributions sent to our treasury for this purpose. In connection with the educational and mission work a herd of reindeer is in the care of a missionary. The report of our missionaries in Alaska presents a very hopeful picture of work among the Eskimos.

Chinese and Japanese in America. The American Missionary Association was one of the pioneers in mission service among the Chinese immigrants to California. It began the work as early as 1852. In 1874 Dr. W. C. Pond, pastor of the Bethany Church, San Francisco, was appointed superintendent.

The number of workers is forty, and schools twenty-four, located at Bakersfield, Berkeley, Fresno, Los Angeles, Marysville, Oakland, Oroville, Pasadena, Riverside, Sacramento, San Diego, Santa Barbara, San Francisco and Saratoga.

Ten Oriental churches and branch churches have been organized in California during the past few years and one Japanese church in Seattle, Washington.

The converted Chinamen have long desired the establishment of missions in their native country, to which, if they should return thither, they might resort as a Christian home, and from which they might go forth for mission work among their countrymen. The Chinese Missionary Society, composed of those who have been converted in Chinese missions, and which was organized in 1886, and commenced work in China in 1890, has already contributed above $15,000 to missions in China. With this they have established headquarters at Canton with property worth $40,000. They have also property in Hong Kong valued at $9,250. They have also a twenty years' lease of a good chapel in Ci Ning City, where they have organized a church.

Porto Rico. The American Missionary Association follows the flag. It did this in the Civil War, bringing the blessing of Christian instruction to the Negroes. It followed the same course at the close of the war with Spain. Porto Rico came under the flag and became a part of the national territory. The responsibility for the Christian instruction of the people fell with especial force upon our American churches. The American Missionary Association carefully investigated the field through representatives who were sent to the island. The need was found to be very great. There was an immediate demand for well appointed Christian schools for the instruction of children and youth and also for the preaching of a broad and free gospel to the people. In 1899 eight teachers were sent to this field to establish and maintain these schools, and an evangelist to preach the gospel as widely as possible throughout the island. Nine churches, with 522 members, are now organized.

Blanche Kellogg Institute is located at Santurce, near San Juan, a strategic position for a large work. The pastors also hold a circuit of preaching stations through the eastern portion of the island, where there are scarcely any other missionary efforts. There is great need for increased income to the Association to meet the demands of this large and growing field.

Hawaiian Islands. The Association, in 1904, by the urgent request of the Hawaiian Evangelical Association, undertook to aid the latter in its entire work among the native Hawaiians, and the Chinese, and Japanese, in those islands. The Hawaiian Islands consist of a group of eight inhabited and four uninhabited islands. They are situated 2,100 miles from San Francisco and 3,400 miles from Japan. The people of Hawaii are made up of native Hawaiians, about 40,000; Chinese, 18,000; Japanese, 75,000; Portuguese and West Indians, 28,000; Americans and Europeans other than Portuguese, about 14,000. The Hawaiian Islands seem to have been providentially situated so as to form the training school of missionaries for the Orient. In the providence of God many Chinese and Japanese have settled here. Back of this work in Hawaii there lies the great field of missions in China and Japan. There is also every inducement possible in the line of home missionary responsibility to support generously this work in our new island territory. This is the gateway to Asia and means great things in the regeneration of that vast region.

Bureau of Woman's Work. Formed in 1883. It gives direction and efficiency to the various lines of womens' aid to the American Missionary Association. Women's State Missionary Unions and organizations co-operate in raising funds for the prosecution of the work of the Association.

Publications. The American Missionary magazine represents the work of all the homeland societies and is issued monthly. The price is fifty cents per year in single subscriptions; clubs of five or more, twenty-five cents each. It contains fresh information from the several mission fields and other material of especial value to those studying the comprehensive missionary work carried on by our Congregational churches. The magazine is generously illustrated and merits a wide circulation among the members of our churches and others interested in these great national and religious problems.

A large number of interesting leaflets, bringing the most recent information obtainable, are also published. They are issued for general use and distributed as desired among those interested in these great national and religious problems.

The American Missionary Association.

SEC. 4. The said corporation shall have power to receive and disburse funds, and to purchase, receive, hold and take by donation, deed, devise or bequest, any real or personal estate which has been or will hereafter be given, granted, devised or bequeathed to it for the purpose stated in section first, or which may accrue from the use of the same; subject, however, to the provisions of chapter three hundred and sixty of the Laws of eighteen hundred and sixty, entitled: An Act relating to Wills; but it shall at no time hold property the annual income of which shall exceed one hundred thousand dollars;* and shall always have full power to grant, bargain, lease or otherwise dispose of the same, provided that the proceeds from such grant, bargain, lease or disposal shall never, in any manner, be diverted to any other purpose than that for which the property was originally donated.

ART. I.—MEETINGS.

The Committee shall hold its regular meeting on the second Tuesday of each month at 3.30 o'clock, P. M. Special meetings may be called at the written request of any two members of the Committee. The call for any such special meeting and the notices sent out shall state the business to be considered.

Notices of the regular and special meetings of the Committees should be sent by mail to its members, or otherwise communicated in writing at least one day previous to the time of meeting.

ART. II.—OFFICERS AND COMMITTEES.

At the first regular meeting of the Executive Committee after the Annual Meeting of the American Missionary Association, a Chairman, a Vice-Chairman and a Recording Secretary shall be chosen by ballot, who shall hold office for one year or until their successors are elected.

At the same meeting the following Standing Committees for the year shall be appointed:

1. A Committee on Finance, to consist of seven members, of whom the Chairman of the Executive Committee shall be one.
2. A Committee on Missions, to consist of five members.
3. A Committee on Support, to consist of five members.

Three members of each of said Committees shall constitute a quorum.

* By Chapter five hundred and fifty-three of the Laws of 1890 of the State of New York, the Association now has power to take and hold property the yearly income derived from which shall not exceed two hundred and fifty thousand dollars.

The said Standing Committees shall hold office until their successors are appointed; and each of them shall elect a Chairman and a Secretary from its own number; shall hold a monthly meeting to consider matters pertaining to its department; and shall keep minutes of its proceedings to be submitted to the Executive Committee; and all of its recommendations shall be formulated so as clearly to set forth, in the form of resolution or vote, the action recommended.

A Committee on Appropriations, to consist of four members, shall also be formed in the manner hereinafter designated.

ART. III.—DUTIES OF OFFICERS AND COMMITTEES.

CHAIRMAN.—It shall be the duty of the Chairman to preside at all meetings of the Committee, to facilitate the transaction of its business, to sign, when necessary, checks upon the bank accounts of the Association, and to appoint all standing and special committees not otherwise provided for, subject to the approval of the Executive Committee.

VICE-CHAIRMAN.—In the absence of the Chairman, or in his disability to act, the Vice-Chairman shall perform his duties.

TEMPORARY CHAIRMAN.—In the absence or inability of both, a temporary Chairman may be appointed by the Executive Committee.

RECORDING SECRETARY.—The Recording Secretary shall keep the minutes of the Committee, and read them at its regular meetings. He shall cause all Committees to be notified, in writing, of their appointment within twenty-four hours thereafter, and shall inform them of the business referred to them. In his absence or inability to act the Chairman shall appoint a substitute.

COMMITTEE ON FINANCE.—It shall be the duty of the Committee on Finance to employ an expert accountant to examine the accounts of the Treasurer for the month preceding each regular meeting of the Executive Committee before such meeting, taking the books of account kept by him, and comparing them with the statement of the month's receipts and disbursements and with the vouchers, and to certify to the correctness of such statements when approved by the accountant. They shall also cause to be kept a book, wherein shall be set forth in detail (1) all stocks and bonds owned by the Association, at par, with a note of the original cost of the same to the Association; (2) all real estate (both land and buildings) and other property of the Association, with the full cost of the same; and (3) all property held on special deposit or in trust. This book shall be at all times open to the inspection of the members of the Executive Committee, and the record shall be so added to and amended, from time to time, under the direction of the Committee on Finance, as to show at all times a correct statement of the property of the Association, and of any special trusts in its hands. All title deeds to real estate and certificates of stocks and bonds owned by the Association shall be in charge of this Committee, who shall provide a proper place for their safe keeping. This Committee shall, when occasion requires, direct the sale and transfer of stocks, invest any funds of the Association, not required or designated for current expenses, and in general shall have the oversight of financial concerns of the Association, under the direction of the Executive Committee.

COMMITTEE ON MISSIONS.—It shall be the duty of the Committee on Missions to report to the Executive Committee, at its regular meeting every month, such suggestions or proposed action as shall seem to it desirable for furthering the efficiency and economy of the missionary and educational work of the Association. It shall also have power to manage the current work of the Association assigned to it, subject to the general supervision and direction of the Executive Committee.

COMMITTEE ON SUPPORT.—It shall be the duty of this Committee to meet at least once in two months to consider methods of promoting a missionary spirit throughout the churches, and of securing from the churches and friends of missions by addresses and publications, and through the various district offices and agencies and otherwise, the amounts required for the support and constant enlargement of the work, and to report to the Executive Committee such recommendations as shall seem desirable.

Each of these Committees shall appoint its own meetings, keep books of record of its proceedings (the minutes of each Committee being read at the regular meetings of the Executive Committee) and consult and advise with the Corresponding Secretaries, with the Treasurer of the Association, and with the District Secretaries and agents in regard to its work.

COMMITTEE ON APPROPRIATIONS.—It shall be the duty of the Committee on Appropriations to consider the work of the Association carefully, and to present to the Executive Committee, at its meeting in May or June, a detailed statement of the amounts required in each department of the Association for the proper conduct of its own work, and an estimate of the probable receipts of the Association, together with its recommendations as to the amounts which should be appropriated for the next fiscal year. All appropriations in excess of the annual budget shall be referred to the Committee on Appropriations before final action, unless adopted by a unanimous vote of the members of the Executive Committee present at a regular meeting. This Committee shall consist of the Chairman of the Executive Committee and the Chairmen of the three Standing Committees.

STANDING COMMITTEES can be formed only of members of the Executive Committee. SPECIAL COMMITTEES may be appointed from time to time as required. All Special Committees shall examine and report upon every matter referred to them with the facts in substance, and their opinions and recommendations, so that the Executive Committee may be fully enabled to act thereon.

APPEALS.—Every appointee of the Association has the fullest liberty of appeal to the Executive Committee. Such communications shall be referred to the appropriate Committee according to the part of the field from which they come, for examination and a report on the matter involved, at the next meeting of the Executive Committee, when they shall receive careful attention in executive session.

ART. IV.—DUTIES OF CORRESPONDING SECRETARIES.

The Corresponding Secretaries shall conduct the correspondence of the Association and of the Executive Committee, except that which relates immediately to the Treasurer's department, and shall have the charge and direction of the work of the Association under the Executive Committee, and shall present to the various Standing Committees such suggestions and plans as shall seem to them desirable for the efficient work of the Association. They shall also prepare each month, and put into the hands of each member of the Executive Committee, before its regular monthly meeting, a schedule of the business which the Standing and any Special Committees may report to the Executive Committee for its action, and any other business they may desire to bring before the Executive Committee. It shall also be their duty to present to the Standing and Special Committees, and to the Executive Committee, all matters relating to their several departments, and to sign checks upon the bank accounts of the Association.

All appointments of missionaries, whether they are to act as pastors or general missionaries, presidents and professors of chartered institutions, principals of high and normal schools, district secretaries, field superintendent and other agents, and all matters involving questions of property or affecting the policy of the Association, shall be referred to the Executive Committee for final action.

ART. V.—DUTIES OF THE TREASURER.

It shall be the duty of the Treasurer to receive all money contributed or intrusted to the Association, and to give receipts therefor; to deposit it to the credit of the Association in such bank or institution as may be designated by the Committee on Finance; to keep clear and accurate accounts of all sums received and expended by the Association; to make payments and remittances in accordance with, and never in excess of, the appropriations made by the Executive Committee; to endorse checks and drafts for deposit, and sign checks for the purpose of the Association; to report to the Finance and Executive Committees each month the receipts and disbursements for the previous month, and at the end of the fiscal year, for the year, and to keep all books of account required by them; to conduct the correspondence relating immediately to his department, and to perform such other acts as are necessary to the faithful execution of the duties of his office.

His books of account and vouchers for payment shall at all times be open to the inspection of any member of the Executive Committee, and shall be submitted by him each month to the Committee on Finance for their examination.

It shall be his duty to present to the Standing and Special Committees and to the Executive Committee such financial business as needs their action.

ART. VI.—DISTRICT SECRETARIES.

The Executive Committee shall appoint such District Secretaries as it may deem expedient, who shall visit churches and in other ways disseminate information concerning the condition and needs of the Association throughout the districts assigned to them. They shall also collect funds, and perform such other duties as may be required. They shall keep in constant conference with the New York office, and every month shall send to it, for the Executive Committee, a report of their work the previous month and of the condition of the interests of the Association in their several districts.

ART. VII.—CHECKS AND PAYMENTS.

All checks upon the bank accounts of the Association may be signed by (1) the Chairman (or Vice-Chairman or Temporary Chairman) of the Executive Committee (2), a Corresponding Secretary, or (3), the Treasurer. Any two of these signatures shall render a check valid, but no check will be valid with one signature only. All transfers of stock, conveyances of real estate and other instruments requiring the seal of the Association shall be signed in the same manner, except that the Treasurer may sign receipts for money and for legacies, when paid in full or on account, and, if required, affix thereto the seal of the Association. The Treasurer may also sign and affix the seal of the Association, if required, to any papers in any legal proceeding in which the Association may be interested when specially authorized so to do by the Committee on Finance.

All payments of the Association shall be made by check payable to order, except petty cash expenditures, which shall be paid by the Treasurer and at convenient times be aggregated, and a check shall be drawn to his order therefor.

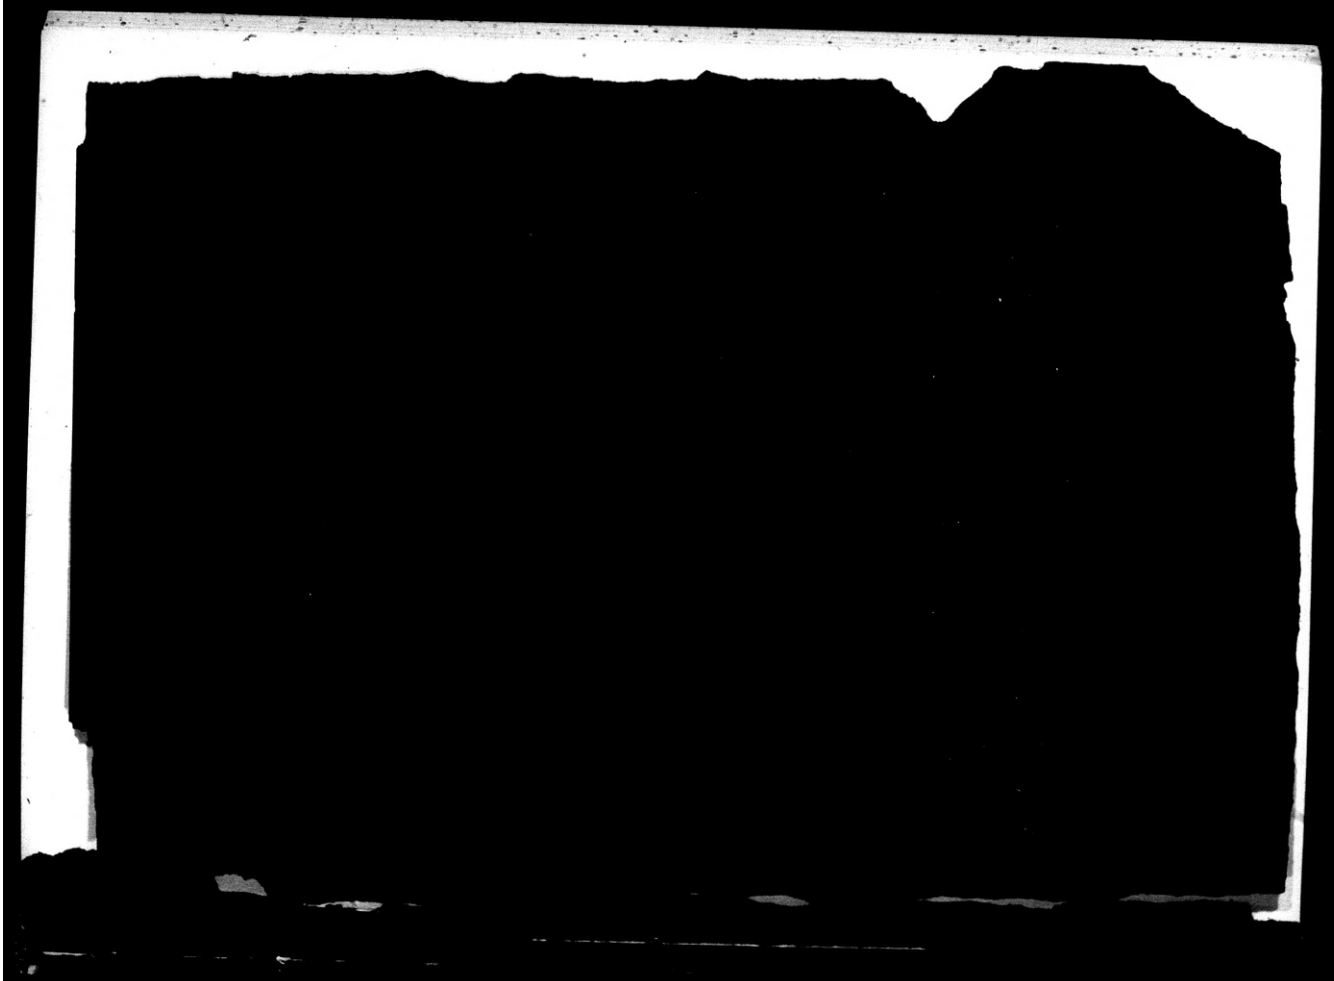
No disbursement shall be made without authority of the Executive Committee.

ART. VIII.—CLAIMS FOR DISBURSEMENTS BY OFFICERS AND EMPLOYEES.

All claims for disbursements by any officer or employee shall be accompanied by vouchers, except for telegrams, postage and traveling expenses, and charges below twenty dollars in amount, all of which shall be certified by the claimant to the Treasurer, with the items.

ART. IX.—ORDER OF BUSINESS.

The following shall be the order of business of the Committee at its regular meetings:



1. Prayer.
2. Reading of the minutes of the last regular meeting and of intervening meetings.
3. Report of the Treasurer.
4. Reports of Corresponding Secretaries and District Secretaries.

8. New business.
9. Executive session.

The business of each special meeting shall be limited to the items mentioned in the call for such meeting.

ART. X.—AMENDMENTS.

Mr. President and Ladies and Gentlemen:

I have a very pleasant duty to perform. In accordance with the earnest request of the officers and members of the American Missionary Association, I desire to extend their most hearty and sincere thanks to the following persons: In the first place, to his excellency, the Governor of this Commonwealth, for his presence with us this morning and for his most eloquent and earnest words. In the second place, to his honor, Mayor Pickman, of this city, who extended to us on the first day of our meeting here the bounteous hospitality of the city of Lowell, and welcomed us here.

We desire to acknowledge the courtesy of the railroads in New England and beyond in furnishing low rates of transportation for the meeting, also to the newspapers for their work, and to the policemen and all other officials who have helped us by their kind assistance. Most especially and emphatically, however, we desire to thank the people of Lowell connected with the Congregational or other churches in the city for so freely opening their homes to the many strangers who have gathered here during these three days. This is a most wonderful reminder to-night that New England hospitality has suffered no diminution.

I am sure that we should be very remiss if we did not remember here the faithful and constant service of the Boys' Brigade and the young ladies who in the committee rooms and at the doors and in other places have added their most important service in making our stay here pleasant and profitable. We thank the friends of the First Congregational church for the use of this beautiful and commodious edifice. We do not forget the singers and organists whose music has been an inspiration.

It is not inappropriate that there should be mentioned in a last word the pastors of our Congregational churches here, who not only during these three days but for many days before have with heart and hand labored in our behalf. To their energetic and efficient labors the success of this great meeting is largely due. I therefore move you that these resolutions of thanks be unanimously adopted by the congregation here present, and that they manifest their acquiescence in this by a rising vote.

After singing "My Country, 'tis of Thee," and the benediction by Rev. Lyman Abbott, the Association was adjourned.

WILLIAM E. BARTON, Assistant Secretary.

BY REV. A. E. DUNNING, Chairman.

The twenty-fourth year of the Chinese Missions of the American Missionary Association on the Pacific Coast closes with twenty-one schools under its care, all of them in California. During the year thirty-four teachers have taught 1,201 Chinese pupils, of whom 197 have been led to cease worshiping idols and 173 have professed faith in Jesus Christ.

These schools are scattered through the cities and towns, from San Francisco, southward 500 miles, to San Diego on the borders of Mexico.

The work done is hand-to-hand work, not marked by waves of emotion, not blocked by excited opposition. The teachers in these schools patiently lead their pupils into the knowledge of the English language and American customs, and as patiently, step by step, into the knowledge of the gospel of Christ and forgiveness for sins through Him. They meet the traditions of idol and ancestor worship inherited from more than twice as many as the Christian centuries. They seek to recreate consciences in bondage of fear to evil spirits into consciences responsive to the will of the one holy God; to awaken, as the supreme motive to obedience to that will, the love of Chinamen for that Jew who was incarnate as the only begotten Son of God, who is the crucified and risen Lord of Jews and Chinamen who believe on Him.

The opposition to the work of these missionary teachers and converted Chinamen has no warmth of excitement. It is cold-blooded on the part of the heathen themselves, whose tender mercies are cruel, and it is directed against those who renounce heathendom for Christ only as those familar from birth with race pride and national inheritance and family ties of their countrymen could carry it on. On the part of Americans, it is mainly indifference, which sometimes sinks into the sneer of a Congressman or the oath of a sand-lot politician, or else it is the expressed conviction that no Chinaman is sincere, and that the only aim of the pupils is selfish—to learn English or get work. Enough examples of this sort are furnished to give as sharp a point to these criticisms as goes with those made against evangelistic movements in Christian communities; perhaps not more, in proportion.

These teachers, then, do not find their reward in money, or in fame, or in the excitement of large gains in the number of converts. The Superintendent of this work, Dr. W. C. Pond, says that he notified them several months ago that owing to the stringency of the times he might not be able to send them the small pittance on which they have heretofore sustained themselves, and that he would not blame them if they closed their schools. But not one teacher closed his school. The replies from Chinese teachers are quite as interesting as those from Americans. One of the latter answered, "I shall not join the strikers, but keep right on." Gin Foo King wrote, "God will take care of us; why should we fear?" An American teacher answered, "Pay or no pay, I shall keep up the school." Joe Dun said, "You need not send money; I have rice." These replies show that the converted Chinaman has not less Christian heroism than the American Christian; and when we remember that $10,000 only is asked for from all our Congregational churches to sustain these workers for the coming year, it would seem that there must be enough responsive heroism in all the Congregational disciples of Jesus Christ to make up that amount.

This work is not likely to take on much larger proportions. The number of Chinese in this country is slowly but steadily decreasing, and is now probably less than 100,000. The immigrants come from one province only, and that under British control. Yet the results of this work have already far more than justified the small outlay, nor are they without elements of romance to which the providence of God may give unexpected splendor. We have not only to consider in heavenly measurements the significance of some 1,050 Chinamen professing themselves followers of Jesus Christ in California since this mission began. We have to think of many of them going back into heathen communities with a faith as inspiring as that which animated the saints of Cæsar's household to whom the Apostles sent greeting. We have to think of the mission which these Chinese Christians in America moved the American Board to start, and which they continue in part to sustain in South China, only ten years old yet, but already having a church of 63 members, 5 missionaries and 10 teachers and 420 pupils, evangelizing influences from our mission in America, working in the heart of the oldest, darkest, greatest center of Asiatic heathendom. We have to think of the present war between China and Japan with its unknown possibilities, with its amazing certainties of breaking down old and mighty barriers and opening the way for western civilization and the universal gospel; and we have to think of the Divine Providence over all, working to transform these ancient kingdoms of darkness into the kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ, and giving to faithful waiting and working disciples rewards greater than they have conceived of for their interest, their prayers, their gifts in the great work of God in bringing the nations into obedience to His blessed will. Let us remember China, and remember that in our Chinese mission God has set before us an open door.

By Rev. Dwight M. Pratt, Chairman.

A lover of Christ's kingdom cannot study the work of this Association during the past year without a warming of his blood. It illustrates the devotion, the zeal, the self-renunciation, the heroic sacrifice which everywhere makes the ministrations of the gospel a redeeming power. Churches here at home that find the work of conversion difficult, and spiritual harvestings meager, may well turn for inspiration to the Indian churches of Nebraska and the Dakotas, where in some instances twenty-four, and even as many as forty-six, new converts have been added to individual churches during the year on confession of faith. Many of our large city churches cannot claim such a large Sunday-school as that of Fort Berthold, N. D., with its enrollment of 275 Indian children, or such proportionate benevolence as that of the Indian churches which gave last year out of their poverty $300, $309 and $375 respectively. Where, under similar conditions, among our white populations can we parallel the church at Fort Yates, that in four years has grown from a membership of 16 to 160, and at the May communion added seventeen more converted Indians to its enrollment?

Such spiritual fruitage in a work so recently established is simply marvelous. It puts to shame the devotion, the benevolence, the converting power of our Congregational churches throughout the land, and places the work of this Association on the highest level of Christian effectiveness?

This brief report can call attention only to points of special interest and importance. An opportunity of rare promise has presented itself in the young mission at Crow Agency, Montana. More than 3,000 Indians come under its immediate supervision. No other evangelical Protestant mission has entered the reservation. Providence has in a very marked way fitted for this work a young Englishman, educated at Eton, who came to Canada expecting to act as foreign correspondent of a London bank. The story of his conversion is one of the romances of missions. Seeking to aid the Indians on the frontier of Canada, he realized his utter inability to relieve their deepest wants and comfort their sorrows without a loving faith in Christ. As a result, he became a Christian. He soon sought ordination as a missionary. A central congregation of 115 is the fruit of two years' work. The little building now used as a chapel should at once be replaced by a commodious structure costing at least $2,500. Your committee would specially commend this enterprise to the prompt generosity of some large-hearted givers, with the hope that special donations by individuals or churches may at once cover this pressing need. The opportunity, in its magnificence, cannot be surpassed. The work of the Association among the Indians seems to be demonstrating in a very marked way the law of spiritual increase, "to him that hath shall be given." Every year shows accumulating gains because of the annual acquisition of power. The influence secured this year makes enlargement possible next year. Through blessings already received the red man is coming to appreciate and desire the benefits that flow from Christianity and personal religion. The value of his own manhood has dawned upon him to such an extent that whole tribes are responding to Christian love and yielding to Christian truth. Such is the outlook everywhere.

It is absolutely painful to turn from these glorious achievements and possibilities to consider enforced retrenchment in the work of education. Our honored secretary is not too emphatic in calling this retrenchment a "terrible slaughter." When we estimate the value of manhood it is nothing less than appalling to think of closing schools; of dismissing missionary teachers; of shutting the doors of learning in the face of more than 400 expectant pupils already enrolled. Christian benevolence ought never to have permitted such a school as that at Santee to decrease from 241 pupils to 94, thus practically turning out of doors for lack of money 147 bright Indian youths who were coveting the blessings of a Christian education.

The Association made no mistake two years ago in refusing Government aid for its schools. Christian enterprise cannot be hampered by alliance with the State or by being in any way subject to political patronage. Nevertheless, the annual loss of one-third of its receipts for Indian educational work has created a crisis that threatens permanent disaster. Your committee is confident that this crisis is a heaven-sent challenge to the faith of the church. It summons it imperatively to a more definite and substantial expression of its love. Some of the tears shed because of these cruel retrenchments ought to be shed at this end of the line. Our hearts ought to weep, and our voices tremble with emotion, as well as those of the self-forgetful missionary, when we think of sending scores of little Indian boys back from the care of a Christian home to the filthy huts of a degrading heathenism, or of closing the hospital to reinstate the old medicine man—the wild embodiment of a savage paganism—in place of the cultured, consecrated Christian physician. Through school, hospital and church we have reached a point of advantage that seemingly makes possible the early redemption of the entire Indian race. It will not be long, if we fulfill our mission, before these once dusky savages become, as Christian men and as naturalized American citizens, a congenial and useful factor in our American life. The chief element of promise lies in their eagerness for Christian enlightenment. So pronounced is this eagerness that the Congregational churches of America must greatly enlarge their benevolence and expand their work if they would keep pace with the opportunities God is putting within their reach. Enlargement is the supreme demand of the hour.

REPORT ON SOUTHERN EDUCATION WORK.

By President Franklin Carter, Chairman.

No one can have read the reports in the American Missionary for July and August of the commencement exercises at Tougaloo University, at Fisk University, at Talladega College, Straight University, Tillotson Institute, and the other schools of learning under the management of this society, without gratitude to God for the solid and extensive work which these schools are doing.

The apprehensions which the political and social conditions during the past year have awakened in patriotic minds in regard to the future of our country abide with us still. But the knowledge that one hundred graduates or thereabouts have left these higher institutions in the South with minds trained and hearts consecrated to the love of man and the redemption of their race, and the certainty that thousands more have acquired in the thirty-six normal and graded and in the forty-two common schools such training and wisdom as will, even if carried no further by school discipline, make them useful and healthful centers of influence, gives reason for hopefulness.

The silent forces developed and quickened in those schools will all be found in any crisis on the side of enlightened patriotism, and will prove to be of immense value. The fact that a professor in Straight University, with the co-operation of leading colored men, prepared a petition addressed to the last legislature of Louisiana on the subject of the injury done to the State by acts of mob violence and lynching, which petition was signed by the foremost white citizens of New Orleans, cannot fail to illustrate the growing influence of the institutions fostered by this Association.

Nor should it be forgotten that Hampton Institute, Atlanta University and Berea College, with their annual leavening product of enlightened young men and women, were children of this society. If we recall the many years during which the eldest and best of this long list of schools has been educating minds and hearts for the service of God and human brotherhood, we shall get a larger view of the extensive and conservative work they have done.

Nor can we neglect to emphasize the later but not less promising efforts among the Highlanders, as Dr. Ryder calls them, people whom every true American should love—the descendants of brave men and women; loyal to liberty at a fearful cost; in most instances eager for learning and religious privileges; dwelling in beautiful scenery and almost redeeming their curiously bad grammar by soft enunciation; hospitable; tenderly loving their animals, yet strangely sensitive to insult. Out of such a people what fine examples of illustrious manhood and womanhood may yet come, if this society is supported in its devotion to their education.

Out of conditions not much superior to these came the noblest martyr to American liberty, Abraham Lincoln. The redeeming and uplifting influence that under God's blessing, by the direction of this Society, is now exerted in some of the mountain towns of North Carolina, Kentucky and Tennessee, if thrown about the boyhood of the only poor Southern white son who became President of the United States might have made the memory of Andrew Johnson hardly less precious than that of his predecessor.

The industrial side of this educational work secures the harmonious co-operation of mind and body and prevents the contempt of manual labor, a contempt easily arising in the minds of those released from compulsory service and admitted suddenly to great opportunities. That mankind as a whole are to eat their bread in the sweat of their own brows and not in the sweat of somebody else's brow is the cardinal doctrine in the schools of this Association, and is, we believe, warmly enforced by all their instructors in sociology.

The graduates of these schools are not all to become teachers. The Great Apostle does not distinctly say it, but this Association believes that some members of the Christian Church are honorably called to become cooks, and some to be housekeepers, and some to be mule-drivers. The co-ordination of muscle and brain and heart to useful service is the issue of this training. Work with the hand is made honorable.

The past year has seen a marked advance both in the influence and extent of this work. Twenty-one hundred children of the mountains have been taught, an increase of six hundred over last year's record. "The schools in the mountains have become," says the annual report, "the pride of the community." One academy building has been burned, but over $500 was immediately pledged by the poor mountaineers in the vicinity for the purpose of reconstruction.

The leavening and civilizing power of education among the negroes is becoming more apparent. A truer appreciation of the work of this society is secured each year from the old dominant race in the South.

The transforming power of Christian love, as manifested by these teachers, makes in all these schools loyal disciples for the Master and adds them to the local church.

The Indian pupils have been much fewer than last year, 417 in place of 858. The Chinese have received in amount substantially the same instruction as hitherto. The one feature of regret here, as in other redemptive work, is the inability to occupy the fields white for the harvest. An earnest cry for new schools is continually heard from the mountaineers. A cry no less earnest arises from the illiterate blacks, at present 60 per cent. of 7,000,000, a number equally great with the 100 per cent. of 4,000,000, appealing for instruction at the close of the civil war. But in the patient, faithful labor and solid success of this depressing year we can only rejoice, and hope that much larger resources will be reported at the next anniversary as having been devoted to the expansion of this side of the blessed work of this Association.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON FINANCE.

By Hon. Franklin Fairbanks, Chairman.

For the past two or three years it has been the custom of this Association to appoint a "Finance Committee" of gentlemen in no way connected with the executive administration, whose duties are to examine into and report upon the financial affairs of the Association. This committee consisted of Franklin Fairbanks, of Vermont; Joseph Van Vleck, of New Jersey; Augustus Gaylord, of New York; Silas H. Paine, of New York, and Wm. A. Talcott, of Illinois.

Four of the five members met at the rooms of the Association in the Bible House, in New York, on October 17th, and proceeded with the business in hand.

The Treasurer's books were placed before us. Your committee felt a little delicacy at first as to its work, fearing it might be said we were going back or behind the Auditor's report, which pronounced the Treasurer's accounts correct. But your committee were to go beyond the work of your Auditors and examine methods as well as acts. Every facility possible was afforded us for such examination, not only by the Treasurer, but also by the Chairman of the Executive Board and the Corresponding Secretaries, all of whom were present.

The manner of keeping the Treasurer's books is to be commended as most complete, and yet so plain and simple that those who are not expert accountants could easily comprehend the whole. The receipts from churches, individuals and legacies are entered in separate columns and classified in location. The expenditures are treated in the same way, so that we can easily see how much is expended monthly in each of the departments of field and school work. We assure you these books are most admirably and accurately kept.

The trust funds and securities are kept in safe deposit vaults, and they can be examined only in the presence of the Treasurer and a member of the Executive Committee, as each holds a separate key for the two locks. All checks drawn by the Treasurer must be countersigned by an executive officer before they can be used. Every safeguard possible, as it should be, is placed upon the funds of the Association and the disbursements of the same.

We find a full and detailed inventory of all real and personal property held by the Association.

A monthly statement is laid before the Executive Committee, together with a list of all receipts and disbursements for the month preceding, which must be approved by a sub-committee on finance. Quarterly examinations of all financial transactions are made by two auditors, elected annually by the Association. Their certificate is appended to the yearly report of the Treasurer.

By the Treasurer's report we find the current receipts of the Association for the fiscal year to be:

From Churches, Sunday-schools, Missionary Societies, etc...	$185,252.26
From Estates.....	95,367.10
From Income.....	10,999.33
From Tuition.....	41,351.11
From Slater Fund paid to Institutions.....	7,500.00
Total.....	$340,469.80

There has been an increase in collections from churches and living donors of $5,948.80, from estates of $18,879.20, from income of $746.72, and from tuition of $550.20, making the increase from these sources $26,124.92, which is quite gratifying in view of the times.

Debt balance last year.....	$45,028.11
Debt balance of this year.....	21,332.86
Making a total debt at close of this year of.....	$66,360.97

By a vote of the Association no help has been received from the United States Government for subsistence, etc., for the Indians during the past year, which, if received as in previous years, would have amounted to about $22,000. This amount would have materially reduced the debt.

The income from the "Daniel Hand Educational Fund for Colored People," amounting to $51,639.70, has been most faithfully administered.

Your committee was greatly interested in examining not only the financial methods of the Treasurer but also those in fields of mission service, in the collecting service, and into the general financial condition of the Association, and we cannot too highly commend the earnest efforts of the officers in charge of the affairs of the Association in their care for and administration of the moneys intrusted to them by churches and benevolent people, and to economically carry on the great work committed to them. Every dollar contributed has been judiciously expended, without the loss of a single cent.

In conclusion, we can most cordially recommend the work of the Association to the churches and to all who desire to help uplift the Negro, the Indian, the Chinaman, and our Mountain Whites to Christian manhood. We urge liberal gifts, that the work may not falter or the management be embarrassed by a debt, assuring you as business men who have looked into the affairs of your Association that the work of the executive officers is carried on upon business principles.

REPORT ON SOUTHERN CHURCH WORK.

By Rev. C. M. Lamson, Chairman.

The annual report of the Executive Committee of the American Missionary Association on "The Church Work" is a suggestive and inspiring commentary on the text, "Unto Him be glory in the Church." This is the unit of all missionary action—in its idea it is the center, interpreter and power of all effort to improve the world and set it forward in spiritual life. It is the necessary society of the gospel, and the only one. All other institutions take their meaning and authority from it. By direction and indirection it gathers in itself all those agencies that elevate and save men or races. Any society that seeks to give the best things to men, teach them how to realize themselves, awaken the life and secure the things that nourish it, make them part of the State and of a genuine social force, must establish among them churches and impart the church idea. The church represents the meaning and aim of life, and schools, industrialism, are the agencies to secure them. It is a dominant purpose of the Association to lead those whose welfare it serves to form churches, support them, look upon them as their spiritual homes, submit to their temperate restraints, and illustrate in their family life, industry and social habits, the character which the church teaches and requires.

This is the faith which we express by the Association. The church—the local New Testament church—is adequate to meet the great difficulties it encounters and the constantly changing conditions of Southern life.

The difficulties are very serious and very evident. There is the distress and incompetence of poverty, such poverty as would cause bread riots in a Northern community. There is ignorance; two-thirds of the colored population are illiterate, and a book is a mystery to most of the mountain whites. There is the race shiftlessness not easily touched by any of the higher motive forces. There is the inexorable social law that refuses to every Negro, whatever the wealth or the cultivation, the position of a lady or gentleman; there is the common view of religion as an excitement, an emotional drunkenness—the difficulties within and without are numerous and serious. But the church where the minister and his home are illustrations of practical religion, where duties are made more important than rights, and character ambitions made the associates of high hopes, where the presence and love of Christ are made the impulse and guaranty of a salvation for the whole man—such a church is the sufficient and only power to save a race and make it worth saving. There are no difficulties too great for the power of the gospel living in a church. Every work of the American Missionary Association is toward the church.

The conditions of Southern life are changing. The slave is becoming merely a memory. The religious plantation songs are giving place to "Gospel Hymns," a slight but a real advance; there is less of superstition; the ideas of liberty, manhood, are producing a ferment which is a necessary process in a race on its way from barbarism to civilization. The South is changing. The church is the divinely appointed institution to stand among these changes and become the friend and helper of all tendencies to the better life. Because we believe in Christ as sufficient for any man, we believe in the church of Christ as sufficient to meet the needs of a race in all its perils and transitions.

Our secretary calls the mountain whites the Highlanders. It takes two kinds of elevation to make a Highlander, if the Scotch furnish the ideal—physical and spiritual. To make the second as evident as the first demands all the wisdom and devotion of which we are capable. But such devotion—in the face of the poverty and ignorance and changing population—has proved effective. The material for character and personal power abound among the mountaineers of East Tennessee and Kentucky. The genius of Congregationalism is adapted to the discovering and awakening and guiding them to the life of which the powers sleep within. It is evident from all reports of the mountain life that for securing pure homes, public spirit, large and intelligent sympathies, the first need is for churches—and there should be, to speak with the modesty that dares not tell a falsehood, Congregational churches. We do not call our Church the American Church, but it is the one best adapted to make Americans.

We are not to reckon the church work of the Association by the amount given to it last year, $45,000, nor by the number of churches aided, 156, nor by the number received as members on profession of faith, 1,086, though this is twice the per cent. of additions to our Northern churches, nor by the number in Sunday-schools, 15,335, but by the contribution from the schools of educated workers for the churches. The schools exist for the sake of the churches, the elevation of the quality of church life, and for the general impulse given to that life throughout the South by schools for the training of hand or brain. The work is small, but it is the beginning of a great one. If we believe in the Christ of the church the church of Christ will increase among those we serve and make known to them and to us the manifold wisdom of God.

FORTY-EIGHTH ANNUAL REPORT

OF THE

FOR THE YEAR ENDING SEPTEMBER 30TH, 1894.

GENERAL SURVEY.

Our Survey is one more chapter in the book of life among four races. It is of necessity too brief to represent the work. The planning and working, the influences put forth and received, to become a part of the life of thousands, are not in the report. Nor is the story of those who have been holding on through difficult years, heavy weighted with poverty, but greedy for knowledge while they have resolutely worked their way climbing up where they may stand higher and have a wider outlook than before.

THE SOUTH.

It is manifestly impossible in a survey of more than fourscore schools even to name them. The abbreviated reports, such as we have been accustomed to give, must, in view of increasing numbers, now yield to abbreviated characterizations.

COMMON SCHOOLS.

We begin at the beginning with our common schools. There are 42 of these, mostly located in rural districts where earnest Christian teachers from the North, and those graduated from our higher institutions in the South, are faithful missionaries of Christ. These white teachers, often isolated in remote regions, living apart from accustomed Christian sympathy, richly deserve our grateful recognition in their self-denials and heroisms.

If one would investigate their work, he will find that the town or village in which the school is planted has usually a miserable tavern which the neighborhood citizens with abundant leisure frequent, as the only public room of the little center. Here the stranger will be welcomed on his visit to the school. He will find a teachers' neat home sufficiently large to accommodate three or more Christian women, and in which they live and keep house in comfortable conditions. By the side of the teachers' home is a tidy school-house of two or three rooms. He will also observe that these buildings are kept in good outward and inward repair, and are illustrations to both black and white that homes which have care are better, and buildings in good condition are less expensive, than those which are left to neglect and decay.

Within the school-house, the visitor will be almost sure to find the room—in district school style—crowded with pupils of various ages. Partial grading at the best can only be attempted. There are pupils struggling to get the three R's. A few are reaching higher; some may be in the teacher's mind as proper ones to be encouraged to seek some higher school for a larger education in due time.

School days here are for eight months or more. Young women from our own homes are the teachers, keeping school not only but also organizing and supervising societies of "Christian Endeavor," presiding in and directing prayer-meetings, teaching the Bible six days in the week, visiting the poor, and giving them practical instruction in better methods of living. We call these common schools; uncommon schools they are, from which the abundant grace of God streams forth into these dark and desolate regions. They are schools, not churches, but they are schools of Christ where young people are constantly led to Him.

GRADED AND NORMAL SCHOOLS.

Next in our classification are "graded and normal schools": 1 in Virginia, 5 in North Carolina, 1 in South Carolina, 7 in Georgia, 2 in Florida, 7 in Alabama, 7 in Tennessee, 2 in Kentucky, 1 in Arkansas, 3 in Mississippi; in all 36.

E. G., for a type of a class is one named "LINCOLN SCHOOL" IN MERIDIAN, MISS. It is in a city in the Black Belt where the colored people outnumber the whites. Less than ten years ago parents besought us to plant a little school there where their daughters might be safe and saved. There was at the time a discouraged company in a dilapidated church, seeking courage and uplift from a discouraged pastor. The pastor departed, the church lot was sold, and to-day a tasteful and commodious church stands in a sightly portion of the town, beside which is a school that has already been a blessing to very many homes and many hundreds of pupils. The teachers have asked so often for enlarged accommodations that the schoolhouse now has wings enough to symbolize its rising propensities. Not a year has passed without many accessions to the church membership of intelligent young people from the school, who have given good evidence of Christian life. Twenty-four pupils united with our Congregational Church this past year, and almost as many more united with other denominations. Others went to their own homes to confess what Christ has done for them. The principal writes: "It has been one more happy year." This school is well graded; there are pupils learning to read, and pupils with their geometries getting ready for Tougaloo University.

For still another type, the LINCOLN ACADEMY IN NORTH CAROLINA may be selected. (We have several schools among the colored people by the name of Lincoln. They like the name). This is located in the mountains. One will ride four miles on rough roads to it from the nearest railroad station. The purpose originally was to have a small school among the absolutely neglected colored people of the remote district. Students packed the building, and insisted upon remaining in it. The growth of the school could not be prevented. At the present time there are dormitories with one hundred boarders, and school room for twice an hundred pupils. This school is sending forth well trained teachers from its normal grades. It has added a college preparatory grade, and has graduated from the Bible study course at least one for the gospel ministry. He proves to be an earnest and faithful preacher. Seldom does a pupil leave this school until he has become a pupil of Christ.

DORCHESTER ACADEMY, MCINTOSH, GA., is a type of a class. It is in the rice fields of Georgia. Beginning with one teacher it now numbers 413 pupils, 5 of whom are in the advanced normal grade. The principal writes us: "Although my boys and girls wear dark skins, and come from the rice fields and turpentine swamps, and their native speech is sometimes little better than a jargon, still I would not have hesitated in an exhausted review of as much of the work of the year as could be covered in two days' examination to have put them beside boys and girls coming from far more favorable surroundings. It was a thorough test and was well met."

These are three schools which with variations may stand for many. Next, we advance to schools of higher grade, such as Beach Institute in Savannah; Gregory Institute, in Wilmington; Ballard Normal Institute, in Macon; Allen Normal, in Thomasville; Orange Park Normal, in Florida; Le Moyne Institute, in Memphis; and Avery Institute, in Charleston (which has merited its place among chartered institutions); and in the entire field twenty-seven more, each deserving consideration, which together form a system of schools where disciplined and experienced instructors are preparing youth for worthy life and many to be worthy teachers for their less privileged people. These schools, though unlike in their environments and characteristics, are yet similar in purpose and not dissimilar in their courses of study. Northern visitors often express surprise in their discovery of the quality of their work.

In the great majority of these graded schools provision is made for boys' manual training in woodworking and the use of woodworking tools. The exercises run from the simple to the more difficult, the aim being to adapt them to the manual capacity of the student as well as to his mental dexterity, and to make them a helpful part of his other school work.

For the girls, needlework is graded so that the pupil proceeds from step to step until thoroughly prepared for making garments. In household work, the girls have daily recitations in the theory of household economy, including the study of foods and cooking. In the care of the sick and hygiene the girls have daily lessons, also, as to the fundamental conditions of good health, and a proper knowledge of the right methods of caring for those who suffer from disease or accident, and are taught by expeaienced instructors theoretically in classes and practically in the care of the sick.

We think that the members of this Association do not fully realize the extent and beneficial results of the diversified industries carried on in our schools. Industrial training is mingled with every form of education. We now pass to our

COLLEGES.

FISK UNIVERSITY, NASHVILLE, TENN., held its twenty-seventh annual Commencement this year, with 29 instructors and 450 pupils. In the normal grades were 87 preparing to teach; in the college preparatory, 72, and in the collegiate department, 45. We note that seven of the instructors are graduates from the one college of Oberlin. Fisk is building up strong men and women for the present and for the future. Its last freshman class was the largest that ever yet entered upon the college course. It graduated this year from its very thorough normal department, 21, and from the classical course, 8. Many of these had been students in Fisk for a period of ten years. Instruction is also given in woodworking, mechanics, and printing, for young men, in nursing, cooking, dressmaking, for young women.

STRAIGHT UNIVERSITY AT NEW ORLEANS, LA., completed this year the first quarter of a century of its existence as a chartered institution. Here also the work has been excellent, and some of it brilliant. The standards of teaching have been raised until the requirements are much advanced beyond what they were formerly. Increased prominence is being given to manual training; and well-planned courses in woodworking, mechanical drawing, sewing and dressmaking keep pace with good scholarship.

TOUGALOO UNIVERSITY, TOUGALOO, MISS., with 21 instructors and 369 pupils, numbers 36 in its normal department, and 7 in the college preparatory. This institution is located in the little village of Tougaloo in the middle of Mississippi, a few miles from Jackson, the capital of the State. It is in the very heart of the Black Belt. The standards are good, while the teaching is especially excellent along the lines of normal studies. The year has been marked by specially faithful work on the part of the students, not one having failed of promotion. The new college preparatory department has had a most successful beginning. It has been a happy year, also, in the religious development of many. One only of the normal department last year at the close of the year was not a professing Christian.

Industrial education is thoroughly graded and ably taught. Students are not only made familiar with the use of tools, but are required to make out bills of material, working plans, plans for construction, etc., and to execute them intelligently. In agriculture, the plantation of Tougaloo comprsies 640 acres, and about 150 acres are under excellent cultivation, and pnpils are practically taught the care of cattle, horses and mules, plowing and planting, cultivation of crops, gardening, fruit-culture, steam-sawing, and the like. In nurse training, this school has had special advantages. Instruction is daily given in nursing and hygiene, with a special course of two years for those who desire to make nursing the sick a profession. The course in cooking, and in sewing and dressmaking, is excellent.

TALLADEGA COLLEGE, TALLADEGA, ALA., with 23 instructors and 563 pupils, reports 12 in the normal grades, 26 in the college preparatory, and 8 in the collegiate department. It celebrated its twenty-seventh anniversary this year. This institution begins with the primary studies, ascends through the normal grades and college preparatory into the college and theological school. A visitor last winter reported a recitation in trigonometry, which would have been excellent for a student in any of our New England colleges. Those who teach here do not fail to find many instances of intellectual superiority. But lest some may think that higher education may be excessive, we note that in the whole system of schools under the American Missionary Association, less than one-half of one per cent. of colored students are in college classes. When at least two and a half millions as yet are unable to read, and are waiting for educated teachers and for intelligent preaching, the danger of accentuating higher education does not appear to be immediate.

Systematic industrial instruction and training for both sexes take a prominent place. The college farm, gardens and orchards contain about 270 acres, and are under the supervision of an agricultural college graduate. Many earn enough in these industries to enable them to pay a part of their expense of education.

TILLOTSON COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE, AT AUSTIN, TEXAS, with an enrollment of 186 pupils, 37 of whom were in the normal grades, and 1 in the college preparatory, completed its fourteenth year. In no previous time has its work been of equal grade. Here also the young men are instructed not only in woodworking and the use of tools, but also in the theories and principles of mechanics and in practical construction. The girls have daily lessons in housekeeping and in sewing. Tillotson begins its new year most auspiciously, with enlarged facilities for enlarged work.

These higher institutions and those of lesser grade are first and last positive Christian schools. The Bible is a daily text-book, and no day passes without appeal to the religious nature of the pupils.

In our normal and higher schools, as the years pass on there is an observable advance in student character and quality. The students are becoming more like unto students in Northern schools, in respect to their ages and ways, than their fathers and mothers were. Without losing their docility and teachableness, they are learning more easily and more understandingly, and are cultivating the reading habit increasingly. Their ambitions are higher. It may be that in some degree they fail to illustrate the simple and singular faith of the earlier days, but we think that their religious faith is now not only more intelligent, but more productive of the morality which belongs to a better comprehension of Christian life.

The past year in these schools has been a trying one to students in some respects. Many who have received student aid heretofore have found it necessary to leave school in the midst of their studies. Institutions have cordially assisted the Association in their economies, and from most of them there have been appreciative expressions of sympathy with our Association in the stress of these severe times. Those schools whose growth and necessities have called for enlargement have met our limitations cheerfully, and no enlargements have been made in our plants this year, with the exception of a new dormitory long needed at Tillotson Institute, in Texas, which was provided for before the hard times came upon us.

Three of our institutions have received $7,500 for normal and industrial work from the trustees of the Slater Fund, which we gratefully acknowledge.

THEOLOGICAL SCHOOLS.

Our theological department at Fisk University rejoices in a fine building, and is beginning a theological school from which much is expected.

Talladega reports 33 theological and Biblical students; Tougaloo, 19; and Straight University, 10. With the exception of Talladega these theological departments are practically new. The work of the theological department in Howard University is being carried on efficiently, with an attendance of 45 students. We trust that many students will seek to prepare themselves to preach the gospel intelligently, and will come for preparation in increasing numbers.

MOUNTAIN SCHOOLS.

The educational work in the mountains has kept equal pace with that of the lowlands of the South. Last year we reported 15 mountain schools of all grades, and this year we have 18. The enrollment of these schools last year was 1,500. This year we have more than 2,000. This is the largest increase in the mountain school work that we have ever been able to report in any single year, and this somewhat remarkable increase has come notwithstanding the fact that many fields which were open for school have not been occupied for lack of funds.

A very encouraging feature of the educational work in the mountains is the increasing appreciation that the people have for it.

The teachers sent out by the Association into this region have been so superior to any others that in not a few instances the school boards of local communities have written asking us to furnish them teachers for their public schools.

Our own schools planted in different sections become the pride of the community. As the teachers return at the opening of the new year they find a large welcome where there was some suspicion. We must needs remember that these mountain people are independent and self-assertive. Methods need to be carefully adopted to meet their peculiar conditions or the work fails. There is a growing tendency toward self-support which is most hopeful.

At Campton, Ky., the people had pledged large sums to the support of the school before teachers were sent to them.

At Evarts, Ky., the building in which the Black Mountain Academy was held was destroyed by fire. More than $500.00 were pledged at once for the rebuilding, by the mountaineers along the valleys and hillsides, whose children are reached by this academy.

Bending Oaks Academy, situated in a most picturesque spot on the top of the mountains, at Nat, Ala., has developed in its work so as to require another teacher, and an enlargement of the building. The additional expense here also was largely met from local sources. Letters from this field speak in grateful commendation of this school and are full of thanksgiving to the Association for its work among this people.

In Harrow School, at Cumberland Gap, Tenn., the Association appoints and pays the salaries of the principal and two of the teachers. The work here has prospered and a very large number have been reached by its helpful influence.

Grand View Academy, Tenn., has been reinforced by the appointment of a graduate of the last class of Yale Seminary, as teacher in the higher departments, who is also pastor of our church at the same place.

Teachers' Institutes have been held by our several principals at many points. The teachers in the public schools have thus received new views of their work, gained knowledge of modern methods, and genuine Christian inspiration.

At Williamsburg Academy, Kentucky, a large addition has been made to the circulating library through the generous gift of special funds. These libraries are an imperative need in all our mountain schools. The two schools especially for mountain girls, Skyland Institute, at Blowing Rock, N. C., and Saluda Seminary, the same State, have been well attended and successful. Careful instruction in home industries is added to the ordinary school work, thus fitting these girls for their life work.

This brief sketch of our mountain schools is utterly inadequate to represent fairly the wonderful development of the educational work among our American Highlanders. We are only touching the edges of this great mountain problem, and although the year shows these encouraging results, there is still a vast amount of work waiting to be done, and hundreds of thousands of children are unreached by the influence of this Christian education.

CHURCH WORK.

The year opened with a burden of debt upon the Association with its attendant anxiety and retrenchment. Yet the year has been one of remarkable blessing.

Eighteen churches have been added to our list—nine in the Southern lowlands, seven in the mountains, one in our Indian missions and one on the Pacific coast. These new churcnes have over eight hundred members.

The year has been one of frequent and blessed revivals. In Washington, D. C; in Raleigh, Hillsboro, Dudley and Cedar Cliff, N. C.; in Macon, Marietta, Athens and Thomasville, Ga., and in the churches of Alabama, Louisiana and Texas many conversions are reported and frequent accessions to church membership. Over 1200 members have been added to our churches on confession of faith, proportionately twice the number thus added to our churches throughout the country at large.

These poor churches, despite the pressure of a severe winter and bad times, have increased their benevolent contributions; they have also enlarged their offerings for church support by over $6,000. A number of church edifices and parsonages have been erected. Mission stations for preaching, and mission Sunday schools have been organized and carried on. If there had been adequate means of support, many new openings for missionary services might have been entered upon. Indeed, almost every week of the year has been marked by necessitated refusals to take up promising mission work in new localities reported by our ministers, or called for directly by the people themselves.

The work of the year has been perplexed by fluctuations of population. The distress of the people, arising from diverse causes, has awakened a general unrest. Lack of work, failure of crops, industrial oppression and mob violence have conspired to create among thousands of the colored people a feeling that any change of place would be an improvement upon the hopelessness of their present lot. All through the year our pastors have had to report these changes; some of the nine churches dropped from our list have been given up because the active congregations have moved away.

On the other hand, these changes have multiplied calls upon the Association to begin work in new localities. Families who have been living in the Congregational way are quite unwilling to go back to the old-time methods of preaching and church management. Other families have joined with them in the expression of their desire for the Christian training of their children and for an educated ministry.

The situation in many parts of the South can not be outlined better than by the following passage in a letter recently received from one of our most thoughtful Southern pastors:

"As you know, we are engaged in a life and death struggle to secure protection of life and property against mob violence and lynch law. We are trying to arouse a righteous public sentiment throughout the South, and to bring about the passage of stronger and better laws. Yet when laws are passed, the work will be only begun. The social chaos of the South is due to the moral chaos. So long as one race is strong and wicked and the other weak and wicked, mobs and lynching will continue. We are weak and defenceless, largely because we are ignorant of the means or weapons of defense.

Now, no class of men has such power for good or evil among our people as the ministry, and I am convinced, from observation and reflection, that, in some parts of the South, no class stands so much in the way of progress. Their influence among the people is, in some respects, as great as that of the New England clergymen in colonial days. Hence every intelligent and consecrated minister that we put into our pulpits is an important step in the solution of our social and racial difficulties. It seems to me, in view of these facts, that nothing could be more injurious than the filling of pulpits with ministers no wiser in knowledge and no stronger and nobler in character than the people to whom they offer themselves as guides and leaders."

Notwithstanding the great educational advance made by our schools in the many communities reached by them, the situation which confronts us in the black South is as full of peril as of promise. No Christian country presents vaster or more necessitous mission fields. These fields are shadowed with ignorance, poverty and paganism. In New England the illiterate population, ten years of age and over, is less than six per cent. of the total population. In the South it is twenty-seven per cent. The illiterate element of the colored population is sixty per cent. of the whole colored population. As to poverty, eighty per cent. of the wealth of the uation is in the North and only twenty per cent. in the South. Of this twenty per cent. a very small share indeed falls to the seven millions of negroes, who constitute by far the poorest element of our American people. Of the paganism in the South, Dr. Behrends has well said that the note of paganism is its separation of worship from virtue, of religion from morals. This is the characteristic fact of the religion of the Negro. His religion, like himself, is the necessary product of his heritage; both are the outcome of his historical environment. In the slave church, honesty, truth and purity could not be effectively preached, because the necessary conditions of life often made the practice of these virtues impossible, hence the prevalent preaching had to be an excitation of mere feeling. The ethical element of Christianity had to be left out of the religious teaching of the negro because it was forbidden in his life. The restoration of this essential element must come with Christian education and Christian preaching. The work, small as it seems, is full of promise. The influence of our comparatively few and small Congregational churches is far beyond the proportion of their size and numbers. They are leavening great masses of the population, and making impossible the paralytic and hysterical old time religion. This work can be greatly enlarged each year, if the means can be had for it. Last year, for the fields of its entire Southern church work, mountain as well as lowland, the Association has had only $45,000. The work done and the growth attained tell how carefully and effectively this small sum has been employed.

MOUNTAIN CHURCH WORK.

In the general statistics given above are included our Mountain Churches. This field and work are so peculiar and interesting that a brief special report seems warranted and even necessary. Seven churches have been added this year to the list of Congregational churches in this region. Four churches do not appear this year that did last. This latter fact arises from the changing conditions which are peculiar to these mountain communities. The development of the coal mines creates a center for community life, and presents a hopeful field for church work. During the last year the mining industry has been almost paralyzed. Communities that seemed permanent have melted away. It may be that coal mining will again open prosperously, then these churches will take up their work again.

The membership of these churches has reached the encouraging total of nearly 1,400 members, which is an increase during the year of about 33 1-3 per cent. These additions have come almost entirely on confession of faith, and are witnesses to the faithful services and tireless activities of our pastors and Christian teachers.

It must be remembered also by those who study these statistics that all through the year we have been compelled to decline assistance to many communities in which they desire to organize Congregational churches. Missionaries, judicious and considerate, have urged the organization of churches in many needy and neglected fields. Such action, however, would involve the appointment of more missionary pastors in order to care for the new work, and so we have been obliged most reluctantly and painfully to discourage such movements.

In one of our mountain churches, at a recent gathering, the following testimony was given by a resident of the community, a native of the mountains, who is thoroughly acquainted with all lines of Christian and educational work in that region. He said: "I believe that the Congregational Church is doing more for Christianity and for Sunday-school work in Eastern Tennessee and Kentucky than any other church, and I am not a Congregationalist." This testimony is endorsed by the more intelligent Highlanders throughout all this mountain region. The demand for the type of church life and ministerial service furnished through Congregationalism is what they are more and more demanding. Shall we not respond to their earnest plea for the larger, freer and more intelligent Christian methods which Congregationalism brings them?

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Special interest has been developed in the Y. P. S. C. E. work in this mountain field during the year. The joint superintendent of the Association and the Sunday-school and Publishing Society has given the portion of his time that belongs to the Association largely to systematic Christian Endeavor work. He has established many Endeavor societies, especially in Tennessee and Kentucky, and great good has been accomplished. These Endeavor societies will, many of them, carry on systematic Christian work where the planting of churches is unwise at present. Doubtless many of them, however, will grow into churches in the future.

WALDENSES.

The work among the Waldenses has increased in interest and importance. In addition to the help given this colony toward the support of their pastor we have also granted a small appropriation toward a teacher's salary. Rev. B. Soulier, a native Waldensian, educated in the schools of his own country and at Edinburgh University, a young man of earnest piety and sound scholarship, is the pastor of this church. He and his faithful wife have entered upon this work with great devotion. Prof. M. A. Jahier, also a Waldensian, has charge of the school. On the Fourth of July the people met in the school-house, held Christian service, then Mr. Jahier read to them our Declaration of Independence, talked to them on the duties of American citizenship, and they together gave three cheers for the stars and stripes that floated over the school building. Not very dangerous foreigners are these, and they merit our largest Christian help and Congregational co-operation and support.

NOTE.—It may be noted that 9 Southern churches which were last year reported have been removed from our list. By errors in reports as printed last year, 3 names more should be subtracted, making a numerial reduction of 12. 16 new churches have been established, making a total of 156 churches.

INDIAN WORK.

"Progress and Poverty" have characterized the work in our Indian Field this year. A "single tax," however, is by no means the solution of this mission problem. So much has been said and written concerning the withdrawal of the Government funds, and so many appeals have been made for these Indian Missions during the past year, urging our friends to increase their contributions so as to make good this deficit, that our constituents may feel almost annoyed when this same fact is brought prominently to their attention in our Annual Survey of the Indian Field. But a report of the year's work would be conspicuously inadequate did it not touch upon this fact. Our missionaries have accepted the increased retrenchments of this year with cordial and Christian consideration. They have gone uncomplainingly and heroically forward in their work, in many cases doing extra duties, so that larger results have been reached than would seem possible under these embarrassing limitations.

CHURCH WORK.

The church work in the Indian Field has been especially prosperous. Two new churches are reported. There has also been a wholesome growth in the church membership. Skokomish Church, in Washington, reports an increase during the year of about 30 per cent.

The church at Fort Berthold, N. D., has had another year of remarkable spiritual quickening and growth, 24 having been added on the confession of their faith. In connection with this church 275 Indian children have been enrolled in the Sunday School. The new mission established at Elbow Wood, some 35 miles north from Fort Berthold, has been reinforced. Two consecrated women are holding this strategic outpost. One of these missionaries is Otta Wolf, a daughter of Poor Wolf, the Indian Chief, whose wonderful conversion attracted so much interest when published in our magazine last year. Miss Wolf completed her studies in our schools at Fort Berthold and Santee, and then spent a year in the Moody Training School at Chicago. After this thorough and careful preparation she was eager to enter upon work at this new mission field. Reports that come from Elbow Wood are most encouraging. They need at once a proper building there, as this mission will be the center of a large work among the Mandan, Gros Ventres and Rees people.

The Standing Rock Church has also had a remarkable ingathering, 46 having been added on confession of faith. The church have contributed for benevolent work $375.00, and have also given largely toward their own support.

The Pilgrim Church, at Santee Agency, Neb., has grown into one of the important churches of the far West. The venerable pastor, Rev. A. Ehnamani, still serves them, and is one of the oldest pastors in the State of Nebraska. His loving and tender words and holy presence are a benediction both to Red Man and Pale Face. When announcement was made that there was a terrible debt upon the A. M. A. Treasury and the mission churches were asked to assist in lifting that debt, this aged Indian pastor was almost broken down with sorrow for the debt and with a great anxiety that his own people should do their full share in lifting this burden. Who can say that they did not respond generously when we remember that their contributions to benevolences last year were $309.00?

At the Remington Station, on the Moreau River, a faithful Christian woman has been busy ceaselessly during the year bringing Christian light and comfort into the homes of the Dakotas. She writes of her work as follows: "A woman's work in the homes is largely teaching from the words of Him who will guide us into higher, purer living, but the greater work is to exemplify by her life that which she teaches."

The interest that was awakened at our annual meeting of last year in behalf of a new station at Cedar Butte, S. D., expressed itself in material form and more than $300 were pledged for a building. After considerable delay through difficulty in securing title to the land, a site has now been selected, and the Indians are busy getting out the logs for the chapel.

The interesting work opened in Flying By's village and that in Thunder Hawk's village are stories well known to the readers of our magazine. These two stations are only illustrations of work that might be done in a hundred Indian villages where there is the same eager desire for Christian instruction on the part of the people which characterized Flying By's and Thunder Hawk's people. The painful lack of money to support these missions is what shuts the door of Christian privilege to these inquiring souls.

An interesting feature of the year's work was the dedication of a Winyan Memorial Church and the ordination of Edwin Phelps and Elias Gilbert, a son and nephew of Elizabeth Winyan, by a council which met May 19th at Two Kettle Village, S. D. Elizabeth Winyan was long a mother in Israel to her Indian people and her devoted life of quiet Christian usefulness is continued in the faithful Christian service of her son.

At the Crow Agency, Montana, a mission less than two years old, there has been large development and most important results. The American Missionary Association work is the only Protestant mission work in this entire reservation, with the exception of one school under the care of the Unitarians. This latter is so far removed from the agency that there is no possibility of our work encroaching upon its field. Our missionary among the Crows has greatly reinforced his efficiency by taking to his heart and home a faithful wife during this year. She had been a missionary at Ft. Berthold, and enters upon this new field, in which her husband has already been so useful, with intelligent earnestness and devotion. This work among the Crows is of the greatest importance. A new railroad has pushed its way into this reservation and our mission is most providentially situated so as to be of largest usefulness under these new conditions. A chapel is imperatively demanded at once, and we are seriously sacrificing the work because we are unable to build it.

The Sunday-schools have increased in their enrollments during the year about 20 per cent., notwithstanding the lack of a sufficient missionary force to carry them on.

Christian Endeavor Societies have been organized by Indian pupils who have gone out from Santee and other schools. Christian Endeavor is a principle that takes possession of the hearts of Indian young men and women as firmly as of their white brothers and sisters.

EDUCATIONAL WORK.

When we turn to the school work the statistics are painful and the heart of everyone who hears or reads must be saddened. Here the great sacrifice has been made in order to meet the decreased appropriations for this work. The schools have decreased from 12 to 11. But when we look at the number of pupils reached in these schools we appreciate the terrible slaughter of this Indian work. Last year we enrolled 858 Indian pupils; this year there are only 417, a loss of 441 pupils, more than one-half of the total number.

At Santee, Neb., which is in many respects the best school for Indians in America, the enrollment for this year is 94; last year at the same time the enrollment was 241.

The schools at Oahe, S. D., and Fort Berthold, N. D., have suffered in the same way. In no case has this sad loss of pupils occurred because the Indians were not ready to come under these Christian influences. But departments have been discontinued, buildings shut up, missionary teachers dismissed, pupils sent back, simply for the sake of meeting the necessary retrenchment in our expenses.

It is a sad record to look back upon, this terrible sacrifice of opportunity. Just now when these people are so eager to receive the gospel and Christian enlightenment, when under the law they are rapidly becoming American citizens, it seems the pity of pities that we must shut the door in the faces of the hopeful and eager young Indian men and women who are so desirous of Christian education which shall fit them for safe citizenship and for usefulness in the kingdom of God.

May we not hope that the coming year will bring into our treasury funds sufficient to carry on the present work and to meet in some small way at least the rapidly increasing opportunities of bringing the saving power of the gospel of Jesus Christ to these Red people of our prairies?

ALASKA.

Last year we had the melancholy duty of announcing the murder of Mr. Thornton, our missionary at Cape Prince of Wales, the return of his wife with impaired health, and the transfer of Mr. Lopp and his wife to the Reindeer Station at Port Clarence, thus virtually leaving the mission deserted.

We now have the pleasure of stating that the mission has been re-opened under favorable auspices. Mr. Lopp and his wife have returned to Cape Prince of Wales, where they find that the buildings, furniture and supplies are all safe, so that the school will be re-opened immediately. One hundred reindeer have been transferred from Port Clarence to our mission at the Cape, and these we hope will be a help to the mission and to the natives.

Two of the men who were concerned in the murder of Mr. Thornton suffered the penalty of death immediately at the hands of the natives, but the principal in the nefarious act, Titalk, escaped for the time, but afterwards returned, and his uncle taking him to the hillside near the grave of Mr. Thornton gave him choice of the mode of death—to be strangled, stabbed or shot. The young man preferred to be shot, and his uncle commanded him to hold down his head and then shot him. We believe our missionaries are safe in life and property, and will be permitted to go on with their work unmolested.

THE CHINESE.

The hard times reached our distant workers among the Chinese on the Pacific Coast, and they have been met in a noble spirit of Christian self-sacrifice. Dr. Pond writes:

"I foresaw almost six months ago that the universal stringency would bring us an empty treasury long before the close of our fiscal year. It seemed due in justice to our workers to forewarn them of this. I told them that I would do my best for them, but that for the months of June, July and August this might amount to nothing and that I was under solemn pledge to one of our chief benefactors never to let the mission run in debt. Consequently I could not and would not blame them if they ceased work and closed the schools. I am proud to say that not one teacher was found to accept my proposal. One of them wrote: 'I am very sorry you are so short of funds. I feel sure that some way the Lord will provide. At any rate I shall not join the strikers, but keep right on.' Another said: 'Whatever stops, the work must not stop; pay or no pay, I shall keep up the school.' Joe Dun, the latest addition to our force of helpers, and one from whose work for Christ I expect glad fruitage right along, replied to my message of deep regret that I could forward no salary to him for June services: 'You need not send money; I have rice.'

"It is a great relief to know that the work is going on, and at some points better than ever at this season of the year. It is a relief to know that there are no broken promises, and no accumulation of debt, involved in my failure to remit. But when I bring up the case of some of our most faithful and successful workers, and realize the fact, which I know to be a fact, that they are dependent on the little salaries they are wont to receive from me for very subsistence, my forewarning passes out of remembrance, and the whole burden rolls down upon my heart.

"Whenever it has been possible I have thrown the responsibility of sustaining the missions upon the localities in which they are situated. And in many cases this responsibility has been assumed with a cheerfulness and a generosity, considering the times, which has been greatly encouraging and I cannot but hope that herein will be found one of the compensations for our anxiety and pain—a deeper and more general interest on the part of Christian people in this branch of the service of their Lord."

The work begun last year so auspiciously among the Chinese women and children has been carried forward encouragingly. The mothers and children gladly welcome the visitors, and in some instances give evidence of a personal interest in the gospel.

The Chinese converts, as they return to China, are preaching the gospel. The "Chinese Missionary Society," originating among our schools on the Pacific Coast, is pushing forward its work in China vigorously. Its chapel and dispensary at Ci Ning has been enlarged, and a lot and building have been purchased in Canton City. Converts and inquirers have been found among literary men, and prospects are bright.

The crucial ordeal through which China is now passing, it is hoped, will open the eyes of that people to the value of western civilization, and thus prepare the way more fully than ever for the entrance of the gospel.

FINANCES.

The current receipts of the Association for the fiscal year, ending Sept. 30, 1894, are as follows:

From Churches, S. Schools, Missionary Societies, etc.	$185,252.26
" Estates	95,367.10
" Income	10,999.33
" Tuition	41,351.11
" Slater Fund paid to Institutions	7,500.00

There has been an increase in collections from churches, etc., of $5,948.80; from estates, of $18.879.20; from income, of $746.72, and from tuition, of $550.20, making the increase from these sources $26,124.92.

The Association received for the year ending Sept. 30th, 1893, from the United States Government for subsistence, etc., for Indians, $26,383.06. In accordance with the vote taken at the annual meeting in Hartford, Conn., October, 1892, no contracts have been renewed between the Government and the Indian Schools of the Association, and no funds have been received this year from the Government. There is, therefore, a decrease in the current receipts this year of $258.14.

The expenditures for the current work are $361,802.66, a decrease of $24,936 54 from last year. The debt on the current year is $21,332.86, which with the debt of $45,028.11, carried over from last year, makes the debt showing, Sept. 30, 1894, $66,360.97.

The Executive Committee desires to make special mention of the valuable aid rendered by the Committee of Nine, elected at the last annual meeting, to whom, in connection with the Executive Officers, was referred the matter of devising the best methods, and provoking the most efficient efforts for increasing the contributions and the payment of the debt.

In addition to the amounts received for current work, the Association has received as Endowment Funds—the income only to be expended annually—the sum of $12,669.76. The Committee is encouraged by this evidence of the increasing interest in enlarging the endowment funds for the permanent work of the Association. The income from the Daniel Hand Educational Fund for Colored People is $51,639.70.

The total receipts for the current work, for the Daniel Hand Educational Work and for Endowments, are $404,779.26.

There has also been collected on the Southern Field, from the students and patrons of the schools, about $54,000, which has been expended for board and incidental fees. This sum, in addition to the $41,000 for tuition, and acknowledged in current receipts, makes about $95,000 from the people themselves towards their own support and education. The self-denial that this involves cannot be measured by figures.

The debt of the current year is less than half of the amount of the debt incurred on the previous year. We look with hope and courage to the friends of missionary work to enable the Committee to incur no additional debt on the new year, but rather to materially decrease the present one, and yet maintain the work so greatly needed in each of the missionary fields of the Association. To God be all the praise for the tokens of His favor in this year of great financial stringency.

BUREAU OF WOMAN'S WORK.

The record of the year in this department is decidedly encouraging. There are now forty-one State organizations for co-operation in Woman's Work. Some of these are as yet only in the alphabet of missions—and Missionary Societies. Others of these organizations have become strong, influential and increasingly helpful.

From twenty-nine of the State Unions our treasury has received $19,185 24. From other Women's Societies and Young People's Bands we have received $4,593 28, a total of $23,778.52. This is an advance of 13 per cent. over the previous year.

Under our system of missionary letter-writing we have been able monthly or quarterly to furnish in multiple copies, letters from twenty-four mission stations, thus sending out information from all parts of the field. From forty-two writers more than twenty thousand letters have been circulated. Special attention has also been given in furnishing programmes and carefully selected material from which to prepare programmes for missionary meetings. Many speakers have been furnished for missionary meetings. The Secretary also has given more than usual time in this way.

We recognize in the rapid growth of woman's organizations an invaluable agent in the support of missions in this field, where Woman's Work has so large a place.

GRATEFUL ACKNOWLEDGMENTS.

The Christian Endeavor Societies of the churches have increased their contributions to the American Missionary Association this year quite appreciably, for which we desire to make most grateful acknowledgments. The spread of these societies in the various departments of our work is a mark and means of great progress.

We acknowledge with gratitude our indebtedness to the Congregational Sunday-School and Publishing Society for very helpful grants of Bibles, books and lesson helps.

OBITUARY.

ALONZO BALL, M.D.

This venerable and excellent Christian man died at Saratoga Springs, Sunday, Dec. 17th, in the 94th year of his age. Dr. Ball was a member of the Executive Committee of the American Missionary Association from 1858 to 1884, a little over a quarter of a century. At his retirement he was the only one remaining who was in the committee at the time of his appointment, and in accepting his resignation, the committee put on record a minute, speaking in grateful remembrance of his courteous bearing, his diligent attention to his duties as a member of the committee and of his continued interest in the work of the Association.

ELBERT B. MONROE, ESQ.

In the death of Mr. Monroe, the American Missionary Association, with many other missionary and benevolent societies, suffers the loss of a most intelligent, conscientious and efficient friend. Mr. Monroe graduated from the University of the City of New York, and afterwards entered into business, which he prosecuted successfully and in which his acute and judicious mind acquired a large fund of practical experience. In 1874 he withdrew from business to give his time to Christian and philanthropic work. He has expressed to the writer his conviction that when Christian men have secured a competence and a knowledge of business affairs, they should not retire to idleness, but should devote to the service of the Lord the knowledge and practical wisdom they had thus acquired. During the ten years of Mr. Monroe's connection with this Association, he verified the wisdom of this view by becoming very speedily one of the most efficient and useful members of our Executive Committee. He was afterwards elected to its chairmanship, a position that he held till his retirement. His uniformly courteous deportment, his ready apprehension of the business in hand, and his sound judgment, commanded the esteem and confidence of all his fellow workers. His loss will be severely felt in the administration of the affairs of this Association.

HON. A. C. BARSTOW.

We record our tribute of sorrow at the death of Hon. A. C. Barstow, which occurred September 5th. He was for many years intimately and usefully connected with the growth and prosperity of the city of Providence, R. I., which was his home and where he died. He was a man of wide sympathies in Christian and patriotic work, having held responsible offices in his native State, and was connected with other public movements, like that of the Board of Indian Commissioners, of which for a time he was president. He was a devoted Christian man, active in the church of which he was a member, and deeply interested in the missionary and benevolent boards of the Congregational churches. He was for a long time a vice-president of our Association.

PROF. R. C. HITCHCOCK.

Prof. R. C. Hitchcock, for many years an earnest worker under the American Missionary Association, died of pneumonia, at Cambridgeport, Mass., March 6th. He entered the service of the Association in 1883, was Dean and Professor at Straight University, New Orleans, for two years, and then became its President, in which office he remained till 1890, when he was appointed Field Superintendent. This position he held till he resigned in 1893.

REV. CARROLL CUTLER, D.D.

After an illness of one week, Rev. Carroll Cutler, D.D., died at Talladega, January 25th, 1894. The tidings of his death carry sorrow to a large circle of students and friends who are scattered not only in this country, but not a few in foreign lands.

Dr. Cutler, son of Rev. Calvin Cutler, was born at Windham, N. H., January, 31st, 1829. He was of strong, brainy English stock, an ancestor being among the Puritans who came early to Massachusetts. He was graduated from Yale in 1854, ranking third in scholarship in a class of one hundred. In 1860 he was appointed Prof. of Mental Science and Rhetoric in the Western Reserve College, holding this position eleven years, when he was promoted to the Presidency. For the last two years and more he had been teaching in Talladega College, chiefly in theological, but partly in college branches, and everywhere bringing without stint the treasures of his varied learning to those who need it so much and who now so sorely mourn his death.

MISS MARY A. STRONG.

Miss Mary A. Strong last October entered on the duties of perceptress and teacher in Talladega College, Talladega, Alabama. On Wednesday, March 7th, she was riding with a friend, and when near a railroad crossing their horse became frightened by an approaching locomotive. As the ladies in the carriage were unable to hold him, the horse reached the track to be struck by the train, and the carriage swung around against the drive-wheels of the engine. The two ladies were hurled fully forty feet, across quite a gully. It is a wonder that both were not killed outright. Miss Strong, who sat next to the engine, suffered the fracture of her left hip joint and a double fracture of the femur, with internal injuries, which eleven days after proved fatal. It was a comfort to her and to us all that her brothers, Major W. E. Strong and Rev. Dr. Josiah Strong, secretary of the Evangelical Alliance, could be at her bedside much of the time and until her eyes closed in death. Miss Strong had greatly endeared herself to the Faculty and the students of Talladega, and had won the confidence and love of all who knew her. She was looking forward to continued service in the work which had attracted her, and in which she had become so eminently successful.

REV. GEORGE S. SMITH.

Rev. G. S. Smith, who for thirteen years was pastor of the Congregational Church at Raleigh and McLeansville, N. C., entered into rest on the 12th of last August. Memorial services were held on the 26th of August in the church where he had long and faithfully conducted the worship of his people. Addresses were made by those who had been intimately associated with him in his work, which testified to the earnestness and success of his ministry. The best proof of his work is to be seen in the intelligence and virtue of the community in which he labored.

MRS. L. C. PARTRIDGE.

Mrs. L. C. Partridge died in Jellico, Tenn., November 24, 1893, and her remains were taken to Oberlin for burial, services being held at Stewart Hall and in the Chapel of the First Congregational Church, Dr. Brand officiating.

Mrs Partridge was the daughter of Rev. John Croker, was born in Vermont in 1835, has been a very faithful and successful worker for Christ in the church, Sunday-school, Christian Endeavor, Missionary and Temperance causes. For the past two years she had been teaching under the American Missionary Association. She was deeply spiritual and richly honored in winning souls.

ERNEST H. CURTIS.

Ernest H. Curtis, youngest son of Dr. and Mrs. A. W. Curtis, so long connected with our school at Marion, Ala., and more recently at Raleigh, N. C., was a teacher under the Association, having opened up very successfully the mission in Malee, N. C., doing pioneer work in that destitute place. He had hoped to fit himself as a medical missionary, and to this end had taken two years of the course at Ann Arbor, Mich., where, as the result of la grippe, he had hemorrhages, was obliged to give up his studies, and has for the last three years been fighting a brave battle with consumption, but ripening in character while wasting in body. When asked if he was ready to go, he answered: "Why, yes; of course, if it is best." He died, July 14th, at the age of twenty-four years.

MISS JEAN E. STEWART.

Miss Jean E. Stewart, daughter of a physician of Biggsville, Illinois, died of typhoid fever at Lexington, Ky., aged twenty years. After having graduated at the Monmouth Normal College she determined to devote her life to missionary work and applied for a position in the foreign field, in India, but a serious attack of typhoid pneumonia some years since had so seriously injured one of her lungs that the Board thought best not to send her abroad. She then sought and obtained a situation in home work, and came to the Normal School at Lexington, where her sudden and untimely death ended hopes for a useful career.

BUREAU OF WOMAN'S WORK.

MISS D. E. EMERSON, SECRETARY.

REPORT OF SECRETARY.

The year just closed, of which we are called to make report, has brought to us many opportunities for better work, both in connection with our women's organizations and in the mission field, and our first thought in the brief review is of praise to God, not only for what has been done but for what He yet gives us to do. We rejoice in the access we have to this important field of home missions for Negroes, Indians, Chinese and Highlanders, so strong in its appeal to women, where woman's work has so large opportunity and unparalleled influence. We are grateful to God for the many true, loyal helpers in this work of the American Missionary Association, for everyone who has given her personal service, whether as field or home worker, and every one who has given her money, self-denyingly, lovingly, to sustain this work.

You who together with us have been so busy in various plans for making known the needs of this field, arousing the uninterested, raising the money pledged, and seeking the conditions that would make each year's returns to be larger than the last, you know how much that has entered into a twelve months' work can never be told. And yet it is well, perhaps, to note some results, if for no other reason than to say to one another, "Be of good courage."

There are now forty-one organizations for woman's work upon practically the Union plan, and it remains but for each such organization to enlarge the place of its tent, lengthen its cords, strengthen its stakes, break forth on the right hand and on the left, and make every desolate church within its district to be inhabited by an auxiliary, a vigorous woman's missionary society capable of an intelligent study of missions, and consecrated to self-denying giving for missions. In this we pledge to every "Union" the hearty co-operation of the Woman's Bureau of the American Missionary Association.

While all these State organizations are planned for aid to the American Missionary Association, are in sympathy with it and desirous to contribute to it, some of them are not yet co-operating in its support; but from the twenty-nine that have contributed we have received for this work through their treasurers, from amounting to $19,185.24. From other women's societies and young people's bands (additional to $4,180.40 from Christian Endeavor Societies) we have received $4,593.28; a total of $23,778.52, and an advance of $2,892.38 over the contributions of last year. To all who have thus aided in the support of this work we extend our sincere thanks, and also to those who have so thoughtfully aided in sewing for our teachers' and boarding-school homes. Especially should we mention the generous work of the New-York ladies in renewing the household furnishings in the dormitories of Talladega College.

Through our Bureau of Woman's Work we have been able, more than ever before, to provide missionary speakers for women's meetings, to furnish programmes on special departments of work, and material for other programmes. To meet the frequent requests for definite objects of work, the Association has divided the cost of missions in its various fields into portions, thus enabling State organizations, local missionary societies, Christian Endeavor Societies, or Sunday-schools, to have their own special work—such as the support of a missionary at $600 or $400; Indian scholarships, $150; mountain white or Negro scholarships, $50; shares in the support of a missionary, $25 each. In response to such assigned contributions the missionary letters have been circulated freely. Forty-two letter writers have written monthly or quarterly from twenty-four mission stations, and contributors have thus learned much of the character of the work and of the every-day life of the missionaries.

There is one text of Scripture that has become very familiar in connection with Woman's Work, "The Lord giveth the Word. The women that publish the tidings are a great host." Three hundred and ninety women—nearly four hundred—have been busy in this A. M. A. field of missions during the last year, and of many a one it may be said, "She is a host in herself." They have come from our well-known colleges, Wellesley, Mt. Holyoke, Smith, Oberlin, Olivet, Tabor, and from the best normal schools. They have come from homes of refinement and culture, from attractive social and literary circles, and from the very heart of our churches. They have undertaken a difficult work, one that they soon find calls for all their resources, and a slow work not free from discouragements. "The love of Christ constraineth them." Some, regardless of any honors that they might win elsewhere, have made this their life-work. In their chosen field of labor they sit beside their Chinese pupils, and make their way through Chinatown to the homes of Chinese women. They live in the humblest quarters on the Indian reservations, or as members of an Indian household in the large boarding-schools. They go into exile in the Southern mountains, and face there the illiteracy, the feuds, and the terrors of shot-guns and whiskey, and, bravest of all, they cheerfully endure the withholding of Christian recognition and sympathy that they may help to lift our American Negro race, wronged and then despised, emancipated and yet captive, but from among whom already have developed noble men and women, conquerors of themselves, their surroundings, and of prejudice. These three hundred and ninety missionary women have been connected with one hundred and nine of the schools and churches of the American Missionary Association. Very diligently have they published the tidings, and everywhere with good results.

From the abundant testimony to this, we mention the recent annual meeting of the Indian Women's Missionary Society, where forty-two Indian societies were represented by delegates, the women coming long distances to attend; the dignity and self-possession of these Indians as they gave their reports; their sacrifice in working and earning to send missionaries to pagan tribes when yet so needy themselves. But they realize that in the saving knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ they have the light, and that to send this light to those who remain in darkness is worth all sacrifice.

There are hundreds of young colored men and women who go out from our Christian schools every year to the darkest places and most hostile, because they have come into the light, and feel that they must bring others out of darkness.

We can point to a sweet, simple home-life where young mothers look well to the ways of their households, carefully guard the children from evil associations, and teach them of the Christ-life; because under the guidance of our missionary teachers they, as pupils in the schools, and members of the school homes, were directed into the new life, developed in womanly character, and taught the principles of true homemaking.

In every part of this A. M. A. field there is marked evidence of woman's work and influence. It is indispensable. If we would bring the Indian into Christian civilization there must be homes with intelligent Christian mothers. If we would send light and sweetness and purity to the mountain homes we must so train the children that they will make good mothers. If we would find the manhood and womanhood of our long enslaved Negro race we must continue and increase the ministry of a wise womanhood.

Should not this be an incentive to women to take a larger part in this large work ; with its 116 schools and 170 churches ; with all that they associate of Sunday-schools, women's missionary societies, Christian Endeavor, Y. M. C. A. and temperance work ; this large work among four races, requiring with the closest management $400,000 annually. Are we not especially called to a larger part in it by the commission of these three hundred and ninety women missionaries who need our support?

The outlook for such help is promising. Never in the history of our woman's work have we come to the opening of a year when interest was so manifested, the study of missions so carefully pursued, and the literature so widely in use. Never was the way so plain for a forward movement.

Let us then in this new year make each State organization a rallying point for better service and increased contributions to the American Missionary Association, remembering also the word of our God, "Concerning the work of my hands,—my work,—command ye me."

THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION.

CONSTITUTION.

ART. I. This Society shall be called the American Missionary Association.

ART. II. The object of this Association shall be to conduct Christian missionary and educational operations and diffuse a knowledge of the Holy Scriptures in our own country and other countries which are destitute of them, or which present open and urgent fields of effort.

ART. III. Members of evangelical churches may be constituted members of this Association for life by the payment of thirty dollars into its treasury, with the written declaration at the time or times of payment that the sum is to be applied to constitute a designated person a life member; and such membership shall begin sixty days after the payment shall have been completed. Other persons, by the payment of the same sum, may be made life members, without the privilege of voting.

Every evangelical church which has within a year contributed to the funds of the Association, and every State or local Conference or Association of such churches, may appoint two delegates to the Annual Meeting of the Association; such delegates duly attested by credentials, shall be members of the Association for the year for which they were thus appointed.

ART. IV. The Annual Meeting of the Association shall be held in the month of October or November, at such time and place as may be designated by the Association, or, in case of its failure to act, by the Executive Committee, by notice printed in the official publication of the Association for the preceding month.

ART. V. The officers of the Association shall be a President, five Vice-Presidents, a Corresponding Secretary or Secretaries, a Recording Secretary, a Treasurer, Auditors, and an Executive Committee of fifteen members, all of whom shall be elected by ballot.

At the first Annual Meeting after the adoption of this Constitution, five members of the Executive Committee shall be elected for the term of one year, five for two years and five for three years, and at each subsequent Annual Meeting five members shall be elected for the full term of three years, and such others as shall be required to fill vacancies.

ART. VI. To the Executive Committee shall belong the collecting and disbursing of funds, the appointing, counseling, sustaining and dismissing of missionaries and agents, and the selection of missionary fields. They shall have authority to fill all vacancies in office occurring between the Annual Meetings; to apply to any Legislature for acts of incorporation, or conferring corporate powers; to make provision when necessary for disabled missionaries and for the widows and children of deceased missionaries, and in general to transact all such business as usually appertains to the Executive Committees of missionary and other benevolent Societies. The acts of the Committee shall be subject to the revision of the Annual Meeting.

Five members of the Committee constitute a quorum for transacting business.

ART. VII. No person shall be made an officer of this Association who is not a member of some evangelical church.

ART. VIII. Missionary bodies and churches or individuals may appoint and sustain missionaries of their own, through the agency of the Executive Committee on terms mutually agreed upon.

ART. IX. No amendment shall be made to this Constitution except by the vote of two-thirds of the members present at an Annual Meeting and voting, the amendment having been approved by the vote of a majority at the previous Annual Meeting.

CHARTER OF THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION.

Being Chapter Three Hundred and Fifty-Eight of the laws of 1862, as Amended by Chapter Seven Hundred and Ninety-Six of the Laws of 1871, Chapter Fifty-Two of the Laws of 1886, and Chapter Three Hundred and Ninety-Five of the Laws of 1889, of the State of New York.

The people of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

SEC. 1. William E. Whiting, Thomas Ritter, Henry Belden, James O. Bennett, Anthony Lane, Thomas C. Fanning, Samuel Wilde, C. B. Wilder, John Lowry, Josiah Brewer, William B. Brown, Alonzo S. Ball, Lewis Tappan, S. S. Jocelyn and George Whipple, and others now acting as officers and members of the American Missionary Association, located in the city of New York, together with such others as may be hereafter associated with, or succeed them, shall be and are hereby constituted a body corporate, by the name of "THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION," for the purpose of conducting missionary and educational operations, and diffusing a knowledge of the Holy Scriptures, in the United States and in other countries.

SEC. 2. The said corporation shall possess the general powers and be subjected to the provisions contained in the third title of chapter eighteen of the first part of the Revised Statutes, so far as the same are applicable, and have not been repealed or modified, and is hereby authorized to hold its meeting in any State or Territory of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

SEC. 3. The management of the affairs and concerns of the said corporation shall be conducted by an Executive Committee, to be from time to time appointed or elected by the said Association, and to consist of not less than twelve members, any five of whom shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of its business; and all persons now holding office in said Association shall be like officers in said corporation, and with like functions until the next annual meeting of the Association.

SEC. 4. The said corporation shall have power to receive and disburse funds, and to purchase, receive, hold and take by donation, deed, devise or bequest, any real or personal estate which has been or may hereafter be given, granted, devised or bequeathed to it for the purpose stated in section first, or which may accrue from the use of the same; subject, however, to the provisions of chapter three hundred and sixty of the laws of eighteen hundred and sixty, entitled An Act Relating to Wills; but it shall at no time hold property the annual income of which shall exceed one hundred thousand dollars;* and shall always have full power to grant, bargain, lease or otherwise dispose of the same, provided, that the proceeds from such grant, bargain, lease or disposal shall never, in any manner, be diverted to any other purpose than that for which the property was originally donated.

*By chapter five hundred and fifty-three of the laws of 1890 of the State of New York, the Association now has power to take and hold property the yearly income derived from which shall not exceed two hundred and fifty thousand dollars.

BY-LAWS OF THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

ART. I.—MEETINGS.

The Committee shall hold its regular meetings on the second Monday of each month, at four o'clock, P.M. Special meetings may be called at the written request of any two members of the Committee. The call for any such special meeting and the notices sent out shall state the business to be considered.

Notices of the regular and special meetings of the Committee shall be sent by mail to its members, or otherwise communicated in writing, at least one day previous to the time of meeting.

ART. II.—OFFICERS AND COMMITTEES.

At the first regular meeting of the Committee after the Annual Meeting of the American Missionary Association, a Chairman, a Vice-Chairman and a Recording Secretary shall be chosen by ballot, who shall hold office for one year, or until their successors are elected. At the same meeting, the following Standing Committees for the year shall be appointed, to consist of seven members each, three to constitute a quorum:

1. A Committee on Finance, one of whom shall be the Chairman of the Executive Committee.
2. A Committee on Southern Work.
3. A Committee on Indian and Chinese Work.
4. A Committee on Collections.

Each of these Standing Committees shall elect a Chairman and a Secretary from their own number, and shall hold a monthly meeting to consider matters pertaining to their departments.

A Committee on Appropriations, of five members, shall also be formed each year in the manner hereinafter designated.

ART. III.—DUTIES OF OFFICERS AND COMMITTEES.

CHAIRMAN.—It shall be the duty of the Chairman to preside at all meetings of the Committee, to facilitate the transaction of its business, to sign, when necessary, checks upon the bank accounts of the Association, and to appoint all standing and special committees not otherwise provided for, subject to the approval of the Executive Committee.

VICE-CHAIRMAN.—In the absence of the Chairman, or in his inability to act, the Vice-Chairman shall perform his duties.

TEMPORARY CHAIRMAN.—In the absence or inability of both, a temporary Chairman may be appointed by the Executive Committee.

RECORDING SECRETARY.—The Recording Secretary shall keep the minutes of the Committee, and read them at its regular meetings. He shall cause all Committees to be notified, in writing, of their appointment within twenty-four hours thereafter, and shall inform them of the business referred to them. In his absence or inability to act the Chairman shall appoint a substitute.

They shall also cause to be kept a book, wherein shall be set forth in detail (1) all stocks and bonds owned by the Association, at par, with a note of the original cost of the same to the Association; (2) all real estate (both land and buildings) and other property of the Association, with the full cost of the same; and (3) all property held on special deposit or in trust. This book shall be at all times open to the inspection of the members of the Executive Committee, and the record shall be so added to and amended, from time to time, under the direction of the Finance Committee, as to show at all times a correct statement of the property of the Association, and of any special trusts in its hands. All title deeds to real estate and certificates of stocks and bonds owned by the Association shall be in the charge of this Committee, who shall provide a proper place for their safe keeping. This Committee shall, when occasion requires, direct the sale and transfer of stocks, invest any funds of the Association not required or designed for current expenses, and in general shall have the oversight of the financial concerns of the Association, under the direction of the Executive Committee.

COMMITTEES ON SOUTHERN AND INDIAN AND CHINESE WORK.—It shall be the duty of the Committee on Southern Work and of that on Indian and Chinese Work to report to the Executive Committee, at its regular meeting every month, such suggestions or proposed action as shall seem to them desirable for furthering the efficiency and economy of the Missionary and Educational Work of the Association in their respective departments. They shall also have power to manage the current work of the Association assigned to them, subject to the general supervision and direction of the Executive Committee. Each of these Committees shall appoint its own meetings, keep books of record of its proceedings (the minutes of each Committee being read at the regular meetings of the Executive Committee) and may consult and advise with the Corresponding Secretaries, with the Treasurer of the Association, and with the District Secretaries and Agents in regard to its work.

COMMITTEE ON COLLECTIONS.—It shall be the duty of the Committee on Collections to consider each month the collecting work and to report thereon to the Executive Committee, and to prepare for the consideration of the Committee plans for increasing the collections.

COMMITTEE ON APPROPRIATIONS.—It shall be the duty of the Committee on Appropriations to consider the work of the Association carefully, and to present to the Executive Committee, at its meeting in May or June, a detailed statement of the amounts required in each department of the Association for the proper conduct of its work, and an estimate of the probable receipts of the Association, together with its recommendations as to the amounts which should be appropriated for the next fiscal year. This Committee shall consist of the Chairman of the Executive Committee, and the Chairmen of the first three Standing Committees.

SPECIAL COMMITTEES may be appointed from time to time as required. Standing and Special Committees can be formed only of members of the Executive Committee. All Special Committees shall examine and report upon every matter referred to them, with the facts in substance, and their opinions and recommendations, so that the Executive Committee may be fully enabled to act thereon.

APPEALS.—Every appointee of the Association has the fullest liberty of appeal to the Executive Committee. Such communications shall be referred to the Committee on Southern Work, or to the Committee on Indian and Chinese Work, according to the part of the field from which they come, for examination and a report on the matter involved, at the next meeting of the Executive Committee, when they shall receive careful attention in executive session.

They shall also prepare each month, and put into the hands of each member of the Executive Committee, before its regular monthly meeting, a schedule of the business which the Standing and any Special Committees may report to the Executive Committee for its action, and any other business they may desire to bring before the Executive Committee. It shall also be their duty to present to the Standing and Special Committees and to the Executive Committee all matters relating to their several departments, and to sign checks upon the bank accounts of the Association.

"The Evolution of a Redeemed Humanity, and Our Part in it."

BY

CHARLES H. RICHARDS, D.D., PHILADELPHIA, PA.,

DELIVERED AT THE ANNUAL MEETING OF THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION, LOWELL, MASS., OCT. 23D, 1894.

"What is man, that thou shouldest magnify him, and that thou shouldest set heart upon him, and that thou shouldest visit him every morning, and try him every moment." JOB vii: 17.

This question, wrung from the despairing heart of the man of Uz, finds its answer in the inspired vision of the prisoner of Patmos. From the standpoint of Job, enwrapt in the shadows of human weakness and woe, it seemed unaccountable that God should waste his thought and care on so insignificant a creature as man. But from the standpoint of John, who saw with unveiled eye the sublimity and splendor of that life into which redeeming grace will bring man, it is not strange at all that God should "set his heart upon him." The assured result fully justifies the divine devotion. God knows what he can make of man. Wicked and worthless as he may seem now, there are divine forces of deliverance and development which may not only rescue him from the power and penalty of sin, but enlarge and enrich his life in every way, till after the long tuition of ages he attains that glory of character and perfection of social order, of which we have the pictured prophecy and promise in the "Revelation" of John. It is to make this resplendent ideal a reality that God broods over man with unwearied love, makes for him the eternal sacrifice, and "visits him every morning, and tries him every moment" with that divine discipline which shall work out his great purpose for humanity.

I find in this thought something which has an important bearing upon the great missionary enterprise we are met to consider. In this divine task to which God addresses himself, not only are we his "fellow-workers" by his call and our own glad consent, but whatever our sacrifices or efforts, God is in this enterprise a great deal more than we are, energizing us, using our humble gifts more effectively than we dream, drawing into the stream of influence, of which we are but a part, thousands of other forces unknown to us, and making them all work under his direction toward the one great end. This will perhaps appear as we consider the theme of the evening, "The Evolution of a Redeemed Humanity, and Our Part in it."

That God should "set his heart upon" man has in all ages been the "wonder of the saint and the scoff of the infidel." Yet it would not be a matter of amazement if it were remembered that man is not to be judged by his apparent insignificance. In contrast with the material universe man appears infinitesimally small. Amid the firefly dance of innumerable worlds in "the infinite meadows of heaven," our globe is but an obscure dot in the glittering expanse, and men are but like the animalculæ that crowd a dew drop. In physical strength many other animals greatly surpass man; many even in the insect world have vastly greater power in proportion to their size. In comparison with the Titanic forces of nature he is the merest pigmy. Nor, when we consider the mass of mankind, weltering in ignorance, selfishness and misery, does his intellectual and moral life seem other than petty. If this were all, it were not strange that we should hear David's cry of wonder, echoed by Celsus' scornful cry of ridicule, "Lord, what is man, that thou takest knowledge of him?"

But man is to be judged, not by his present condition, but by God's purpose concerning him. The oak is to be judged, not by the acorn under your heel, but by the giant of the forest. And God has so sketched in outline before our eyes the grandeur of character and life to which he proposes to lift this creature of the dust, that we have a new standard by which to estimate the inherent worth of man.

And this purpose of God, as revealed, is twofold: 1. To perfect him as an individual, when he can win the consent and co-operation of the freewill. Already we have seen the process well begun in many elect spirits, and the enlarging reason, the deepening insight, the broadening sympathy, the dauntless virtue, the heroic achievements of their lives have given us a new conception of manhood. There have been enough of them to show the magnificent possibilities of human nature. And the development we observe here is only the first chapter of that great volume of their life, in which the word "finis" will never appear. And this individual outbloom of noble character and high attainment is not limited to any favored portion of our race. There is more of it in some parts than in others, but in every age and every clime there have been lives that towered far above their fellows, like beacons marking the road toward a grander manhood. Great statesmen, philosophers, poets, inventors, religious teachers have arisen in every great family of mankind. As Gray declared that every hamlet has its "mute, inglorious Milton," so we may say that every quarter of the globe has had its Cromwell and Confucius, whether history has kept the record or not. And these exceptional lives in every age and race, illustrating the possible grandeur to which life may rise, indicate that the opportunity for individual perfection, which God has purposed, is not offered merely to a favored portion of mankind, but to every member of the great human family who will conform to God's will and plan. God has "set his heart" on making man complete in the developed glory of his character and life, worthy to be his own companion, and "whosoever will," no matter what his color or condition, may rise to that far height of superb and splendid sonship with the living God.

2. But, still farther, it is God's purpose to make a perfect humanity. Our race is not a mere aggregation of units, an enormous human sand-heap. It is an organism, all the parts of which are closely inter-related. It is a body, of which we are all "members in particular," sharing its vitality or its weakness by necessity. No one of us can have a career or a destiny entirely separate from that of the race in which we are incorporate. We are lifted up or dragged down by the progress or the degradation of the great body of humanity to which we are knit by the closest of ties.

Hence the purpose of God for the individual perfection of man is coupled with his purpose for the social perfection of humanity. Gleams and glintings of this divine intent shine out in the utterances of the prophets, gladly predicting that Zion, coming to the fullness of its restored power, will fill the whole earth with its glory, and bind all people into loving loyalty to itself. It is declared by our Lord when He says that divine love sent Him hither that "the world through Him might be saved," and that He is "the light of the world," and will give "life to the world." It is proclaimed in John's vision when in response to the trumpet blast of the seventh angel the exultant chorus of heaven shouts its pean of joy, "The kingdom of the world is become the kingdom of our Lord and of his Christ, and He shall reign forever and ever." And the last glimpse of that marvelous future which God has vouchsafed to our eyes is that of the perfection of redeemed humanity in a city—the very type and symbol of social organization.

Yes, it is humanity that is to be saved and transfigured with the glory of Christ, and not a mere fragment of it. It is mankind that is to be liberated from the power of sin, and developed into the glory of the divine ideal—not merely a few favored remnants from the general wreck of our race. When the great triumph-song rings out at the end of the ages, and earth and heaven lift up their "hallelujah chorus" in jubilant antiphon, it will not be for the rescue of a few specimen saints who alone survive the destruction of a worthless humanity, but it will be over the salvation of that world that "God so loved," in every corner of which it will be seen that "the Lord God omnipotent reigneth." We are not to have a few highly polished pillars, snatched from the hopeless ruin of that fair structure which God began to build and suffered to fail; but our purified race is to become a living temple of God, rising from Christ as the cornerstone, and gradually lifting pillars and arches and fretted ceiling and resplendent dome into place, as succeeding centuries build into it tier above tier of saved men and redeemed races, till at last capstone and pinnacle are added, and the cathedral of humanity stands complete, "its walls salvation, and its gates praise," filling the earth with its glory.

Into this great work for man upon which God has "set his heart" we are called, that we may be "fellow-workers" with him. His is the power, and we may suppose he could do without us. But it is a part of his wise plan that every living organism shall grow through its own inner activity, and humanity is no exception to this law. As he builds the child into manhood through the exercise of powers and functions in its own body, which he has planned and constantly supports, so he will build the race into the completeness of his own ideal by the energetic effort toward that end of the members of the race. We are to engage in the work as though it all depended on us. And as we freely give ourselves to the work, divine power will supplement our feeble endeavors, and divine wisdom will make use of our half-wise efforts, and direct them to happier issues than we intended.

And what fresh incentive do we get for consecration to this work when we see thus the largeness of God's purpose for man. Our interest is often feeble, because our conceptions of salvation are too petty. In our thought we often limit it to a single divine act for an individual life, as though it were the breaking of a fetter, or the paying of a debt. But it is immeasurably more than that. The central and transcendent factor in it is the divine sacrifice. Calvary is, and always will be, the fulcrum on which God rests his lever when he lifts man heavenward. But we do not think of God as relaxing his efforts for the redemption of man after the tragedy of the cross was over. The living Christ was back again at once to continue his great work, touching the hearts of men with his love, working in the lives of his followers, leading forward the growing hosts of his church, using with wider reach than we can see the immense forces that were let loose in the world by his gospel. He is using a multitude of forces beside those which we call religious. Science, art, commerce, invention, jurisprudence, social improvements are so many shuttles in his hands with which he is weaving the splendid fabric of a larger and nobler life for man. And every high attainment, every best characteristic in human life which may appear in any part of our race, He will certainly work into his finished product. He is making "all things work together," energized and directed by his own presence and power, to secure the result He seeks.

It is because this larger purpose of God is rising more and more into view in the Christian consciousness, that we hear so much in our day of "the Kingdom." The phrase—"Kingdom of God," or, "of Heaven"—has been familiar enough in the Church since New Testament days. But we are finding out how much broader and richer is its meaning than had been imagined. It means that we are to have here on our earth the realized ideal of God for mankind. It will be brought about by the power of the living Christ. Already His truth and righteousness and love and power have entered into the life of the best portion of our race, finding expression in laws, institutions, philanthropies, literature, customs. It is lifting up the standard of perfect manhood in Christ. It is making clear the law of a perfect society in the golden rule. It is kindling the sense of human brotherhood everywhere, and giving to the world the thrilling consciousness that mankind is one great family. It is mastering hearts, and homes, and communities and whole peoples, and will continue its advance till Christ is universal Master of human life It is this transcendent vision of a kingdom of Man, radiant and joyful as heaven because possessed, controlled and transfigured by the living Christ, that is filling the modern Christian world with a new enthusiasm.

It is this growing ideal, too, that is at the heart of the sociological movement of our day. There is much stir over the question of changing our social order. We hear all kinds of hysterical outcries against present customs and laws, and bitter denunciations of long revered institutions. All sorts of panaceas are proposed to remedy the evils men have long patiently endured, but are now in revolt against; remedies ranging from utter Nihilism, down through all manner of Socialistic devices, to the tame and timid programme of some mere surface improvements. And to many persons the tumult of clashing opinions and efforts seems fanatical and foolish.

But there is a reason for the movement. It lies in the fact that people are seeing that man has too long been dealt with piecemeal, and not in his totality. There has been too much individualism, and too little concern for the general welfare. Selfishness, incarnate in the strong, has done everything for personal rights and privileges; and it is time now for Altruism—the germ of which Professor Drummond thinks he finds embedded in the innermost fibre of life in its earliest stages—to burst into full bloom, that all men may live for the wellbeing of the whole family of man. For even men who boast that they have no religion are finding out the great truth of Paul's words, that "we are members one of another." The gospel principle of universal brotherhood is coming to have such momentous meaning to them that it seems almost a fresh discovery. It is perceived that there is a race-unity that cannot be disregarded. In the long run, we rise or sink together. Even if some individuals are able to rise at the expense of their fellows to a great height, and look down with pride upon the masses beneath them, they are on the crest of a volcano's crater, and an explosion may any day hurl them down, and carry them in the hot lava-stream of public wrath to the lowliest condition again. The leveling forces in this great human organism are tremendous.

Out of this aroused perception of the oneness of the human family arises the social ferment of our day. This has found expression in a new literature, peculiar to our times, in which such writers as Karl Marx and

Edward Bellamy and Benjamin Kidd are trying to work out the problem of how to make real the dream of Plato in his "Republic," and Sir Thomas More in his "Utopia." The subject has assumed such importance that special chairs for instruction in Social Science are founded in our colleges and seminaries, and special departments are created in our periodical press to treat of it. But this is not a matter for the thinker and theorist alone. Great bodies of men, of the rank and file, are taking it up in a practical way. Often in a blind, crude fashion, yet always in dead earnest, they are trying to readjust the social relations of great classes of men. Hence come the struggles between labor unions and great corporations, the battles between employers and employees, the strikes and riots and social upheavals that seem to threaten industrial chaos. We are filled with alarm at times, and are angry at the crazy schemes of fanatical reformers, and fancy if we could but stop the mouths of socialist agitators and walking delegates, things would settle comfortably back into the good old ways. But that would be like trying to arrest the current of the Amazon in its onward sweep to the sea by dipping a bucket into it here and there, and taking off the crest of the topmost waves. This movement is a Providential movement, created by the awakening sense of universal brotherhood. As the power of gravitation, which penetrates the universe with its mysterious energy, and swings countless worlds over their glittering circuits in perfect order, carries the great river with irresistible tide to its goal, so the power of God is in this new impulse which is compelling men to seek the welfare of society as a whole. This gives a certain dignity and importance to men whose plans seem to us futile and grotesque, sometimes even detestable, when we see how, caught up in the sweep of this divine impellent, they are working, however blindly, for mankind in its totality. And God is using them for a larger end than they can distinctly see. They are "building better than they know." For through all these immediate and subsidiary efforts to adjust differences between classes, to get wages onto a better basis and secure better economic conditions, to harmonize the principles of competition and co-operation, there runs the golden thread of God's great purpose to build up humanity, individually and socially, to the New Jerusalem ideal. They are among the important factors which the divine workman is using to bind all the fragmentary portions of mankind into a great race-unity, where all will share at last the advantages of each, and where every part will contribute the benefits of its special characteristics to the welfare of the whole. They are opening up the stopped channels of the great organism, so that the currents of a common life blood may flow into every part of the body, healing its diseases, developing its atrophied and dwarfed members, and building up humanity to the harmony and glory of God's plan.

I have brought the discussion of our theme to this point that we might get new vantage-ground from which to consider the missionary work of the Christian church. Surely it is not without a thrill that we see, from the standpoint we have reached, that God's intent in this campaign of world-evangelization is so much higher and vaster than ours. He can work through us, even though we do not catch the full meaning of his eternal purpose, and though our aims and methods fall far below the grandeur of his plan. But he works always toward a loftier ideal than ours.

The thought of the Christian church has been largely directed to the salvation of individuals. This is as it ought to be. It is the initial point of all effort for the redemption of mankind. And the rescue of a single life is worth all it costs both God and man. There are such limitless possibilities of power and beauty and joy in a single soul that to secure its redemption Christ's cross and ours are none too great a price. God's estimate of its value was expressed at Golgotha. And the salvation of the world can only be secured by the conversion of individuals and upbuilding them to the Christ-like pattern, one by one. Redemption is not a wholesale process. Humanity cannot be saved in bulk. It can only be accomplished as each individual heart is stirred to better desires, each individual will is persuaded to a holy choice, each individual soul is brought into a living union with Christ, to be made partaker of His life. We shall never cease to plan and pray and work for the salvation of the individual.

But, after all, he who "shall see of the travail of his soul and shall be satisfied," will never be content with the rescue of even many individuals, merely as individuals, from the power of sin. He aims at that, but at very much more. He never loses sight of the organic coherence of all the members of the great human organism. He knows that every portion of the great body of mankind is affected by the condition of every other portion:

"Like warp and woof, all destinies
Are woven fast;
Linked in sympathy, like the keys
Of an organ vast.
Pluck one thread, and the web ye mar;
Break but one
Of a thousand strings, and the paining jar
Thro' all will run."

Hence he aims at the redemption of whole communities, of nations, of continents, of the world. He will not be satisfied till he sees our entire humanity, not only individually Christlike, but knit together in the harmony of a perfect society, illustrating in its collective life the utmost glory and joy of heaven. What new impetus would be given to our missionary work could we always keep this ideal before us!

And we may see new significance in the work of this great Association, whose annual meeting we here attend, in the light of this divine intent. It has been the distinguishing honor of the American Missionary Association that it has held fast to God's estimate of man. Seeing that God has "set his heart upon" man, it has not been ashamed to do the same, no matter what his color or condition. It has held that God's image in ebony is just as much to be respected as God's image in ivory. It has believed that just as rich and royal a manhood can be developed under a yellow mask as under a pink one. Disregarding the cruel prejudices and hostilities that many have shown, it has been ready to labor for those whom others have despised and scoffed at, because they belong to the great brotherhood of man. By a happy providence, it has been called to work for men of four different colors, whose complexions and characteristics represent the four great divisions of the human family, and whose origin and history are associated with the four great continents of our globe. The work is within the boundaries of our own country, yet it thus becomes a work of world-wide potency, and just because its work is what it is, a work for Man, and a work for these great representative classes, it appears to me to have a very singular and wonderful importance as a special factor in the Evolution of a Redeemed Humanity.

Note, if you please, that it is not merely a work of philanthropy, nor of humanitarian pity for the needy. It is not a work of ordinary evangelism. It is not merely a patriotic task, though the national perils it is helping to avert are appalling. Charles Dudley Warner said two years ago that this Association "undertakes the most important . . . work which is being done in this country." It not only has to save souls, but to save a state." If it had no other object than this it would deserve the support of every patriotic citizen; but it stands for much more than this. It is not merely ethnic in its scope, a work for the particular races with which it immediately deals. It is all these, and immensely more. It is preeminently a sociological work, in the largest and most profoundly Christian sense, for its providential field enables it to have a very direct and telling influence in helping mankind on toward the realization of the divine ideal. Affecting with its uplifting, developing, Christianizing power, the special classes which it directly touches, it is really laying its hand on the future, and through them is helping to shape the fair image of a completed manhood.

For the momentous fact must be kept in mind, that the ideal humanity will not be a reproduction of some particular type now existing. It will not be the triumphant survival of some particular family or sub-race, proudly holding its place while all the other sub-races suffer extinction. But the new man oftthat coming world, when God's plan ripens to its fulfilment, will be the resultant of all the best elements and features from every quarter. His life will be enriched from every age and from every race. He will not be a physical amalgam, arising from inter-marriage of the different races; but he will be the spiritual product of the blended traits of highest manhood, brought from every portion of our world-girdling humanity. The unification and elevation of all parts of the race, now auspiciously begun and rapidly going on, will make this constantly easier to secure. Thought, high purpose, refined taste, dauntless courage, principle, character, sympathy, generosity, all the elements of a great and puissant manhood will be carried into that ideal man, from whatsoever quarter where they have found richest development. He will be the heir of the best treasure of every race. And every race on earth will be a contributor to his wealth of manhood. The Anglo-Saxon, proud conqueror of so much of earth's territory, and to-day the most aggressive and dominating type on our globe, will not have a monopoly of that future. He will share it with the Japanese and Chinese, the Yankees and the Bourbons of the Orient, with the men of the Euphrates valley and of the South Seas, with the sons of Africa and of India. The present lines that separate them will be obliterated, but their best characteristics will be perpetuated in that millennial man, who will make earth a heaven.

Does any one suppose that the features of these lowly people for which this Association works will not appear in the composite picture of that man of the future, because they are now so far behind the more favored portions of our race? History refutes that objection. What could have seemed more improbable, thirty-five centuries ago, than that the slaves, whom Egyptian taskmasters scourged to menial duties, would become the religious teachers of the world? Yet from that Hebrew colony which Moses led forth into the wilderness, have come the influences which are working the spiritual transformation of the world. The men that founded Rome were semi-barbarians, lawless freebooters, judged by the standards of our day; yet they developed the greatest government of the ancient world, and have given to the race conceptions of law and justice, which are the foundation-stones of our modern civilization. Nay, what were our own ancestors a few centuries ago but rough and ignorant heathen, whose symbol of power was the bludgeon, among whom a youth could not obtain the distinction of being called a man till he had killed some one, whose heroes were red-handed robbers. Yet those rough and rugged Northmen of Europe were pioneers of liberty, blowing the breath of freedom into our modern world; and softened, developed, transformed by the gospel, they have become the great missionary-race of our globe. The past is full of illustrations of the fact that God has often taken "the base things of the world, and the things that are despised, . . . yea, even the things that are not, that he might bring to nought the things that are."

Moreover, if we look somewhat carefully at these different peoples which this Association is laying hold of with its influences of education and religion, we shall see that each represents certain characteristics essential to the ideal humanity. So that the work we are doing for them is but preparing them to make their great contribution to God's finished product of a perfect manhood.

THE SOUTHERN MOUNTAINEER.

We may leave one side, for the present, that most interesting white population which we are undertaking to restore to their lost birth-right, for they are but part of ourselves—a side-tracked section of the Anglo-Saxon race. And we are so proud of ourselves that it needs no argument to convince us that we shall possess the future. When humanity's race is fully run we expect to be in at the finish, and very much to the front. And certainly our race-stock is to-day in the very van of human progress. It will contribute rich store to the garnered wealth of that future, in its energy, intelligence, liberty and law.

THE INDIAN.

But has not the Indian, also, his contribution to make to the completion of humanity? Mr. Kidd expresses the opinion that his lot is extinction. But this may well be doubted. The census shows nearly two hundred fifty thousand of them in the United States, and the number on our continent north of Mexico is placed at over four hundred thousand. In Mexico there are six million Indians, and in South America seven million more, so that on this side of our globe we have more than fourteen millions of brothers in red. Given "a white man's chance," they are no more likely to become extinct than Englishmen. We have done our best to keep them savages. We have herded them on reservations to be the easy prey of unprincipled agents; pauperized them with grants; hunted them like wild animals; educated them with the rifle and whiskey bottle, till under such treatment they have developed often a duplicity, ferocity and immorality that entitles them to the name of "red devils." But there is a better, nobler side to their nature. They have hearts and consciences as well as we. The work which John Eliot and Jonathan Edwards did for them, which Eaton and his co-laborers are doing in Mexico, which many missionaries are doing in South America, which we ourselves are engaged in doing at Santee and other points, through Dr. Riggs and his allies, is not fruitless, but bearing rich results. And it is bringing out, and will do so, more and more, the splendid traits of manhood that have been lying dormant in that dusky people, waiting for Christian development. Our missionaries in Mexico tell us that the Indians are the trustiest and most hopeful material of our sister republic; and Benito Juarez, the Washington of Mexico and the nation's deliverer, is a splendid illustration of the grandeur of manhood that lies latent in that long suffering race. Yes, the Indian will have a share in that future. He carries in himself to-day treasure which it needs, and with which he will help to enrich it, namely, the spirit of independence, of patience, of fortitude, of tremendous pertinacity.

AND WHAT OF THE CHINESE?

When we think of that vast empire that covers one-third of Asia, with a teeming population including a quarter of all the people on our globe, we cannot believe that God has no purpose for them in his eternal plan. We are too prone to form our judgment of their possibilities from certain superficial data. We see their stolidity, their conceit, their fantastic superstitions, their petrifaction in ideas and customs thousands of years old. But there is also another side of Chinese character in their filial love, reverence for the past, respect for learning and stubborn gift of continuance in this changeful world which should command our admiration. One who has studied them for years declares that they are "a live race, a dominant race," fit to be matched even against the Anglo-Saxon. They have great staying qualities, holding fast to any good thing they get, and sticking fast to any good custom or place when they take foothold. There can be little doubt that a people of such qualities will play an important part in the world's future, if it can be properly equipped. And what China needs for this equipment is Christ. And it gives a new meaning to the work we are doing for the hundred thousand Chinese in our country when we hear this same man say, "it is the Chinese who are going to evangelize China, and the Chinese of America and Australia are the instruments for the work."

THE AFRICAN RACE.

And we may be quite as confident that the African race has its own great and rich contribution to make to that final humanity. This is a question of immediate interest to us, with our more than seven millions of them in this country. But it is much more than a local question, since there are one hundred and fifty millions of them in the world, of whom one hundred and thirty millions are on the continent of Africa. No forecast of the future can be correct that does not take account of this vast body of people. Here in our land they constitute a kind of separate estate, larger than three Norways, larger than all European Turkey, nearly as large as Persia, or as three Switzerlands, or equaling the population of Canada plus Scotland. Can it be that God has dropped down this ebony kingdom into the midst of this republic without having in that fact a great purpose for that race, and for the whole human family?

Professor Keane of Oxford takes a very discouraging view of the possibilities of the African, in the Encyclopedia Brittanica, saying, "No full blood Negro has ever been distinguished as a man of science, a poet, or an artist, and the fundamental equality claimed for him by ignorant philanthropists is belied by the whole history of the race in the historic period." But has he reflected that during nearly this entire period the race as a whole has been in either a savage or an enslaved condition, with no chance for development? Does he recall how many centuries elapsed after the conversion of our ancestors before a Shakespeare was produced, or how many ages of culture it took to prepare an Angelo? Give us more time. An Oxford professor knows much, but perhaps this one has been too much occupied to learn of Toussaint, the Napoleon of Hayti; of Blyden, the great Arabic scholar of Liberia; of J. C. Price, the peer of any orator in the country; of Booker Washington, the brilliant educator. Probably he never heard of Bishop Haygood's statement, that "no illiterate people ever made such progress in two and a half decades" as these same despised people since 1865. The experience of our schools and colleges for a generation shows conclusively that this race takes to culture as readily as people of any color of the rainbow. But I wish to say very much more than that, and affirm that there are characteristics of the Negro nature which are pre-eminent, and which the manhood of the future race must have. It is a nature very rich in emotion. These people are children of the sun—not only in the color of their skin, but in spiritual temperament. They are gifted as a race with that power of feeling that kindles imagination, poetry, music. They have great capacity for enthusiasm; warm-hearted and happy, they are greatly endowed with the power of affection. Other races may surpass this in intellect, and in achievements of the will; but the Negro race will have a grand contribution to make to the completed humanity in this wealth of emotional life, which, in proper balance with other qualities, is an essential feature of the perfect man.

Thus all these classes, for which this great Christian enterprise is engaged, have their special contribution to make in the evolution of redeemed humanity. Differing in color and characteristics, they represent four great types of human nature. The Indian is the embodiment of steadfastness, courage, patience. The Mongol is epitomized conservatism, clinging with firm grasp to the good of the past. The Anglo-Saxon is the incarnation of progress, freedom, reason, thrift. The African is pre-eminent for a tropical warmth of nature, glowing with imagination, emotion, love. And the millennial man, who is to be the heir of all the ages, cannot afford to miss any of these great qualities. He must have them all. He will blend in himself all these differing types when he reaches the perfection to which God's discipline is steadily developing him. All these sundered and seemingly alien races, when Christ has accomplished in them his redemptive purpose, will sit down together on equal terms,

"In the parliament of man, the federation of the world."

And in the light of that day, which even now shines upon us from afar, we may see how false and un-Christian is the feeling some seem to have, that it is wasted effort to attempt anything for people so ignorant and degraded as some of these are, since they cannot possibly be of any consequence in the world's future. For we may see that there is no refuse in humanity, but that these millions of the poor are to play an important part in the destiny of our race. And we may take Tennyson's verse, with the change of a single word, and say:

"That nothing walks with aimless feet,
And not one race shall be destroyed
And cast as rubbish to the void,
When God hath made the pile complete."

Herein, Christian friends, lies the grandeur of that work which often seems to us so humble and so hard. We are working to save souls, every one of which is of priceless worth. We are working to save a nation from the dangers that threaten it, because of the dense ignorance, poverty and immorality of great masses of people. We are working for races that some despise, to lift them up to the larger blessings of our better lot. But, above and beyond all this, we are working, even when we are least conscious of it, for the bringing in of that "day of the Lord," when his glory shall be reflected from every life because it enshrines the living Christ, and the harmony and beauty of heaven shall be exhibited in a society that perfectly illustrates the ideal of Christ. This transforms our work from drudgery to glorious opportunity. We sometimes call the negro question in this land of ours a "problem;" rather should we call it an "opportunity." The very elements in it which make it a riddle insoluble to those who are not ready to deal with it in a Christian way, make it to us a gracious chance of helping forward the plan of God for producing an ideal humanity and society. And what has already been accomplished by the work of a single generation for this people under the potent influence of the gospel, assures us that it needs but the earnest continuance and enlargement of such efforts to work the complete transformation, not only of the black population in this country, but of the whole dark continent. As the missionary spirit sends us into the South, that same spirit will send thousands of cultured Christians from the South to carry the gospel to their own race on the continent that Livingstone broke his heart over. And the day is coming when "Ethiopia shall stretch forth her hands unto God," no longer in the agonizing cry of despairing need, but with alleluias of praise for its complete redemption. Then it will be ready to add to the full its great contribution to that completed humanity on which God has "set his heart."

And the opportunity appeals with special urgency to two great sections of our country. Here in the heart of New England, which has been dominated and blessed by the ideals and spirit which the "Mayflower" brought to our shores, may we not say that there are reasons why the North should regard this work as having a peculiar claim upon its people. Another ship was headed for America before the little vessel freighted with the charter of our liberties made Plymouth harbor. A slave ship touched at Jamestown in 1619, and landed twenty negroes. The black brother was ahead. The next year his white brother followed, and laid the cornerstone of our free institutions on the shore of Massachusetts. But what a contrast is there in the career of these two from that time? The Pilgrim planted schools and churches, diligently trained and taught his children, and sought to incorporate the will of God into all public and private life. Freedom, faith and learning were his three graces. The result was that culture, principle, character, prosperity have abounded in all that belt of country, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, where the Pilgrim ideals and spirit have been dominant. But the black man was a slave; it was a crime to teach him to read; his religion was a gush of superstitious feeling often divorced from morality, and poverty, ignorance and misery have been the unhappy lot of the millions of his descendants. This is not their fault. It is the natural result of conditions forced upon them by others. And now in the abundance of our prosperity, their pitiable need imposes on us an obligation to help them. The children of the "Mayflower," with their rich inheritance of blessing, ought to help the children of the slave ship, with their legacy of woe.

But especially is this the opportunity of the South. That fair region, recovering from the desolation of war and the blight of slavery, has in it the possibilities of a great future. With immense natural resources, a seaboard that opens its commerce easily to the whole world, and a people whose courage even in a hopeless cause commanded the admiration of mankind, it ought to have an unexampled prosperity. It will have it, if it is as wise and true and Christian in its action as it ought to be. But its brilliant promise is offset with a great peril. More than one-third of the population of the South is of negro blood. Embedded in the midst of sixteen million whites is this great black mass of seven million Afro-Americans, waiting to become either a terrible curse or a vast blessing to that region. At present it is to a large degree a mass of poverty, illiteracy and animalism, in which superstition takes the place of principle. It is, therefore, easily corrupt, and the source of corruption to its entire environment. Left to itself this rapidly growing mass of untrained, unregulated, unChristianized animalism will surely pauperize, barbarize and ruin the whole South.

Now, I know that there is a certain element in the white South which cannot view this condition of things except with bitter anger and unreason. Rock-bound in its prejudice, anchored to the petrified ideals of the past with a Chinese conservatism, blind to the essential conditions of modern progress, it is exerting its utmost energy to keep the black race in the menial conditions of slavery. Jealous of every improvement which seems to be elevating the negro toward equality with the white man in any respect, its constant attitude is that of relentless hostility toward the colored man. The only hand it stretches out to its black brother is to give him a blow; its only caress for him is a kick. Hence follow race conflicts, lawless outbreaks, increasing social disorder. And this condition of things tends to grow worse continually, and it means stagnation, retrogression and increasing disaster for that whole section.

But there is a new South rapidly coming to the front. There is a better South, unwilling to be left behind in the great onward march of humanity. It has caught the swing of modern ideas, and is trying to keep step to the bugle notes of God's providence. And if I had the ear of that better South to-day, I would say to it: Here is your glorious opportunity. By the very situation in which you find yourself, God has marked out your special work in his kingdom. It is for you to bring to bear upon this vast element of danger, lodged in your very vitals, such influences as will change it into an immeasurable help and blessing to the South and to the world. And how can you do this? Can you do it by refusing to recognize the manhood of the negro? Can you do it by treating him with insult and opprobrium, as if—no matter what his culture or Christian character—he is still less than a man, and hardly above your dogs or your cattle? Can you do it by taking advantage of his ignorance in trade, or robbing him of those rights which the common law of our country has solemnly declared to be his? Can you do it by lynching him? A thousand negroes in the South have suffered death by this lawless and barbarous method within the past ten years. Many of them, according to the Southern papers, were entirely innocent of the crime of which they were accused; but they were hung without evidence, and as convenient victims of the popular fury, because they were black. It is not strange that the simple story of such wholesale cruelties, as told by the dusky daughter of this race—made eloquent by the pathos of the bitter facts—should have aroused the astonished protest of Christian England, as it will surely arouse the indignant condemnation of the whole civilized world should such barbarities be continued.

But our question just now is simply this: Can any method of harshness or of race-hatred accomplish the work which the new South is providentially set to do for this immense population within its borders? The question answers itself. Your opportunity, brethren of the South, is to educate and evangelize till intelligence and principle and trustworthy Christian character have supplanted ignorance and immorality. It is yours to train that needy people to industrial skill, to habits of thrift, to high ideals of home life, so that, instead of being an incubus upon your region, this great army of intelligent, well-equipped Christian workers shall add millions to your wealth, stability to your body politic and prosperity in every way. Put away the coward fear of negro equality. The true way to prevent this is, not by keeping the black man down, but by yourself rising constantly higher, as you will do by dealing with this matter in a thoroughly Christian way. Nobody can catch up with you if you only keep far enough ahead. The bugbear of negro equality is but the silly nightmare of those who are either too lazy or too conceited to seek any progress for themselves. The Anglo-Saxon people has centuries the start in such a race, and need not fear that it will be easily overtaken. But when we are all rising, if any man can catch up with me, or go beyond me, it is by the grace of God, and I must thank God for it. Let us repeat it again, the only salvation for the South is in the salvation of the black race in the South. We would aid you in this great work, which is pre-eminently your work. Welcome us as your fellow-laborers. Do not ostracize our teachers, who have often suffered social martyrdom among you because they have devoted themselves to the redemption of these lowly ones. Give us, not your contempt, but your glad co-operation in our effort to aid you. And when the new South, instead of crucifying its negroes, is ready to bear the cross for their salvation and transformation, we shall see the dawn of that great prosperity for which that region waits. Nay, more, we shall see a great step taken in the forward movement of our common humanity toward the complete realization of a kingdom of God on the earth.

And yet this is not the work of the South alone, nor of the North. It is not a work for the black man alone, nor for the red man. It is the work of all Christians for all races on the earth. It is the high, imperial task set to every follower of Christ, who is not permitted to disown his brotherhood with every one for whom Christ died. Each one is bidden by the Master, whose outstretched hands, starred with the crimson marks of sacrifice, constitute their own appeal, to devote his life to secure the great end upon which God has "set his heart." We are to live and labor for the salvation of individuals, for the Christian reconstruction of races, for the unification of the world in one great brotherhood, for the development into the full glory which God planned of that colossal organism which we call Man. And when, at length, by our humble efforts and those other myriad forces which Omnipotence condescends to use, God brings the long work of the ages to its triumphant conclusion, then, not only in the radiance of personal character transfigured with the beauty of Christ, but in the New Jerusalem splendor of that organic life into which "all the kingdoms of the world shall bring their riches," and to which all the races of men shall contribute their peculiar treasure, we shall see at last the full glory of Redeemed Humanity.

Rev. J. K. McLean, of California, then presented a supplementary report on Chinese missions, and spoke upon the same subject. Pres. Ballantine added an item of great interest in this connection. The supplementary report was accepted, and a unanimous vote of sympathy with its recommendations was taken.

Rev. F. P. Woodbury then presented a paper on "Ownership and Service."

Rev. H. M. Ladd, of Ohio, then presented the report of the Committee on Southern Church Missions, and addressed the Association on the same subject.

An address was next made by Rev. Geo. C. Rowe, South Carolina.

The committee on the resolution concerning lynching then made a report, by its chairman, Rev. Washington Gladden, who also addressed the Association upon the subject.

The report is as follows :

This Association desires to bear further testimony against that form of lawlessness which has become alarmingly prevalent in many sections of our country, by which mobs of infuriated men usurp the functions of judge and jury and put to death, often with cruelty and torture, persons suspected of crime who have never been proved to be guilty, and who, in some cases, are undoubtedly innocent. Such outrages are a disgrace to our civilization. They indicate not only a lack of self-control on the part of the perpetrators, which proves them to be unfit for citizenship in a republic, but also a shameful moral cowardice and indifference on the part of the citizens who look on and have no effective word of protest to utter.

Such crimes are not peculiar to any section of the country; some of the most flagrant outbreaks of this nature have recently occurred in Northern States. A brave colonel of militia, who protected a negro from a raging mob that was battering down the doors of a court house, is now on trial for his life in a neighboring State.

It is time that men in every State who are unwilling that anarchy should take the place of law should speak out with no uncertain sound. No matter how flagrant the guilt of any evil doer may be, he cannot, in any civilized land, be punished without due process of law. His guilt may seem evident, but it must be proved in open court, and the penalty administered by the constituted authorities. In a community where the worst man can be lynched the best man's life is in danger.

Sometimes, no doubt, these lynchings have been provoked by a lax enforcement of law. The fact that weak courts and corrupt juries permit miscreants to go unpunished is the excuse of the mob. The remedy is only an aggravation of the disease. Law is not vindicated by a relapse into barbarism.

But in most of the communities where these atrocities are perpetrated there is no question but that the laws could be depended on to punish condignly all persons who are guilty of grave offenses. The negro, who is most apt to be the victim of these lynchings, is not at all likely to be too tenderly dealt with by courts and juries. If there is any evidence of his guilt he is morally certain to suffer the full penalty of the law. The mobs which hurry him to death are not seeking to remedy the defects of justice, they are only finding vent for their own brutality.

We call on good men in every part of this land to bear witness against this lawlessness. Let the press and the pulpit lift up their voices; let teachers in all our schools and colleges point out to their pupils the enormity of such practices; let our judges admonish grand juries and prosecuting officers that they bring to justice those who thus trample the law under their feet; let religious bodies everywhere lend their aid in creating a sound public opinion, to the end that the law, which is the only safeguard of liberty, may be sacred and inviolate throughout the land.

Rev. G. H. Haines, North Carolina, then made an address. He was followed by Secretary J. E. Roy, who gave a survey of the Southern work as found after ten years of absence from it. Rev. J. M. Sturtevant reported the following committee and the report was accepted: Committee on Courtesy, Rev. J. W. Bradshaw, of Michigan, and Rev. P. E. Harding, of Ohio. The Association took a recess till 2 P.M.

THURSDAY AFTERNOON.

At 2 P.M. a woman's meeting was held under the direction of Miss D. E. Emerson, secretary of the Woman's Bureau. At 4.15 P.M. the Association convened in business session. Prayer was offered by Rev. J. K. McLean, of California.

The Finance Committee as reported by the Nominating Committee were elected, as follows: Joseph Van Vleck, of New York; D. C. Tiebout, of New York; A. L. Williston, of Massachusetts; S. B. Capen, of Massachusetts; Rodney Dennis, of Connecticut.

Upon the nomination of the Nominating Committee the following were unanimously elected by ballot as officers for the ensuing year:

*Mr. Nichols resigned and Mr. James H. Oliphant was appointed.

The following amendment to Article III. of the Constitution, proposed at the last meeting of the Association, was adopted:

"The pastor of any evangelical church contributing to the funds of the Association within a year is thereby constituted a voting member for that year."

The minutes of the sessions of Wednesday evening and of Thursday were read and approved.

It was voted that the Secretary complete the record of the remaining session. After a prayer by Secretary A. F. Beard, the Association adjourned to 7.30 P.M.

THURSDAY EVENING.

The evening session was opened with singing by the Fisk University Quintette. The Scripture lesson was read and prayer offered by Rev. G. C. Rowe, of South Carolina. After singing by the quintette the Association was addressed by Pres. James B. Angell, of the University of Michigan, and Gen. O. O. Howard. The quintette led in the singing of "Mine eyes have seen the coming of the Lord," the congregation joining in the chorus. President Gates then addressed the Association.

The following resolution was adopted:

Having listened to the statements concerning the Sheats Law and its application to the school at Orange Park, Florida, and having learned that the Executive Committee of the American Missionary Association has determined to test the validity of the law in the courts, therefore, Resolved, that we, the members of the Association present at the annual meeting in Detroit, Mich., do heartily approve the course the Executive Committee has taken, and furthermore express our hope that the committee carry the case to the highest court in the land, if need be.

The chairman of the Business Committee presented the invitation of the Chamber of Commerce, the Mayor, the City Council, the Board of Public Works, and the Tennessee Centennial Committee of the city of Nashville for the Association to hold its next session in that city. The following resolution was adopted as a reply to the kindly invitation extended:

1. Resolved, That this Association acknowledges with heartiest thanks the united and most cordial invitation of the Mayor, the City Council, the Chamber of Commerce, the Board of Public Works and Affairs and the Tennessee Centennial Committee to hold the next annual meeting in the city of Nashville.

2. Resolved, That such an offer of genuine Southern hospitality, coming with such unanimity from those who are well acquainted with the worth of the Association, is most gratefully received by us as a recognition of its patriotic and Christian aims and its sincere efforts to promote the highest interests of the South.

3. Resolved, That we sincerely regret that this invitation has been received too late for acceptance this year and that we cannot make our jubilee meeting a part of the centennial celebration of Tennessee, but that we shall hope in the near future to hold an anniversary in the beautiful and hospitable city which has tendered so generous a welcome.

Rev. J. W. Bradshaw, from the Committee on Courtesy, presented the following resolution, which was adopted unanimously by a rising vote:

The American Missionary Association, convened in annual session, desires to express its hearty thanks to all who through their kind offices have contributed to the enjoyment and profit of this its forty-ninth annual gathering.

In particular to the pastors and members of the Congregational churches of this charming city of Detroit for the genial hospitality with which we have been welcomed to their homes; to the ladies of the various churches who have made possible the delightful social intercourse of the mid-day and evening recesses by means of the generous repasts provided in the church house; to the First Church and its beloved pastor for the use of their beautiful and commodious church edifice, and for all which they have done for our comfort and convenience; to the choirs of the First and Woodward avenue churches and to the singers from Fisk University for their uplifting service of song; to the railroads for courtesies shown, and to the press for its reports of the proceedings of the Association.

With grateful recognition of that divine guidance which has been manifest in the work of the past year, in the spirit of the devotional services and in all the deliberations of the meeting, we invoke the continuance of that blessing of God upon the Association which has so conspicuously crowned its efforts in the past, until, through the work of this and kindred organizations, the too widely severed races of this nation shall be fused into one loyal citizenship, one brotherhood of love.

The closing address was made by the pastor of the church, Rev W. H. Davis. After singing "Christ for the World We Sing," the repeating of the Lord's Prayer in concert, and prayer by Gen. Howard and the benediction by Rev. Jesse Porey, of Detroit, the Association adjourned.

JOHN P. SANDERSON, Assistant.

BY REV. WILLARD SCOTT, CHAIRMAN.

The work for the Chinese in California the past year has had much the same features as in recent annual reports. Under the faithful and enthusiastic leadership of Rev. Dr. Pond, our apostle to that race on the Pacific coast, it has made the most of such opportunities as the long-continued hard times have afforded, and though the Chinamen themselves have been much out of work, restless and inattentive in mind, disinclined to study or to listen to the gospel, heartsore and moving from place to place, and though the support from the churches has been very inadequate, the stations have been maintained with usual vigor, often at the cost of keen hardship on the part of the workers, who have been kept waiting long in some instances for their salaries, or have been compelled to make contributions for the work on their own part which they could ill afford to spare.

In this way twenty schools have been maintained in eighteen cities and towns, including three in San Francisco, with thirty-six teachers and an average attendance of from five to thirty-six pupils to each school, making a total enrollment for the year of 1,011 scholars. Nearly 200 have turned from idolatry to Christian associations and 160 have been hopefully converted. While these results are much the same as in previous years, the real success of the work is greater than formerly because of the decreased number of Chinamen accessible to the influence of the schools on account of the operation of the exclusion law and the increasing opportunity of those who wish to learn English for obtaining it through their own countrymen rather than through Christian teachers. There are now about 300 Chinese Christians in California connected with our missions, and since the beginning of the work more than 1,100 have given hopeful evidences of being converted to the teachings of Jesus. The work has been slow but steady—"no great harvests, but no barren years"—and in stability, zeal, liberality and fruitful activity these Christians compare well on the average with those of our own or any other race. During the year a new and prosperous mission has been opened in Salt Lake City, Utah, with twenty-one pupils and teachers paid by them.

In addition to this work of the schools, street preaching has been carried on with increasing success and is becoming one of the most important parts of the work in those places where attendance upon the schools is declining because "the English primer has lost its power as a bait to the gospel hook." More than formerly the men must be sought on the street and in the public places where they congregate. So while this method has been used all along, as there was occasion for it, it is now becoming of greater importance as the Chinese become more self-sustaining and have less need to come for teaching to the schools. Street preaching is now the method for sowing the seed which the missions will reap by and by. After the public services personal work is done among those most interested, and cards printed in Chinese are distributed giving the location of the mission house, the names of the teachers, with a brief pledge for the use of any who may be willing to make even a tentative avowal of interest in the gospel.

The new Christian Endeavor movement, begun recently by the Chinese themselves, is growing in popularity and influence, and affords one of the most hopeful features of the year. The honest sincerity with which the pledge is taken and kept is like their loyalty to other things to which they commit themselves. It never seems to occur to them to make a pledge which they may keep or not, from week to week as they happen to feel. The work has been marked by unusual spirituality and activity, and out of it an increased number of genuine conversions is likely to grow.

Another phase of newer work, begun in 1893, is the visitation of women and children in their homes. The object of this is not so much to reach and save lost women who have no family life, who are especially under the care of the Presbyterian and the Methodist denominations, but rather to search out and reach in a friendly way the wives and mothers, of whom there are some 2,500 in San Francisco alone, who seldom see anything of the outside world. This is carried on by lady visitors who go from house to house, where usually they are received gladly, and in some instances have been the means of awakening a real religious interest. This work is not only to save the women, but also the men, who are greatly influenced by the character of their home life, and to avoid, if possible, the peril experienced in some missionary work of losing hold of the men converted from heathenism by not having a hold upon the women also. For this work the year's allowance has been pitifully small, and an appeal is now being made for an additional $100 per month from some source by which it is believed every Chinese mother, accessible to the visitors in fourteen cities of California, could have the comfort of Christian friendliness and hear at length the of Jesus. Until this is done even the men who are hopefully saved are in great story danger of relapsing, and the children of the homes cannot be saved at all.

The interest in their foreign mission work in China, which has been a beautiful feature of Chinese Christianity on the Pacific coast for over twenty years, has had an enthusiastic support this year also, in which they have given over $600 for their home land out of their poverty. The chapel and dispensary at Ci Wing have been enlarged, and a lot and building have been purchased at Canton, both of these stations being served by missionaries converted in California and supported by their Christian comrades who still remain there. The headquarters of this world-wide Christian enterprise is among the members of Dr. Pond's church, under the leadership of Rev. Mr. Jee Gam, whose ordination to the Christian ministry a month ago was the first in the Congregational history of this country. The ordination scene in Dr. Pond's church was deeply impressive. Completely dressed in native costume, the hair on the top and sides of his head shaved in traditional fashion, and with long braided queue terminating in silken tassels, he stood forth to receive the orders of a Christian minister, to which his associates had so earnestly urged him. Over a score of clergymen from San Francisco and adjoining cities attended the council, while most interested of all were the 135 Chinese fellow-members of the church in which he was ordained, and where he has long been a sort of Californian Confucius to his brethren.

Another event of the year of peculiar interest was the celebration in May of what was believed to be the twenty-fifth anniversary of the beginning of Christian Chinese work in Sacramento. Begun first in the basement of the Congregational Church, it removed later to its own mission house, where for seventeen years it has been a home and school, for the most of the time under the direction of Mrs. Carrington. More than 1,000 Chinese have here come under the gospel instruction, discipline and Christian example of this woman. More than 100 of them have been converted, and of these not less than twelve have gone forth as foreign missionaries to China and elsewhere, an excellent illustration of what conservative, faithful labor for this people can do.

For this immensely significant work on the Pacific coast this American Missionary Association has given the past year only $6,500, while, including gifts from all sources, the entire cost has been only about $11,000, a smaller sum than is required by many of our churches for their own local support. Yet the heroic superintendent, writing in view of the situation at the close of the fiscal year of the society, says: "We are not in debt, for, if the $600 we lack cannot be raised by our friends for us, I and my faithful but ill-paid workers will make it up ourselves." One would think, in view of the importance and evident value of the work, that what money it needs for it might be confidently expected. But instead of that, so great is the present debt of the Association, there is danger of still further reduction unless generous friends interpose soon.

REPORT ON INDIAN WORK.

By Rev. Nehemiah Boynton, Chairman.

The work of the American Missionary Association among the Indians the past year has been honest in effort, while handicapped in resources; the workers have with untiring fidelity prosecuted their arduous toils, and if discouragement has been felt because of inforced retrenchment, it has not been permitted to affect in any instance either loyalty to the Society or its work.

Our first word is of admiration for secretaries, missionaries and teachers, who have held intact the remnants of our Indian work. There is but one difficulty with our Indian work, and that is money. At the annual meeting held at Hartford October, 1892, government aid, which for years had been accepted, was declined. This spasm in conscience was followed by no corresponding spasm in contribution, and so, however wise and just and patriotic that action may have been, it left the sum of $22,000 each year to be provided from our treasury. The Association was unable to provide from current receipts this entire sum, but did provide each year $12,000. Two results immediately followed: first, the Indian work was cut to the extent of $16,000 annually; second, the burdens of the Association were increased $12,000 annually, so that it is fair to state that $25,000 of our $96,000 debt has accrued because of extra responsibilities laid upon us by the Hartford meeting, with no corresponding fund with which to meet them.

This enforced retrenchment affected most seriously our central schools. We have 280 less pupils than in 1893. We are obliged to clothe and feed, as well as instruct our pupils, for they have nothing themselves. Hitherto the government has done this. Since we are obliged to receive fewer pupils greater care is taken in selection, and so we work upon the very choicest material, but still hearts cannot help aching when, as for example, at Santee a whole building had to be closed and twenty-two boys turned away. Thirty per cent. of the total number of pupils have been sent away from these Indian schools during the past three years because there were not sufficient funds to conduct them. Dr. Riggs recently testified that probably not five per cent. of these pupils found opportunity to secure Christian education elsewhere.

While thus our central schools suffer, we are grateful to report an advance in outstation work. Through these stations twenty tribes and probably 50,000 persons are in some way touched each year; we also note with pleasure that the hospital at Fort Yates, closed for a year for lack of funds, is about to be opened, the money being largely provided by friends of other communions than our own. The treasury of the American Missionary Association is not drawn upon for this blessed work, which in the last year of its operation cared for forty inside and 1,500 out-patients.

We have two more churches and 150 more members than in 1893.

It should be thoroughly understood that the Association has no invested funds, the income of which can be used for Indian work; the only way our work is aided is by current receipts. Therefore it is that we earnestly and emphatically urge upon all friends of the Indian the privilege in this jubilee year of replenishing our impoverished treasury, that this work may be no further curtailed, but that, provided with necessary support, our missionaries, brave and loyal souls that they are, may hasten, with the good cheer of our sympathy expressed in cash, along their sacrificial way.

REPORT ON EDUCATIONAL WORK IN THE SOUTH.

BY PRES. W. G. BALLANTINE, CHAIRMAN.

The educational work of this Association in the South is laid out on a most judicious and comprehensive plan. It contemplates the maintaining of institutions of learning of high grade at strategic centers and the preparation of men and women who may be leaders of social, political and religious thought and life. The assumption is that the Negro can appropriate and use the best culture that the world has to give, and that the most important thing for any people is to have capable leaders raised up from among themselves.

Industrial training is not neglected. On the contrary, it is vigorously promoted and is regarded as an invaluable adjunct. Schools of intermediate and primary grade are also conducted. But it is clearly recognized that the highest function of the Association is the education of leaders who shall be personally examples of culture and of intellectual and moral dignity in their several communities.

There are six chartered institutions and thirty-nine normal and graded schools, located after most careful study of the whole map and designed to place within reach of aspiring young men and women in every region the opportunity for preparation as teachers or preachers of the gospel. From these every year go forth hundreds to exercise an elevating influence which is immeasurable. From Fisk University alone more than twelve thousand students are now scattered over the land.

The work among the two and a half millions of Highlanders is no less interesting and important than that among the Negroes. These are people who, while they had no slaves, felt to the full the blight of slavery. They were insulated and their moral and intellectual life was suffocated by it. Of a noble stock, of patriotic principles, in a situation which should make them physically and mentally of the best, they appeal to us most strongly to bring them again into touch with the vital forces of the age.

Thus from the mountains and the lowlands of the South comes an appeal which we as patriots and as Christians cannot but feel as we feel no other. These men are our fellow countrymen, our near neighbors, linked to us in a common national destiny, sufferers from the baneful consequences of a common national crime. They are the most eager for help of all the subjects for missionary effort. Work for them promises larger and quicker returns than any other missionary work.

We are sorry that the financial pressure of the times has been felt in these schools. Their work is already on so economical a basis and the necessity for it is so urgent that it would seem that our churches and Christian contributors might have found it possible to keep up their modest stream of support, and to have economized in other directions. But with the revival of prosperity it is confidently hoped that retrenchment will be ended and that advance may be renewed.

In view of the age of our chartered institutions and what they have already accomplished we venture to suggest that the Association take such steps as in its judgment seem wise to secure their speedy endowment.

It is a gratifying feature of the work to observe the increased self-respect with which the educated leaders take up their work among their own people. It is only through such leaders that the principles of patriotism can be properly taught and the rights of citizenship claimed and permanently maintained. In our judgment no institution is doing more to prevent the practical disfranchisement of the Negroes than the American Missionary Association.

THE REPORT ON CHURCH WORK.

BY REV. HENRY MARTYN LADD, CHAIRMAN.

Many times in past years have the committees on the church work of the American Missionary Association called for a larger development of that work. At the annual meeting of the Association held at Cleveland in 1891, special emphasis was laid upon this matter, and the Executive Committee were urged to "continue their efforts to bring all the churches, as rapidly as possible, to a condition of independence, both for financial support and for control of their own spiritual work." Since that time a very decided and rapid advance has been made, both in the enlargement of the church work and in bringing churches to self-support.

During the past year especially the efforts made in these directions have been crowned with the most gratifying success.

In the one State of North Carolina alone the Association has this last year organized more churches than it had organized all through the whole South during any one of the preceding ten years. This advance is the more encouraging when it is remembered that it has been made in the face of financial difficulties that have seriously hindered the work in almost every other direction. Thirty-six colored churches, and six mountain churches, a total of forty-two new churches in one year, is a record of earnest work, divinely favored, which is full of inspiration and hopefulness, and which calls for profound gratitude and more generous giving.

The first mountain church to assume self-support is the one at Whittier, N. C., which with heroic self-sacrifice has bravely taken upon itself that responsibility this year, while other mountain churches are struggling in various ways to help themselves. Among the colored people a number of churches have come to independence, and others are making most strenuous efforts in this direction in hearty response to urgent appeals. These efforts at self-support, however, have not by any means resulted in a relief to the over-drawn treasury of the Association. They have only made it possible to dole out a little scant help to those other churches whose necessities have seemed more imperative.

The most surprising and the most encouraging feature of the work in the South has been the apparently spontaneous generation of churches of our order among a people and under conditions where such a development would be least expected. The genesis of these churches is not only remarkable; it is significant. Science may know nothing of spontaneous generation as a fact, but it is evident that Congregationalism does. The theory that the New Testament polity is not adapted to certain classes and conditions of men, if it were not disproved long ago, is thoroughly exploded now. The "Free Churches" of Georgia and the Carolinas, like our free Pilgrim churches of the North, have attained their freedom solely by the truth. They have sought out no "ism" of polity, but revolting against ecclesiastical oppression in some instances, and an unworthy ministry in others, they have declared for the simple principles dear to our own hearts, and have awakened to the fact that they belong to our Congregational sisterhood. The new movement in Georgia is most interesting as illustrating how our polity springs into being, not only among the cultured and intellectual Anglo-Saxons of New England, but even among the ignorant and despised Negroes of the Black Belt as well, when once they are thoroughly possessed of the New Testament spirit. It would seem as though equality, freedom, fellowship, are as dear to the Puritan in Black as they were to the Puritan in White. Through his unaided study of the Bible he has discovered for himself at last these cardinal principles of simple church life. Well may he give the name "Eureka" to the first church thus brought into being, for he has found what some of his more highly favored white brethren have taken even longer to discover—the essential principles of a Congregational church. These new churches are a distinct gain, and they bring with them a large membership thoroughly aroused and full of determination.

The gain in the older churches is also gratifying, both in the number of members and in the sterling quality of their piety. The emotional element is so strongly characteristic of the religious life of the colored race, in its ignorance and superstition, that our wise workers at the South have sought to lay broad and deep the immovable foundations of Christly character, and through their schools which are churches, and their churches which are schools, to educate an intelligent faith and develop a reasonable Christianity. The evils attendant on mere camp-meeting excitement at the North are necessarily increased a hundredfold at the South. The relation, therefore, between character and religion is one of the first lessons this Association is called upon to teach. Through its schools and colleges it has made a reliable religion possible. It might each year show an increase of membership by thousands if it did not insist upon genuine conversion, pure life, and intelligent faith. The gain, therefore, of 1,425 new members in these churches during the past year means a substantial growth and a true religious activity. Genuine revivals of great interest and power, under the gracious influence of the Divine Spirit, have the past year blessed many of the schools and churches under the care of the Association.

The remarkable progress of the church work among the mountain whites, or "American Highlanders," resulting in six, as reported, but really eight new churches and a rapidly increasing membership, has been peculiarly gratifying. A gain in membership of over 50 per cent. in three years, out of a population which remains practically stationary, unaffected by booming towns and crowding settlers, is probably unparalleled in any other section of our country. Here, too, the social and intellectual progress, introduced and fostered by the schools of the American Missionary Association demands churches, and churches of a vastly better type than any that have existed heretofore.

The beneficent results of this marked advance in all the church work of the Association are sure to be felt in more ways than one. It means an increased interest and response from the churches which are supporting this work. It means a better foundation and supply for the varied educational work the Association is already doing. It means an easier solution in the end of the most difficult of all race problems. It means also an advanced and enlarged adaptation of the various Christian agencies in use by this Association. In the providence of God the development of method and plan under the most peculiar exigencies of history has given this Association a unique place among the forces in the field. Out of the subsoiling of much preliminary and elementary work there has sprung at last into clearer prominence and larger promise the tree of God's own planting, the Christian Church. Here is something to show for the patient work already done. Educated and refined young people coming from our Christian schools will not longer put up with the old order of things in church life and work. A demand has been created for something better. The more rapidly now that these Christian churches can be multiplied, the more surely and speedily is society in all its varied aspects, intellectually, socially, morally, to be quickened, purified, and saved. While, therefore, the Association has been, and for some time to come must necessarily continue to be, very largely an educational society, it is also even now, and is to be increasingly in the future, a home missionary society for the planting and sustaining of churches of our order. The present great advance already calls for new advances. This the Executive Committee wisely foresee, and even in these stringent times have already made special appropriations, though at the cost of other interests, for this new and promising church work. It is an opportunity not to be neglected, for, while the past year has been conspicuous for great advancement in this work, and some of the incidents of it, as the first mountain church coming to self-support, the ordination of the first Chinaman as a Congregational minister, the spontaneous development of the Congregational idea in the "black belt," and the largest accession of churches and new members in many years, yet the opportunity still waiting for enlarged work in the immediate future was never so great. Doors are everywhere open to aggressive work for Christ and His Church.

The committee desire, therefore, with profound gratitude to God, to place on record their hearty appreciation of the earnest work in this direction which the Association has been enabled to accomplish during the past year. They would also, in the name of all our churches, urge the Executive Committee, the officers and the missionaries of this Association to give even larger prominence to this growing department of their work by every means at their command. Finally, in view of the inspiring facts and the increasing importance of this branch of the work, the committee appeal with renewed confidence to the members of all our churches, as Christians and as patriots, to come to the help of this new work with their sympathy, their prayers and their generous aid as they have never done before.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON FINANCE.

BY GEN. AUGUSTUS GAYLORD, CHAIRMAN.

The Finance Committee appointed at the meeting of the Association held at Lowell in October of last year have to report that in the performance of the duties put upon them, they visited the office of the Treasurer of the Association and by him were given free access to all the books and papers needed for their examination. The members of the committee present were Augustus Gaylord, D. C. Tiebout and Joseph Van Vleck, the other two members of the committee being unable to be present. In addition to furnishing the committee with the books and papers, the Treasurer also was present in person and gave to the committee all the explanations that were needed to aid them to a ready and complete understanding of the routine in his office.

Generally speaking, it may be said that the forms adopted for keeping the Treasurer's accounts are exceedingly satisfactory, and that it would be difficult to make them clearer or more complete. The books are kept by double entry, are well and clearly arranged, and are as simple as the character of the items to be recorded will permit.

In the cash book are entered daily all receipts and disbursements of moneys, accompanied by whatever explanations are needed for their complete understanding. These transactions are, in due course, journalized and carried into the ledger.

Moneys received are deposited in banks approved by the Executive Committee, and cannot be withdrawn therefrom except upon checks signed by two of the officers of the Association. Monthly statements of receipts and disbursements are prepared by the Treasurer, and, after approval by a member of the Committee on Finance, are presented to the Executive Committee. Quarterly examinations of all receipts and disbursements, including an examination of the vouchers and the checks drawn in payment thereof, are made by auditors elected annually by the Association, and certificates as to these examinations are duly signed by the auditors upon the Treasurer's books.

All securities representing investments held by the Association are kept in a safe deposit vault which is only accessible to the Treasurer when accompanied by another officer of the Association, two keys being required for that purpose and one being in the custody of each.

Real estate books are kept, in which all real property held by the Association is shown and particulars recorded of the date of its receipt, the source from which it was derived, whether by purchase or by legacy, and if by purchase, the cost These books also contain a record of the expenses attending each piece of property and the income derived therefrom. Records of legacies and trust funds are kept complete, and so plainly that the condition of each fund is clearly shown.

The accounts of the Daniel Hand Fund are kept separately, in books specially devoted to that purpose, and the income derived therefrom is kept in a separate bank account. As in the case of the Daniel Hand Fund, so in the case of all other trusts, the accounts are so kept as to show the character of each, the revenue derived therefrom, and the conditions accompanying the trust, if any there be. Further, all the property accounts, certificates of stocks, bonds, and other securities held by the Association, and the investments of the several funds, are subject to careful examinations by the auditors, who make annual report that they correspond with the Treasurer's balance sheet and with the accounts therewith on his books.

We do not know of any institution or business, corporate or otherwise, which is more frequently or more carefully audited, and in our opinion it would be difficult to improve upon the system now in use. In all that relates to its treasury and the custody of its moneys and its securities, and to the safeguards attached to its operations, we believe that the methods practiced by the officers of the Association are worthy of high commendation and approval.

An inspection of the Treasurer's Annual Report shows that on September 30,

1894, there was a debt of		$66,360.97
During the year past there has been Expended	$337,334.00
Collected	307,547.16
Showing a deficiency for the year of		29,786.84
Leaving on Sept. 30, 1895, a debt of		96,147.81

This is not the debt of a single year, but represents a period of three years.

During the past year	$29,786.84
" the previous year	21,332.86
		$96,147.81

In this connection it may be noted that during the past two years the Association has received nothing from the United States Government for the subsistence of Indian pupils, while during the previous two years $48,313.43 was received from that source.

The above figures do not include the income from the Daniel Hand Fund, which must be expended under the conditions mentioned in the deed of trust, and cannot be applied toward the payment of the debt of the Association nor to meet the obligations of the churches.

The conservative management of the affairs of the Association deserves commendation. The decreased receipts made it necessary for the Executive Committee to make reduction in the appropriations during the past two years of about $50,000. Still further reductions and great disaster to the work will be necessary unless the churches rally with renewed effort to the support of the work.

The year upon which the Association is now entering is the Jubilee year of its history, and the committee recommends that the sum of $500,000 be raised for this Jubilee year. This means the doubling of the contributions from each church, Sabbath School, Christian Endeavor Society, Woman's Missionary Society and individuals and a liberal offering from the churches, societies and individuals that made no contribution this last year. Will not the friends of the work rally to do their part in securing this $500,000, and thus enable the Association to report at its Jubilee Anniversary the payment of all obligations on the year and on previous years, and to enter upon the second half century free from debt?

FORTY-NINTH ANNUAL REPORT

OF THE

FOR THE YEAR ENDING SEPTEMBER 30, 1895.

GENERAL SURVEY.

THE SOUTH—EDUCATIONAL WORK.

Our work reaches peoples emerging from barbarism, for the most part ignorant, and, except for what Christ may bring to them through his disciples, without hope in the world.

Our educational work began with elementary teaching. The little schools of our early days have gradually passed into institutions more permanent and into larger and more far-reaching influences. In the development which came from the necessities as they appeared we soon realized that no missionary society could provide sufficient educational privileges for the masses, which numbered millions. It was also evident they must be put in the way of self-help and self-education. Hence came our general policy to teach and train teachers who should be constantly instructed in Christian truth and be under the power of Christian influences in order to go forth to their race as Christian teachers, Christian preachers and Christian leaders.

The experience of other educators in this work has confirmed our own that in the long run, and in the large view, this is the speediest and most effective way to save and permanently uplift the masses of those who are low down.

COLLEGES.

Hence in six of the States of the South we have planted and cherished schools for the higher education; not that all who attend should pursue advanced studies, but that the relative few who should have sufficient promise in themselves and courage for the struggle might have the opportunity to prepare themselves to accelerate our work of salvation with some worthy knowledge of the needs of needy people and how to meet these needs.

As the race has gained and developed over well-nigh insuperable obstacles these schools have gained and developed with more generous courses of study and with increased facilities for building young men and young women with strong and stable characters. What were named colleges in anticipation of the possible future have come to have their college courses for the few selected ones who are able to take advanced studies, while normal and preparatory grades remain for the greater number.

TILLOTSON COLLEGE. One of these higher institutions of learning is Tillotson College, located in Austin, Texas. Under the name of Tillotson Institute this school has furnished students from all parts of this immense State, with its half million of colored people, and from remote Mexico, not only an opportunity to acquire a thorough practical school education, but also a more extended course for such as could find a way, or make one to procure it. The last year at Tillotson was one of prosperity. At the close of the year but one student remained in the boarding department who had not professed Christ. There are few places in the empire of Texas where this institution has not become known through its pupils, or through teachers who have received education within its walls. Tillotson is far away from its Northern friends, but we hope it is not beyond the reach of many Christian prayers and much Christian sympathy.

STRAIGHT UNIVERSITY AT NEW ORLEANS, LA., which has begun its second quarter of a century, also reports a year of great prosperity in thorough and earnest study and mental training. The president writes: "In no previous year have I known so excellent a spirit of study and goodwill. The attendance in the higher grades has been larger than before notwithstanding the hard times." The number of pupils in all departments during the year was 576, representing students from seven different States. The bequest, amounting to over $5,800, to the University by the late Thomas Lafon is the most notable gift from a colored man to any of the chartered institutions of the American Missionary Association.

TOUGALOO UNIVERSITY IN MISSISSIPPI is an institution of great usefulness, doing essentially similar work with our other schools, while at the same time it is strongly individualized. This is emphatically the Black Belt plantation school of the Association, located in the country in the midst of America's darkest Africa, touching by far that most numerous and important class on which the future of the negroes mainly rests—the plantation negroes. It draws its students from a wide area and sends its trained teachers and graduates to a region wider.

The University began twenty-five years ago as a small primary school, rather intermittent in character, under the care of a lady teacher, the daughter of the manager of a plantation. A former teacher now living in Wisconsin, and who still is in possession of his commission under the American Missionary Association, dated October, 1870, writes us recalling the time he spent in this dark wilderness a quarter of a century ago, and contrasts the denseness of the surrounding region and the ignorance of the masses with the present degree of intelligence and advancement in material prosperity. Then there was only one building, surrounded by primitive negro cabins. Now, beautifully located in nearly the center of a tract of land of five hundred acres, there is an institution with ten buildings, twenty-five teachers and four hundred pupils. The extreme darkness, poverty and profligacy of the people then and the present evidences of enlightened prosperity afford an object lesson which commends in the strongest light the work of the American Missionary Association. Its achievement in the transformation of the whole region amply repays for all the efforts and sacrifices of twenty-five years.

TALLADEGA COLLEGE IN ALABAMA celebrated its twenty-eighth anniversary this year, and the fruitage of our planting in Tougaloo is paralleled with emphasis in Talladega. Its achievement in lifting up from poverty, ignorance and vice the people in the country which surrounds it would justify all the promises made to the North in its behalf and all the sacrifices endured by those who have gone out into the South in their name for the past twenty-eight years.

FISK UNIVERSITY, NASHVILLE, TENN.—The thirtieth anniversary of Fisk University occurred this year. Here a wonderful record for the education of the negro has been made in these thirty years of service. Besides the large number of faithful teachers who have served from time to time, there are President Cravath, who has given twenty years, and several professors who have given twenty-five years of continuous service to the cause. Professor Bennett, who has lately been taken from the institution by death, served twenty-seven years; Professor Morgan has served twenty-six; Professor Spence has just completed twenty-five years, and Professor Chase, twenty-three years. Beginning with nothing but barracks, the advancement has been steady, both in outward appointments and in educational standards, until more than three hundred graduates from the college and normal departments have been sent out with the leaven of Christian life and with the power of educated Christian leaders. More than twelve thousand students of Fisk University are scattered over this land in the work of uplifting their race.

NORMAL AND GRADED SCHOOLS.

Next to these institutions offering higher privileges are our normal schools, so called. They are thirty-nine in number. Some of them are larger and more fully developed than others, but they are instinct alike with the same purposes and have similar courses of study. Thirty-nine of these normal and graded schools, in eight different Southern States, are taking children from the kindergarten and primary grades through the intermediate, grammar and normal courses of instruction, and are supplying hundreds of teachers every year for tens of thousands in the needy little schools in rural communities. In this way we are reaching the masses most economically and effectively, multiplying teachers from the race for the race, teachers who have been taught and trained for considerable periods of time and who have been faithfully taught also what we understand the Christian life to be in faith and practice. These go forth, in the public and other schools, where Northern teachers could not go as they do and could not do as they do, and their work, though unconspicuous and lowly, is great in fruitage and in power.

One normal school—that of Orange Park—may call for special notice. The facts concerning it are quite well known. It has been made an object of a determined attack by the State Superintendent of Public Instruction, who has influenced the enactment of laws which make it a criminal offense not only to allow a white student in the same school, but also for a white teacher to be boarded under the same roof with colored pupils. This law is so vicious in intent and so significant in its purpose that, after legal opinions of eminent counsel, our Committee have found no other way but to test its validity; not in a spirit of disobedience to law, but with a determination to have the deliverance of the highest possible authority upon a law which we consider unchristian.

INDUSTRIAL TRAINING.

Industrial training is an important feature in all of our missionary work. We realize that not all can be teachers and preachers; some have an equal call to be mechanics, house builders, home builders, workers in practical activities. Hence, from the beginning we have used the industries as an auxiliary agency for the making and elevating of character, and it is our purpose so to use this that it shall be a positive contribution to spiritual power, and thus a legitimately wise missionary method. We feel it to be a part of our mission to teach a respect for labor and to dignify work, and that secular duties can be sacred duties. The following industries are taught in our schools: Shoemaking, carpentry, printing, tinning, cabinet-making, wagon-making, blacksmithing, sewing, cutting, nursing, etc., etc. The first industrial training departments in the schools among the negroes were begun by the Association in its schools, and in all of our institutions the preparations for practical life are considered as a part of Christianity, and are something which may be used to build up life and exalt character so as to fit one to honor Christ in daily duties.

COMMON SCHOOLS.

Along with the development of the larger and more central schools we are obliged by peculiar demands, and for reasons which we cannot overcome, to maintain certain common and elementary schools. Such schools are now coming to be chiefly cared for—after a fashion—by the respective States. The instruction in these rural public schools is necessarily inadequate, as in many cases the children have no appropriate school facilities or appointments and have eight or nine months to forget what they tried to learn in three or four. But these poor people that are out of the way, who are by far the great majority, through sheer eagerness to know, do learn something and often are stimulated to find their way out of the places of darkness to our larger schools. Where we are planting churches, and in some places where multitudes of children would be left without any instruction, we have planted our common schools with two or three Christian teachers to keep each other company and to unite their faith and work. More than a score of these rural schools are recruiting places on the part of our Northern teachers for bright and promising boys and girls to be sent to our boarding schools whence they take back to their poor homes and poor parents many lessons of a different and better life.

THEOLOGICAL SCHOOLS.

Our theological schools are at Straight University, New Orleans, La.; Tougaloo University in Mississippi; Talladega College in Alabama; Fisk University at Nashville, Tenn., and Howard University at Washington, D. C. They together report 91 students. Our experience is that students who are trained in our higher institutions and then faithfully instructed in these theological schools in the South make the most tactful, earnest, patient and successful pastors for our church work in the South. They are gradually replacing the ignorant or half equipped pastors who cannot build up others because they need to be built up themselves.

MOUNTAIN SCHOOLS.

Schools	17
Enrollment	2,084

The educational work in the mountains for the past year presents some peculiar and exceptional features. The hard times that pinched our treasury compelled us to close three of our mountain schools. The loss of the opportunity for the education of their children aroused the mountaineers with a new sense of its importance. Most urgent appeals came from these neglected localities, and in response to these appeals funds reached the Association's treasury. A small appropriation was granted to one of these mountain schools, the people with great sacrifice contributing of their own means more largely than ever. This school was opened with two teachers, and the enrollment at once bounded up to 117, and might have reached almost any number provided the two teachers, who were all that could be sent, could furnish instruction.

In another case a school was given up and the people rallied, employing their own teacher, the Association contributing only the use of the church building for school purposes.

In still another case in which it was impossible to continue the appropriation the mountain people, under the counsel and suggestion of the secretaries of the Association, elected a teacher, provided him with a house at their own expense, and are supporting the school. These are certainly significant facts when we remember in how little esteem education was held among the mountaineers a few years ago, and their great poverty during these hard times.

Another significant fact in the school work among these Highlanders last year is the increasing enrollment of pupils. Although there is one less school, the number being seventeen instead of eighteen, as in 1894, the enrollment has increased by nearly a hundred pupils. It must be borne in mind that the grading and classification is increasingly strict from year to year. Principals and teachers trained in the best normal methods of the North are appointed by the Association, and are exacting and careful. The harder conditions that are very properly adopted year by year have not decreased the number of pupils, but, as we see, there is actual increase.

This advancement in the character of the work affects schools as well as individual pupils. Three mountain schools have advanced from the class of common schools to that of normal and graded during the year. These are Whittier Normal and High School, North Carolina; Black Mountain Academy, Evarts, Ky.; Big Creek Gap Academy, Tennessee. There is no college for these Highland lads and lassies, although such an institute is greatly needed. These institutes and academies, however, are constantly advancing in grade so as to meet the progress and intellectual necessities of the pupils who are developing so rapidly.

Nearly one hundred and fifty pupils went out from the normal grades of our mountain schools last year as teachers. The testimony of State and county superintendents to the excellent examination which these A. M. A. pupils bore and their success as teachers is abundant. These mountain young men and women are carrying the spirit of aggressive Christianity with them as they go out from our schools to distant districts and hamlets, upon whatever lines of work they may enter.

Individual cases of great interest occur. One teacher who went from one of our schools with earnest, Christian principles and conviction opened his school with prayer. He was said to be the first teacher who had ever held religious service in that school. Another student from one of our institutes who became a district school teacher found time in connection with his many school duties to organize an Endeavor Society.

In this limited space it is impossible to speak particularly of each school and yet each presents peculiar and interesting features.

At Grand View, Tenn., Prof. Henry W. Webb, a graduate of Andover Seminary, of the class of '95, has been appointed principal and has taken up his work in this important position. A tract of four acres of land and a building have been contributed by the people of Grand View to meet the growing necessities of this school.

Prof. Albert Luethi has taken charge of the work at Harrow School, Cumberland Gap, Tenn., as its principal the coming year. Everything promises large success.

At Evarts, Ky., the new building, toward the erection of which the mountaineers contributed more than five hundred dollars, is completed and occupied.

In connection with Williamsburg Academy there is a printing department. It is a means of industrial instruction, and during the past year the job work done by the students has been a source of income to the school.

In a recent letter received from one of our schools is the following: "Everything goes on all right with us here. The prospects for school I think are good. I have to turn students away every day, I mean such as are not able to pay their own way. Mothers begging for daughters, fathers praying for sons." This condition is typical of the educational work throughout the mountains. Here is an open door for work that will affect and bless multitudes of neglected people in the very heart of our country and be a potential factor in the intellectual and spiritual redemption of our nation. All that is needed is more money consecrated to the service of the Lord to be used to multiply these Christian schools among our American Highlanders.

The severity of our retrenchments in the South, both lowland and highland, is somewhat indicated by the reduced number of schools reported, but has been felt in every school in lessened support for teachers and aid for students.

CHURCH WORK.

The past year has been one of remarkable development and progress in this work. The total number of new churches organized in our various mission fields of the South and the West during the year is forty-two with over a thousand members. This is a larger number than has been reported at any annual meeting for many years.

In the South, particularly in the Carolinas and in Georgia, have there arisen significant movements in the establishment by the people of "free churches," as they call them, which are Congregational in faith and polity and have received recognition and fellowship from the councils and associations of the churches. In some cases these movements were protests against the usurpations and oppressions of centralized church governments. They were not unlike the resistance of our Puritan ancestors to the prelacy, when they vindicated their right to "a church without a bishop and a state without a king." In some cases the people revolted against the placing over them of ministers whose dispositions or characters were not approved.

A most interesting movement has taken place in Georgia resulting in the establishment of a number of mission churches or church missions. An earnest minister, who had educated himself almost entirely from his Bible, found that he could not longer endure the common corruptions and abuses which environed him and declared himself free from any further complicity with them. He devoted himself entirely to mission work among the poorest people of the back districts. He had no means, and they, although their deep poverty abounded unto the riches of their liberality, could furnish but little support. But he went forward in faith, and gathered circles of missions in three different counties. He drew up a simple confession of faith and form of polity for these free churches. It emphasized the fundamental truths of our evangelical Christianity, the independency of the local church and the obligations of fellowship among the churches. It arose, he said, out of his study of the Bible and his own convictions of the rights and needs of the people. When he came to confer with a friend, the pastor of one of our mission churches, he found that he was establishing practically Congregational churches. In his joy he named his first church Eureka, to mark his discovery of the New Testament church polity, with its equality, freedom and fellowship. These little churches are worshiping as best they can, without shelter and without means. In some places they have put up brush arbors in the forests, and are using these booths for churches. In others, they have secured old dilapidated cabins or abandoned school houses. Not one of them has yet a real church home. These churches, at the request of their leader, were visited by our Field Missionary, Rev. George W. Moore. Mr. Moore reports the movement to be hearty and spontaneous. At some of the stations he met people who had come from five to twenty miles to hear about the Free Church way. The assistant pastors are devoted and self-denying men One of them, a man sixty years old, walks thirty-four miles to fill one of his appointments. "The people and ministers at all these points," says Mr. Moore, "are thoroughly aroused and determined to go forward. They gladly take to our polity, and, under wise direction, can be trained in it and become a blessing to their communities. The more I have seen of this work in the back country the more I am impressed with its importance and promise. Some of these people remind me of the Pilgrim fathers in their struggle for religious freedom. There is deep need for just such mission work throughout the vast negro country population of the South." All these Georgia churches have made application and been duly welcomed into the Congregational fellowship of the Georgia Association, organized in 1878.

At the same time with the new movements in the Carolinas and Georgia, work has been carried on with earnestness and fidelity in the other mission fields. The total additions to our church membership in our various fields South and West during the year are 1,425. Revivals of interest and power are reported from the churches at Fisk University, Tennessee ; Straight University, and other churches in Louisiana; Louisville, Ky.; Nashville, Tenn.; Macon, Ga.; Washington, D. C.; Thibodeaux, La.; Abbeville, La.; New Iberia, La.; Paris, Texas, and many other places. Hopeful reports have come in from the various State associations. Some churches have come to self-support, and many others are making increased efforts in this direction.

The Executive Committee have sought to awaken an enthusiasm for self-government as well as self-support and have aimed to bring the churches forward as rapidly as possible to a condition of independence both in financial support and in the control of their own spiritual work. The response of many of the churches to this endeavor has been instant and cordial and to the utmost stretch of their ability.

There is a danger in all home mission work, North and South, that churches may subside in a permanently dependent condition and regard the mission aid as a settled fund of assistance. To obviate this tendency as well as to encourage the weaker churches and enlarge the support of pastors, the committee have utilized to some extent a plan of proportioning the mission aid to the church to the pastoral support raised by the people, varying the ratio according to the conditions of each case. The committee have given careful consideration to the problems of these widely diversified church mission fields and have withdrawn such aid as in their judgment could be dispensed with by any church without permanent loss of efficiency.

It must, however, be remembered that the peculiarly depressed and necessitous conditions of the churches aided by the Association have demanded a total amount of aid much beyond the means intrusted to the Association. Usually the lessening of aid to any one church has been that it may be afforded in some scant measure to another whose need is more imperative.

MOUNTAIN CHURCHES.

The statistics of mountain churches are included in the later pages of this report. There has been a gain in the mountain church work during the year. The number of churches has been increased so that now there are fifty-one Congregational churches in the mountains. Six new churches have been added during the year. During this year of Triennial Council it seems natural to include a period of three years in our comparison. 1893 was a year of exceptional growth among the mountain churches. We added to our list that year fourteen churches and largely increased our membership. But taking even this favorable year for the basis of comparison the statistics must prove very encouraging to the friends who are praying for and contributing to the progress of Christianity among these mountaineers. The forty-four churches of two years ago have increased to fifty-one. The increase of membership, however, has been much more remarkable. Three years ago there were a thousand members of our Congregational churches in the mountains, now there are fifteen hundred and twenty-one. We doubt if the statistics in any other part of the country will show a net increase of fifty per cent. during these three years.

It must be borne in mind that this mountain population is not affected by the establishment of new towns and the influx of immigrants. The increase in our church membership comes from the steady growth of larger views and better ideas. The old-time conditions of society, of politics, and the intense sectarianism of the old-time denominations are gradually giving way to that which is broader and freer. The rapid progress of Congregationalism is the evidence of intellectual and religious progress. The American Missionary Association is not fighting a battle for sect or name in the mountains, but our ministers and teachers are the heralds of a larger, broader and better life to the people.

Even the wise methods of our Northern ladies have been adopted in some of our mountain churches. The ladies of Williamsburg Congregational Church have compiled a mountain Cook Book which they are pressing upon the market that they may raise a fund for church work from the receipts. The ladies of Deer Lodge Congregational Church gave a dinner and raised a fund which they sent as a contribution to the Association. At Whittier, N. C., the members of the church, appreciating the straitened condition of the Association's treasury, have taken upon themselves the responsibility of their own support. This is the first mountain church to assume its own support and we herald it with joy. It means self-sacrifice on the part of people and of pastor, and doubtless somewhat pinching economy in his domestic affairs. But it is a most satisfactory evidence that the self-reliant and progressive spirit of Congregationalism has taken possession of the hearts of these mountaineers.

Letters come from pastors all over the field presenting new fields and imperative needs. One pastor writes: "I have just returned from a ten days' trip through parts of Georgia and South Carolina and North Carolina. Though the trip was hasty yet it revealed to me vast opportunities for aggressive work. Everywhere there seem to be open doors. Were money and men and women at my command I could within twelve months plant churches and schools in as many places. 'Truly the harvest is great, but the money is scarce.'"—(R. V.) Another letter bears the following testimony: "Both Island Ford and Clear Creek are important stations. Could the Association send a strong man or two into this country for good work to be accomplished for the Master?" Another pastor writes: "Not in six years (the period of his pastorate) has there been so large a door of usefulness open to our Association. Old lines are breaking down." From North Carolina the pastor whose congregations often number three hundred on a Sabbath or week day, writes as follows: "What new openings for preaching? More than I can fill." From the mountains of Tennessee comes the following encouraging and yet pitiful message: "In the past five years of my labors here I have not seen so much spiritual awakening in this county as I have seen the past month and this month. Special services have been held in our native school and church houses with marked results. Five years ago I would not have been asked to visit and assist in these services. I did not know the people and did not know how to reach them at that time, but to-day I receive invitations to assist in these big meetings and have complied, for it has been a pleasure to me to preach for the Master. A large number of persons have been converted. I rejoice at this marked acceptance of the servant of the A. M. A. as the servant of Jesus Christ. I have been just full of work this month, having a service almost every night."

If the Association could only respond to these urgent petitions and enter these open doors what a rich harvest could be gathered for the Kingdom of God. Our Congregational theological seminaries and the younger men in the ministry are stirred through and through with this mountain appeal and the necessities of this work. Andover Seminary has organized an "Andover Band for Mountain Work," and already three young men from that seminary have entered the field. Yale has its excellent representatives, as have Oberlin and Chicago. The laborers are not lacking for the gathering of this harvest on the mountains. It is only the lack of money to send them into the field, and pay them the small pittance of their support, which is all they ask, that makes it impossible to gather this abundant harvest.

REDUCED SUPPORT.

Remarkable and significant changes have taken place in the work of the American Missionary Association in its Indian Field during the past three years. In the first place the financial basis of the Indian work is radically changed. By the action at the annual meeting of the Association held at Hartford, Conn., October, 1892, all government appropriations have been declined by this Association. The accompanying table shows what this change involved.

	Pd. by A. M. A.	Pd. by U. S. Gov.	Total.
1892–93	$31,497.60	$26,383.06	$57,880.66
1893–94	43,546.69	.....	43,546.69
1894–95	41,406.85	.....	41,406.85

In 1891–92 and 1892–93 twenty-two thousand dollars in round numbers were received from the United States government for the support of Indian pupils in American Missionary Association schools. Since then not one cent has been received from this source for this purpose.

This loss of so large a fund has been disastrous in two respects.

In the first place, the appropriation by the Association from the current income was necessarily increased by about twelve thousand dollars. The amount appropriated with this large increase, however, was sixteen thousand dollars less than that which had been formerly expended, including the government fund. This was a loss of twenty-five per cent., and meant a pitiful retrenchment in the work.

INDIAN SCHOOLS AND MISSIONS.

The misfortune of retrenchment fell largest upon our central schools. Santee Normal Training School, one of the best Indian schools in America, enrolled in 1893 two hundred and forty-one pupils. In 1895 there were only one hundred and twenty-two. This was only typical of all the central schools. Thirty per cent. of the total number of pupils have been sent away from these Indian schools during the past three years because there were not sufficient funds to conduct them. Dr. Riggs recently testified that probably not five per cent. of these pupils found opportunity to secure Christian education elsewhere.

Unless the churches largely increase their contributions, still more serious sacrifice must come to the Indian work.

In the outstation work there has been healthful progress and development. These outstations usually represent a mission home occupied by a Christian Indian and his wife. In connection with this home is usually a school and a church, or perhaps a circuit of churches. A Christian home in the midst of an Indian village is an ideal object lesson. No permanent missionary work can be maintained by missionaries of a foreign race. This is emphatically true of the Indians. The religion of a pale face, like his dress, has no particular significance to the red man. But when the Christian civilization comes in the person of an Indian and his wife it appeals to all his fellow Indians.

The outstations of the American Missionary Association are situated in five different States, and reach probably not far from twenty tribes. Forty missionaries occupy these outstations. They doubtless come in contact with not far from fifty thousand Indians every year. It surely is a small bit of leaven in a great lump of human need, but God's blessing seems to be upon the work, and we may hope that the whole lump will be permeated with its saving influence.

During this triennial period the American Missionary Association has opened the new mission at Crow Agency, Montana. This mission was planted by funds contributed especially for that purpose. The Congregationalists are the only Protestant denomination doing work among these Indians, of whom there are twenty-one hundred, with the exception of a school under the direction of the Unitarians, but largely supported by government funds. The Crow Mission is under the charge of a devoted young man and his wife, and has proved very useful and promising, but suffers greatly for lack of funds.

Industrial training in the schools of the Association was introduced very early, and is an important feature. The following industries are taught in our Indian schools: Shoemaking, blacksmithing, carpentering, printing, tinning, sewing, nursing.

The hospital at Ft. Yates, N. D., which has been closed for several months, through the lack of funds, is soon to be opened, as special contributions have been received for this purpose. The physician in charge of this hospital, a Christian woman thoroughly trained for her work, reported during the last year that it was open that she had received forty patients in the hospital wards, and had professionally visited between twelve and fifteen hundred Indians in their tepees and cabins.

To sum up, these three years in the Indian field of the Association present the following conditions:

First, the central missions and schools have suffered in numbers and efficiency of work from the lack of adequate funds. There has been improvement in quality of pupils because of careful selection, when many must be turned away.

Secondly, the outstation work of the Association has been especially promising and encouraging. The prevalence of the gospel of Jesus Christ reaching the Indians in their homes and tepees is proving, as it always does, the power of God unto salvation to the red man, as it is to his pale faced brother. This is the work the Association is doing in the name of the Congregational churches in this great Indian field.

ALASKA.

Last year Mr. and Mrs. Lopp resumed their work as our missionaries at Cape Prince of Wales, Alaska. The year has been the most prosperous and successful which has been experienced in our Arctic work. The enrollment in the schools was 142 and the average attendance 108—a very favorable showing. Mrs. Lopp has also conducted private classes of advanced pupils and has taught the girls in knitting and sewing.

The herd of reindeer now numbers 174, an increase of 74. No difficulty has been experienced in their management.

Early in the winter the natives became much interested in religion. On invitation a teacher and two interpreters came from the Swedish Evangelical Mission on North Sound and religious services were held in the school house in the daytime and also in the evening. In a few weeks, a sufficient number gave evidence of conversion to God to call for a Sunday afternoon prayer-meeting. Many of them came to know from experience in their own hearts that God can answer the prayer of a poor Eskimo Indian.

Cape Prince of Wales being the metropolis for Arctic Alaska, our missionaries have frequent opportunities to tell the "Old Story" to many visiting natives. Mr. Lopp made sled journeys to the homes to which the converts had returned, and found them observing Sunday and anxious to be taught more about Jesus

Mr. and Mrs. Lopp have returned to their homes in the States, where they will remain for the year. Want of funds prevents the Association from sending missionaries to Alaska this year, but the Government has sent teachers to Cape Prince of Wales at its own expense and under its control. Mr. Lopp saw them before he started for home, and writes: "I am well pleased with them, and feel confident they will be successful." The Association does not intend to abandon the mission, and hopes that money may come in so as to warrant the renewal of the work there next year.

THE CHINESE.

Dr. Pond writes thus: "The new year of our Chinese Mission opened cloudily. We had passed through three months of close and anxious questioning about ways and means; most of the teachers and helpers had received no salary for from one to three months. Hard times had been crowding our Chinese out of employment. Families in which they had served felt compelled to do without them. They were moving to and fro, with less inclination to study, or, possibly, to listen to the word of life, than in the days when plenty of hard work left them weary in frame, but not heartsore. At any rate—for these reasons or for others—the reports for September were, on the whole, less cheering, I think, than any I had ever received; but now, with the October reports all at hand, we find the clouds breaking away and have 'sunshine in our souls.'"

The sunshine was found in the enlarged number of the members of the Christian Endeavor Societies, their active and spiritual meetings and in the conversion of souls.

Street preaching is no new feature in this Chinese work, but it has been carried forward recently more regularly and with more careful preparation. Loo Quong writing of one of these services says: "It was a beautiful sight to see the great big crowd of interesting faces to hear us sing the songs of praise to Almighty God, and to hear the preaching of the sweet gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, who loves the Chinese as well as all mankind."

During the spring Dr. Pond made his annual visit among the missions and writes:

"It has been, on the whole, the most restful and delightful tour of this sort that I have ever taken; the blessed sunshine which has cheered all nature fitly symbolizing the comfort I have found in the condition and progress of our work."

On the 12th of May the 25th anniversary of the Sacramento Mission was celebrated. When it was established there was no other missionary work doing for the Chinese in that city. It originally consisted simply of a school which held its evening sessions in one of the smaller rooms in the basement of the Congregational church. Afterward a mission house was rented, the Chinese agreeing to provide a certain portion of the rent, and this has been occupied now, without change, for nearly seventeen years. For a little more than fifteen years Mrs. Carrington has been the responsible teacher here. More than a thousand Chinese have been brought under her genial but intense and unflinching discipline; her gospel instructions—the power of her Christian character. More than a hundred have given evidence of having passed from death unto life. At least twelve have gone from this mission to China or elsewhere doing Christian work.

The ordination of Jee Gam was solemnized in Bethany Congregational Church September 19. Mr. Jee Gam has been a faithful worker in our Chinese missions for twenty-five years. His Chinese converts wanted him to be ordained and petitioned Dr. Pond to that effect. He is the first Chinaman in the United States who has been made a minister of the Congregational Church. The services were largely attended and great satisfaction was shown in the examination of the candidate. Drs. Mooar, Pond and Brown participated in the services.

During the current year a new Chinese mission has been established by the Association at Salt Lake City, Utah. A superintendent has been appointed and the teachers are paid by the pupils. The work is prosperous and promising. There have been 21 pupils enrolled.

FINANCES.

The receipts for the current work for the year ending September 30 are as follows :

From churches, Sunday-schools, missionary societies and individuals	$163,490.05
Estates	81,194.49
Income	11,085.64
Income for Talladega College Erwin fund	4,000.00
Tuition	37,847.33
Slater fund	7,500.00
Sale of property	2,429.65
Total	$307,547.16

The payments for the current year have been $337,334. The debt on the year is $29,786.84. This amount added to the debt reported September 30, 1894, $66,360.97, makes the debt showing September 30, 1895, $96,147.81.

The financial experience of the Association during the past three years has been similar to that of other missionary societies sustained by the Congregational churches and that of the mission boards of other denominations. The missionary work so carefully and economically planned, giving so much promise of results, could not at once be cut off. The committee did not feel warranted in making severe and unwise reductions, because of temporary financial stringency, yet there has been considerable reduction. Two years ago the total expenditures for current work were $386,739.20; one year ago they were $361,802.66, and this last year they were $337,334—a reduction one year ago of $24,936.54, and last year of $24,468.66, making the expenditures last year $49,405.20 less than two years ago.

It should be remembered that the Association has not during the past two years received from the United States Government any appropriation for subsistence and clothing for Indian pupils. The appropriation heretofore received averaged about $22,000 a year. The churches in these two years have not generally increased their contributions to meet this deficit.

The commercial reports give a more hopeful financial outlook over the entire country. Surely the faith of God's people should not be less strong in his sustaining power and readiness to help them to supply the funds necessary to meet obligations and advance to greater prosperity his work for the elevation and salvation of the peoples for whom the Association specially labors.

The income from the Daniel Hand fund for the year is $45,274.74. This income is for special expenditure, according to the terms expressed in the deed of trust, for the work among the colored people in the South. The fund was not established nor the income designed or left free to do any work which the churches were doing or had planned to do for the education of the colored people. The Association has received during the year Endowment Funds to the amount of $4,810.

BUREAU OF WOMAN'S WORK.

As last year, so also this we are permitted to report an advance in contributions by women's societies. This with the increased demand for literature, the more frequent missionary meetings and evident care in preparation for them is the best possible testimony to the helpfulness of the women's State organizations, of which there are now forty-two. Through thirty-one of these State Unions, and by local societies contributing directly, our treasury has been aided to the amount of $25,338.61.

In addition to this, much assistance has been given in providing household supplies, for which in our large boarding schools and mission homes there is a continuous need. Four hundred and eighty-six barrels of clothing, literature and house linen have been sent during the year.

Missionary letters have been circulated as usual in response to contributions. Interest in the work has been quickened by lady speakers, including the secretary, for whom series of speaking appointments were made in several of the States.

The Christian Endeavor organization has also contributed $3,331.02 in aid of the work. We make grateful acknowledgement for this varied assistance and find in it great encouragement for the future.

RETRENCHMENTS, PAST AND PRESENT.

The fact has been noted that our present rate of annual expenditure is $50,000 less than it was two years ago In the review of the mission fields presented above there have been brief references to some of the various lines of retrenchment. This survey, however, would be very incomplete were the review left here. Not only have schools and missions been closed, but many of those which remain are suffering in efficiency and power and in the compass of their work, through the lessened number of faithful workers so imperatively needed. The enrollment of pupils in these Christian institutions has been largely reduced because we have not sufficient funds to provide an adequate corps of teachers. Our statistical summaries, embracing additions of some lesser outstations, schools and teachers, must not be taken as obliterating these real facts of retrenchment. Since the salaries in the whole field of the Association's work are so economically adjusted as to make it impossible to reduce them in individual cases, the financial retrenchment has had to find place in a reduction of the number of those employed in this great missionary work.

Not only should the irretrievable suffering of individual schools and missions be now considered, but also the present loss both in the work of general supervision in the mission fields and of effort in the collecting fields. The discontinuance of a field superintendency on account of this relentless demand for retrenchment has thrown upon the corresponding secretaries, especially Secretary Beard, a large additional burden in the immediate and constant supervision and inspection of our mission fields. There seems no other way than that this sacrifice should be made and that this additional burden should be placed upon those who are already pressed with multiform labors.

The recent retrenchment of forces in some of the collecting fields will make less of direct appeal in those fields through the visitation and addresses of secretaries. Thes reduction is ventured upon with the confident hope that the churches will freely take up the larger responsibilities thus left upon them. In the Central District no district secretary has been employed. Secretary Woodbury, in addition to his administrative services, has taken the visitation of churches and associations and the entire correspondence of the district. With the discontinuance of a separate office at Cleveland in the Interior District, Secretary Wright retires from service, greatly to the regret of this committee and his fellow secretaries and of loss to the churches in that field. Secretary Ryder, in addition to the general administration of the departments under his care, takes the correspondence for this collecting district, and is to give all the time he can possibly save from other duties to visiting this field and to assisting its pastors and churches.

OBITUARY.

Rev. Wm. M. Taylor, D.D.—During the past year Dr. Taylor, for four years president of this Association, resigning in 1892 on account of ill-health, met in quietude and with patient resignation the summons that called him home. The premonition of death came three years ago and the march was steady to the close.

Dr. Taylor long before he became president of this Association took a deep interest in its work and brought to it his own personal influence and that of his large and wealthy congregation. As a presiding officer he was constant in his attendance, and by the dignity of his manner and his great force of character gave guidance and strength to the gatherings of our annual meeting. On great occasions, at college anniversaries and at missionary and ecclesiastical gatherings, Dr. Taylor was one of the most acceptable and efficient speakers. One marked characteristic of Dr. Taylor came from his great heart, and mellowed and sweetened all his other powers. He has finished a glorious course and has gone to his reward.

Rev. Chas. C. Painter.—The death of Prof. Painter removed a most useful and efficient worker in behalf of the Indians. He died at his home in Washington, of heart disease, after an illness of only twelve hours. He was sixty-two years old, born in Virginia, but resident for most of his life in New England, where he was an acceptable pastor. He was called from that position into the service of the American Missionary Association, acting for a time as professor in Fisk University. He, however, soon gave his life to promoting the education and civilization of the Indians, and for ten years was connected with the Indian Rights Association.

Miss Julia A. Goodwin.—This estimable lady died at Mason, N. H., October 28, 1894. She was the daughter of Rev. Daniel Goodwin. From her earliest years she was a devoted member of the Congregational Church and an efficient teacher in the Sunday-school and for many years a leader in church choirs. For fifteen years she taught in the South under the auspices of the American Missionary Association. She was for several years at Wilmington, N. C., and the Storrs School, Atlanta, then at Thomasville, Ga., and later at Selma, Ala. A tendency to weak lungs caused the cessation of her labors, and for two years she battled with that dreadful disease, consumption. Abundance of testimony is borne to the loveliness of her character and the usefulness of her work. Memorial services were held for her at Atlanta, and a choir of her old pupils sang some of her favorite hymns.

Miss Amy Williams.—On Sunday, February 24, at Rochester, N. Y., another of our valued missionaries passed on beyond the work and opportunities of this life to her blessed reward. Miss Amy Williams entered the service of the Association in 1868 as missionary teacher at Augusta, Ga. The next year she was transferred to Atlanta, Ga., where she was for many years the principal of the Storrs School. Retiring from this principalship in 1885, she spent a few years North, but her heart continually turned to her loved people, and in 1893 she accepted appointment as principal of the Slater Normal School, at Knoxville, Tenn., where her work was characterized by the same thoroughness and ability as that at Atlanta. Finding that her health wonld not permit her to return the second year, she wrote in December: "My heart just aches to go back South. Every other work seems insignificant."

Rev. J. G. Craighead, D.D., was born in Carlisle, Pa., 1823, and died in New York, 1895. He was educated in the schools of his native State and in Union Theological Seminary of this city. After a short pastorate he was associated with Rev. Dr. Field in the editing and managing of the New York Evangelist. After spending fourteen years in this position, and after extensive travel in Europe and the East, he devoted some time in Philadelphia to work for the Presbyterian Historical Society. But in the later years of his life he was Dean of the Theological Department of Howard University, Washington, D. C. This brought him into close relations with the officers of this Association, and we can bear testimony not only to his faithfulness as a teacher, but to his deep personal interest in the welfare of the students.

Rev. George T. Holyoke.—This faithful minister of the Gospel entered into his rest January 22, 1895. He was always a friend of the colored people, often befriending or helping them, and although a great sufferer, through exposure during his army life, he was comforted by the fact that he had a hand in helping to free the slaves. His last work on earth was as pastor of the Lincoln Street Congregational Church in Topeka, Kan., a church that had some time before been organized by this Association. The last service he conducted was at the home of one of the humble members of the church, less than a week before his own departure.

Mr. Isaac J. St. John was born in Walton, N. Y., in 1834, died in Oswego in 1895, and was buried in Walton. Mr. St. John was an intelligent and efficient business man, of great integrity and consecrated Christian character. In 1881, when some difficulties had arisen in the mission of this Association in West Africa, Mr. St. John was appointed as superintendent of the mission, with a view of rectifying these difficulties, especially in their business and financial aspects. He spent about a year at the mission and performed the duties assigned to him with wisdom and efficiency. The officers of the Association retain a pleasant remembrance of his character and of his useful work in our service.

Miss Isabella Davis Feemster.—Miss Isabella D. Feemster died in New Ruhama, Miss., on Sabbath morning, March 31, 1895, aged 69 years. For many years she had been a missionary among the colored people in the neighborhood of her home, where her father, Rev. S. A. Feemster, was a missionary of the Association for a long time, and had a special interest in all reforms of the day. She was greatly attached to the Sunday-school work, and loved to teach the word of God to the poor and ignorant. Her faith never wavered in the prosecution of this work.

Mrs. Adelaide Rideout Riggs.—Mrs. Riggs was born in 1867 in Dorset. Vt., graduating in 1887 from the Western Reserve Seminary, and after spending two years in Bradford Academy, Massachusetts, she came as a teacher to the Santee School, Nebraska, where she made herself exceedingly useful, and was afterward employed by Dr. Riggs as his secretary. In 1893 she was married to Mr. Frederick B. Riggs and took a trip with him upon the Rosebud and Pine Ridge Reservations, camping out and sharing the hardship of such travel. Failing health led to the employment of the best medical advice, and in November, 1894, she went to New Mexico to escape the rigors of the climate of Nebraska, where it seemed impossible that she could live through the winter. But in spite of all that could be done, Mrs. Riggs passed away March 12, 1895. She was admirably fitted for her work and full of enthusiasm for it.

Col. Franklin Fairbanks.—This honored man, who died April 24, combined in an unusual degree the best traits of a successful business man with a broad, intelligent and active Christian life. He was the head of one of the largest manufacturing establishments in America; he was the president or director of several banks, railroads and other corporations, and was also engaged in positions of responsibility in military and civil service; and yet he still had the heart and ability to engage most effectively in various forms of benevolent and Christian activity. He was a faithful member and officer of the church, and in the erection of the Fairbanks Museum of Natural Science, in his native town, he manifested both his cultured taste in science and his interest in education. He was a corporate member of the American Board and a member of the Committee on the International Sunday-school Lessons. He was for a time a member of the Executive Committee of the American Missionary Association, and none who were present at its last meeting in Lowell, Mass., will forget his valuable service in the examination of the financial condition of the Association and in the clear and business-like manner in which he presented the subject.

Rev. Henry Stanley Bennett.—Few now remain who have been so long engaged in the Association's work as was Rev. H. S. Bennett. He was born in Brownsville, Pa., in 1838, graduated from Obelin College in 1860, and from Oberlin Theolegical Seminary in 1863. He was pastor of the CongregationalChurch in Wakeman, Ohio, from 1863 to 1867, serving meanwhile in the hundred days' service with the One Hundred and Fiftieth Regiment of the Ohio National Guard in the defense of Washington. Since 1867 he had been pastor of the church connected with Fisk University, and teacher of German and theology in the University.

Among the colored people he was looked npon as a leader who could be implicitly trusted and whose advice was for their best interests. In the Congregational Association of Tennessee he was honored as a father. He had been the clerk of that body from its origin.

Nearly two years ago he had a slight stroke of paralysis, but rallied and continued teaching through the school year. He was always hopeful of recovery, but friends could see that he was gradually failing. Death came August 5, and his funeral was on Thursday afternoon, from Fisk Memorial Chapel, at Nashville, among the witnesses of his beneficent ministry.

REV. I. C. WHITE, the aged pastor of the churches of Henrietta, McClurd's, Moorhead and Prim's Grove, N. C., passed away during the year. His last illness was largely occasioned by exposure in his labors among these scattered congregations. He was a faithful laborer in the vineyard of the Lord.

Bureau of Woman's Work.

MISS D. E. EMERSON, SECRETARY.

REPORT OF SECRETARY.

We come to this Annual Meeting with hearts full of gratitude to the many friends who have stood by this work in its emergency, and with praise to Him who daily beareth our burdens, and who we believe is unto us a God of deliverances. True, every passing month of the year just closed has sounded the ominous word "Debt," and the burdens consequent have been many and heavy; it has been hard to see the missionary work so repressed and cramped when opportunities for development offered on every side. But it has been glorious to watch its wonderful power and accomplishment even in its too restricted limitation. Surely a blessing followed the offerings of those who remembered this A. M. A. field with their gifts especially of "money consecrated to the Lord's work." Some, we have reason to believe, in giving "their slender mite for love of Him," gave much.

Thirty-one of the forty-two State Unions have made cash contributions to the Association's work during the year, but this does not represent in full the aid given. Four hundred and eighty-six barrels have been sent to the various fields, and while all have contained useful articles, some have been packed with valuable supplies of house linen for the boarding-halls and goods for the industrial classes.

The Secretary has presented the work frequently at missionary meetings, and series of meetings were planned for her and for missionaries from the field, in several of the States. In this the officers of the State organizations coöperated cordially, and were most helpful in arranging appointments among the auxiliaries. There is evident need of the work being made known by personal presentation. Missionary literature has been freely distributed, and letters from the field have been sent out in response to contributions wherever desired. The system of missionary letter-writing entails not a little of care and burden upon both missionaries and secretary, but it brings the missionaries and home workers into closer sympathy, and provides interesting information for missionary meetings. We acknowledge thankfully the consideration shown when letters have been unavoidably delayed, and the many expressions of appreciation of the missionary news.

Through the circulation of the letters and printed leaflets you have had many glimpses of the schools, churches, prayer-meetings, Sunday-schools, Endeavor meetings and the homes of the people in the South, on the Indian reservations, the Pacific Coast and Alaska. We trust it has been a joy to you to make the work so much your very own by the share you have had in sustaining it and watching its development.

There is a very precious part of this missionary work, however, that lies beyond the boundaries of our one hundred and seventeen schools. A hint of it may be seen in the following to her teacher from a former colored student, now the wife of a Congregational minister in the A. M. A. church service. It represents hundreds of cases equally gratifying of those who, through the beneficent work of the American Missionary Association, to-day fill positions of influence and usefulness in the various walks of life. The writer says: "The work here I enjoy very much, nevertheless there are many discouraging things in connection with it. But then I know we cannot always have smooth sailing. If everything was all smooth there would be no need of much work. I am only too glad to do something for the Master, though I know I am one that is fitted only to quietly fill in a little chink in the great work that is to be done. When I remember that we are not all given the same number of talents, I am somewhat encouraged to go on with the work, content to do little unnoticed acts in the name of the Master. I remember, too, that what I am, you are the one who was instrumental in making me. The Lord has a great reward for you for your patience and kind dealing with me."

"Little, unnoticed acts in the name of the Master." Think of it—that these colored boys, girls and mountain youth, Indians and Chinese, to the number of thirteen thousand annually, are through this American Missionary Association brought under such Christian training that a large proportion go forth to use their talents, be they great or small, in the name of the Master. What better could we do for either of these races than to support liberally a work that, preparing the youth for the practical duties of life, sends them forth to exert their influence among their people for the love of Christ and In His Name.

It has been a year of advance in contributions from the organizations of Woman's Work, and while this has been a welcome and valuable aid to the A. M. A. treasury, it is also a cheering indication of what these organizations may be able to do the next year and the next with increasing knowledge of the mission field, increasing interest and ability. The cash receipts, through the State organizations, have been $21,213.95, and directly from local societies and mission bands, $4,124.66, a total of $25,338.61. We give a tabulated statement from which it will be seen that nine of the State organizations now measure their dollars for the A. M. A. by the thousand, and some of those in the list immediately following we hope will soon join the thousand-dollar rank.

In assigning these contributions to some definite portion of the work, as has been desired, the choice has naturally been the support of women as missionary teachers, forty-five having been thus assigned. The total number of missionaries in the A. M. A. churches and schools is six hundred and forty-nine. The churches number two hundred and twelve. The schools number one hundred and seventeen, and the five hundred and thirty teachers engaged in them, many of whom preach as well as teach, are indeed too few for the broad lines of instruction, the varied industrial training, the intellectual and spiritual, or, to use a favorite expression, the training of "head, hand and heart." But it is often noticeable how cheerfully these missionaries meet the increasing demands upon their strength, forgetful of self, in their intense desire for the good of their pupils, that, intelligent, industrious, virtuous, all may go out to their life-work, whatever and wherever it may be, in the name of the Master.

But what of those who are not gathered into these Christian schools? Longing, praying and pleading to enter, what if the doors are closed against them because they have no money, no influence, and in their time of need, no friends? Our hearts ache that such should have been the bitter experience of any the past year. But it is too true. With no means of their own and no friend to aid them, hundreds have been turned back to darkness when they wanted light; turned back because there was none to help.

The opportunities of the year just closed we may not reclaim, but we are beginning a new year with its new opportunities. The colored people, eager for improvement, struggling with poverty, appeal for schools and churches, but it costs $400 for each teacher or minister. The Indians want their children to come into the mission schools where they may learn "the Jesus way," but it costs $150 for each pupil. The mountain people of the South, unlettered, simple-hearted, credulous, are the prey of Mormon missionaries, who are working zealously for converts, and, as one reports, with "good success." The antidote is Christian teachers and preachers, but here again is an average cost of $400. The Chinese field, besides the work for men in mission schools, presents an opportunity for women's work among twenty-five hundred Chinese women in San Francisco, who are accessible in their homes, and who respond gratefully to Christian sympathy and instruction. Was there ever such gracious opportunity to the Christian church to gather into the fold the "other sheep" of the Great Shepherd? He has said, "them also I must bring." Would He bring them in through us? Let us arouse ourselves that we may not so lose these opportunities God has given to win this land for Christ. We have done something, but it is so far short of the need. Our offerings—have they been so much a part of ourselves, have they cost us so much that they have been worthy tokens of love to our Lord?

The American Missionary Association has come to its fiftieth year of work and appeal for these to whom the gospel is to be preached, through church planting and Christian schools. It comes burdened with obligations for the work already done, and for that of the year just begun. Can we not, each one of us, double our gifts to this work in this A. M. A. Jubilee year? This, with one true self-denial offering from every woman in the Congregational church, and friend of the work, and not only shall the Association come next year to its fiftieth anniversary with rejoicing, but hundreds of new voices from the millions of people to whom we are sent, will join also in the song of Jubilee.

WORK FOR CHINESE WOMEN AND CHILDREN.

From Hanford, Miss Amy E. Clarke writes: "I hope it will not be long before I can start women's prayer meetings in the two Chinese homes in this village. I have visited these families and they seem glad to see me. It is dreadful for them to stay shut up as they are. One of these women had never seen an American woman till she saw me."

From Fresno, Miss Beaton writes: "I think this work among the women is just as important as that among the men. I can count fourteen families that I have visited in our Chinatown, and I do not think we have found all. We have been received kindly by all, and of one mother in particular we have bright hopes, for she is evidently deeply touched, and as far as we can judge, has accepted Christ." A letter a month later in date confirms this judgment and speaks confidently of this mother as born of God.

From San Francisco, Miss Patten writes: "The father of some little children that I have been allowed to teach, happened to come into the room one day when we were singing. One of his little daughters sang so nicely that he was greatly pleased. He said, 'I likee you teach my children and they likee you, too.'" Again she writes: "I feel much encouraged about one small-footed woman who seems much interested in the gospel since I have had the aid of Mrs. Jee Wee interpreting for me. I have told her the story of Jesus, and she seems really anxious to know more of the Scriptures. One of my last calls was made on a very rainy day, and Mrs. Jee Wee being sick could not accompany me. When I rose to go, this woman stopped me and began to talk to me in Chinese. Her husband, who was near, served as interpreter for us, and said that she wished me to stay longer. It is a point of no little value gained when the husbands join in the welcome to our visitors, express pleasure in their work and will even interpret for them. Sometimes I am not only welcomed at the door, but invited to lunch. In these homes the little children cling to me, wish to sit by me, climb up into my lap and talk to me in their own tongue, and though I cannot understand a word, I can read in their trusting, happy faces something which says that when our Saviour took little children in His arms He blessed not only those of one nation but children of every race in all the world." But what these homes are, another extract will indicate: "Mrs. Jee Wee and I called upon one woman who was sick in bed. Her husband said she was not sick, but lazy. I have a heart full of sympathy for her. Her husband's mother and another family—each having a goodly number of children—live with her. It is a dismal room, in which a lamp must be burning all day long. Yet whenever she is able to sit up she welcomes me gladly, and desires me to teach her. She began with the alphabet two or three months ago, and is now well on in the First Reader."

From San Francisco, Mrs. Jee Wee reports: "During the last month I have made 69 visits, 46 with Mrs. Green and 23 with Miss Patten. The work has been about the same, so I have not any news to write about. Those that like to hear the gospel, we tell them the story of Jesus and about the creation of the world and how God had made everything in it. One place that I go with Mrs. Green—a little-footed woman, she came from China just a few months ago and was glad to see us when we went to see her. Mrs. Green took a little book with her and the woman asked me whether Mrs. Green is going to teach her to read in that book or not. I said 'No,' and I tell her that we tell them about Jesus out of that book, and she asked us to tell her some now, and so we did. Then Mrs. Green told me to ask her if she would like to learn to read. If she like, then we'll teach her. But she said, 'Wait till after Chinese New Year.' So we have to wait, but we go to visit her sometimes. I am now teaching one of the girls to crochet, and one I show how to knit."

From San Francisco, Mrs. Green reports: "In one family there are two little girls in whom I have taken a great interest. Some months ago one was quite sick with a painful swelling on her neck. I took a doctor there, and after getting the medicine and showing them how to poultice and dress the sore, which was very large, I believed she would soon be relieved. She is now quite well and I go there frequently. I have taught the girls from time to time, but as they all live in one small room, my teaching is done under serious embarrassments. The father, mother and grown daughter have each a sewing machine and they do all their sewing, eating and sleeping in the one room. There are five children, and in one part of the room up high over head is a wide shelf which is used as the children's bed."

THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION.

CONSTITUTION.

ART. I. This Society shall be called the American Missionary Association.

ART. II. The object of this Association shall be to conduct Christian missionary and educational operations and diffuse a knowledge of the Holy Scriptures in our own country and other countries which are destitute of them, or which present open and urgent fields of effort.

ART. III. Members of evangelical churches may be constituted members of this Association for life by the payment of thirty dollars into its treasury, with the written declaration at the time or times of payment that the sum is to be applied to constitute a designated person a life member; and such membership shall begin sixty days after the payment shall have been completed. Other persons, by the payment of the same sum, may be made life members, without the privilege of voting.

Every evangelical church which has within a year contributed to the funds of the Association, and every State or local Conference or Association of such churches, may appoint two delegates to the Annual Meeting of the Association; such delegates, duly attested by credentials, shall be members of the Association for the year for which they were thus appointed.

The pastor of any evangelical church contributing to the funds of the Association within a year is thereby constituted a voting member for that year.

ART. IV. The Annual Meeting of the Association shall be held in the month of October or November, at such time and place as may be designated by the Association, or, in case of its failure to act, by the Executive Committee, by notice printed in the official publication of the Association for the preceding month.

ART. V. The officers of the Association shall be a President, five Vice-Presidents, a Corresponding Secretary or Secretaries, a Recording Secretary, a Treasurer, Auditors, and an Executive Committee of fifteen members, all of whom shall be elected by ballot.

At the first Annual Meeting after the adoption of this Constitution, five members of the Executive Committee shall be elected for the term of one year, five for two years and five for three years, and at each subsequent Annual Meeting five members shall be elected for the full term of three years, and such others as shall be required to fill vacancies.

ART. VI. To the Executive Committee shall belong the collecting and disbursing of funds, the appointing, counseling, sustaining and dismissing of missionaries and agents, and the selection of missionary fields. They shall have authority to fill all vacancies in office occurring between the Annual Meetings; to apply to any Legislature for acts of incorporation or conferring corporate powers; to make provision when necessary for disabled missionaries and for the widows and children of deceased missionaries, and in general to transact all such business as usually appertains to the Executive Committees of missionary and other benevolent societies. The acts of the Committee shall be subject to the revision of the Annual Meeting.

Five members of the Committee constitute a quorum for transacting business.

ART. VII. No person shall be made an officer of this Association who is not a member of some evangelical church.

ART. VIII. Missionary bodies and churches or individuals may appoint and sustain missionaries of their own, through the agency of the Executive Committee, on terms mutually agreed upon.

ART. IX. No amendment shall be made to this Constitution except by the vote of two-thirds of the members present at an Annual Meeting and voting, the amendment having been approved by the vote of a majority at the previous Annual Meeting.

CHARTER OF THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION.

Being Chapter Three Hundred and Fifty-Eight of the Laws of 1862, as Amended by Chapter Seven Hundred and Ninety-Six of the Laws of 1871, Chapter Fifty-Two of the Laws of 1886 and Chapter Three Hundred and Ninety-Five of the Laws of 1889 of the State of New York.

The people of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

SEC. 1. William E. Whiting, Thomas Ritter, Henry Belden, James O. Bennett, Anthony Lane, Thomas C. Fanning, Samuel Wilde, C. B. Wilder, John Lowry, Josiah Brewer, William B. Brown, Alonzo S Ball, Lewis Tappan, S. S. Jocelyn and George Whipple, and others now acting as officers and members of the American Missionary Association, located in the City of New York, together with such others as may be hereafter associated with or succeed them, shall be and are hereby constituted a body corporate, by the name of "THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION," for the purpose of conducting missionary and educational operations, and diffusing a knowledge of the Holy Scriptures, in the United States and in other countries.

SEC. 2. The said corporation shall possess the general powers and be subjected to the provisions contained in the third title of chapter eighteen of the first part of the Revised Statutes, so far as the same are applicable and have not been repealed or modified, and is hereby authorized to hold its meeting in any State or Territory of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

SEC. 3. The management of the affairs and concerns of the said corporation shall be conducted by an Executive Committee, to be from time to time appointed or elected by the said Association, and to consist of not less than twelve members, any five of whom shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of its business; and all persons now holding office in said Association shall be like officers in said corporation, and with like functions until the next annual meeting of the Association.

SEC. 4. The said corporation shall have power to receive and disburse funds, and to purchase, receive, hold and take by donation, deed, devise or bequest, any real or personal estate which has been or will hereafter be given, granted, devised or bequeathed to it for the purpose stated in section first, or which may accrue from the use of the same; subject, however, to the provisions of chapter three hundred and sixty of the Laws of eighteen hundred and sixty, entitled An Act Relating to Wills; but it shall at no time hold property the annual income of which shall exceed one hundred thousand dollars;* and shall always have full power to grant, bargain, lease or otherwise dispose of the same, provided that the proceeds from such grant, bargain, lease or disposal shall never, in any manner, be diverted to any other purpose than that for which the property was originally donated.

ART. I.—MEETINGS.

The Committee shall hold its regular meetings on the second Monday of each month, at four o'clock, P.M. Special meetings may be called at the written request of any two members of the Committee. The call for any such special meeting and the notices sent out shall state the business to be considered.

Notices of the regular and special meetings of the Committee shall be sent by mail to its members, or otherwise communicated in writing, at least one day previous to the time of meeting.

ART. II.—OFFICERS AND COMMITTEES.

At the first regular meeting of the Committee after the Annual Meeting of the American Missionary Association, a Chairman, a Vice-Chairman and a Recording Secretary shall be chosen by ballot, who shall hold office for one year, or until their successors are elected. At the same meeting, the following Standing Committees for the year shall be appointed, to consist of seven members each, three to constitute a quorum:

1. A Committee on Finance, one of whom shall be the Chairman of the Executive Committee.
2. A Committee on Southern Work.
3. A Committee on Indian and Chinese Work.
4. A Committee on Collections.

Each of these Standing Committees shall elect a Chairman and a Secretary from their own number, and shall hold a monthly meeting to consider matters pertaining to their departments.

A Committee on Appropriations, of five members, shall also be formed each year in the manner hereinafter designated.

ART. III.—DUTIES OF OFFICERS AND COMMITTEES.

CHAIRMAN.—It shall be the duty of the Chairman to preside at all meetings of the Committee, to facilitate the transaction of its business, to sign, when necessary, checks upon the bank accounts of the Association, and to appoint all standing and special committees not otherwise provided for, subject to the approval of the Executive Committee.

VICE-CHAIRMAN.—In the absence of the Chairman, or in his inability to act, the Vice-Chairman shall perform his duties.

TEMPORARY CHAIRMAN.—In the absence or inability of both, a temporary Chairman may be appointed by the Executive Committee.

RECORDING SECRETARY.—The Recording Secretary shall keep the minutes of the Committee, and read them at its regular meetings. He shall cause all Committees to be notified, in writing, of their appointment within twenty-four hours thereafter, and shall inform them of the business referred to them. In his absence or inability to act the Chairman shall appoint a substitute.

COMMITTEE ON FINANCE.—It shall be the duty of the Committee on Finance to examine the accounts of the Treasurer for the month preceding each regular meeting of the Executive Committee before such meeting, taking the books of account kept by him, and comparing them with his statement of the month's receipts and disbursements and with the vouchers, and to certify to the correctness of such statement when approved by them. They shall also cause to be kept a book, wherein shall be set forth in detail (1) all stocks and bonds owned by the Association, at par, with a note of the original cost of the same to the Association; (2) all real estate (both land and buildings) and other property of the Association, with the full cost of the same; and (3) all property held on special deposit or in trust. This book shall be at all times open to the inspection of the members of the Executive Committee, and the record shall be so added to and amended, from time to time, under the direction of the Finance Committee, as to show at all times a correct statement of the property of the Association, and of any special trusts in its hands. All title deeds to real estate and certificates of stocks and bonds owned by the Association shall be in the charge of this Committee, who shall provide a proper place for their safe keeping. This Committee shall, when occasion requires, direct the sale and transfer of stocks, invest any funds of the Association not required or designed for current expenses, and in general shal have the oversight of the financial concerns of the Association, under the direction of the Executive Committee.

COMMITTEES ON SOUTHERN AND INDIAN AND CHINESE WORK.—It shall be the duty of the Committee on Southern Work and of that on Indian and Chinese Work to report to the Executive Committee, at its regular meeting every month, such suggestions or proposed action as shall seem to them desirable for furthering the efficiency and economy of the Missionary and Educational Work of the Association in their respective departments. They shall also have power to manage the current work of the Association assigned to them, subject to the general supervision and direction of the Executive Committee. Each of these Committees shall appoint its own meetings, keep books of record of its proceedings (the minutes of each Committee being read at the regular meetings of the Executive Committee), and may consult and advise with the Corresponding Secretaries, with the Treasurer of the Association, and with the District Secretaries and Agents in regard to its work.

COMMITTEE ON COLLECTIONS.—It shall be the duty of the Committee on Collections to consider each month the collecting work and to report thereon to the Executive Committee, and to prepare for the consideration of the Committee plans for increasing the collections.

COMMITTEE ON APPROPRIATIONS.—It shall be the duty of the Committee on Appropriations to consider the work of the Association carefully, and to present to the Executive Committee, at its meeting in May or June, a detailed statement of the amounts required in each department of the Association for the proper conduct of its work, and an estimate of the probable receipts of the Association, together with its recommendations as to the amounts which should be appropriated for the next fiscal year. This Committee shall consist of the Chairman of the Executive Committee, and the Chairmen of the first three Standing Committees.

SPECIAL COMMITTEES may be appointed from time to time as required. Standing and Special Committees can be formed only of members of the Executive Committee. All Special Committees shall examine and report upon every matter referred to them, with the facts in substance, and their opinions and recommendations, so that the Executive Committee may be fully enabled to act thereon.

APPEALS.—Every appointee of the Association has the fullest liberty of appeal to the Executive Committee. Such communications shall be referred to the Committee on Southern Work, or to the Committee on Indian and Chinese Work, according to the part of the field from which they come, for examination and a report on the matter involved, at the next meeting of the Executive Committee, when they shall receive careful attention in executive session.

ART. IV.—DUTIES OF CORRESPONDING SECRETARIES.

The Corresponding Secretaries shall conduct the correspondence of the Association and of the Executive Committee, except that which relates immediately to the Treasurer's department, and shall have the charge and direction of the work of the Association under the Executive Committee, and shall present to the various Standing Committees such suggestions and plans as shall seem to them desirable for the efficient working of the Association. They shall also prepare each month, and put into the hands of each member of the Executive Committee, before its regular monthly meeting, a schedule of the business which the Standing and any Special Committees may report to the Executive Committee for its action, and any other business they may desire to bring before the Executive Committee. It shall also be their duty to present to the Standing and Special Committees and to the Executive Committee all matters relating to their several departments, and to sign checks upon the bank accounts of the Association.

All appointments of missionaries, whether they are to act as pastors or general missionaries, presidents and professors of chartered institutions, principals of high and normal schools, district secretaries, field superintendents and other agents, and all matters involving questions of property or affecting the policy of the Association, shall be referred to the Executive Committee for final action.

ART. V.—DUTIES OF THE TREASURER

It shall be the duty of the Treasurer to receive all money contributed or intrusted to the Association, and to give receipts therefor; to deposit it to the credit of the Association in such bank or institution as may be designated by the Finance Committee; to keep clear and accurate accounts of all sums received and expended by the Association; to make payments and remittances in accordance with, and never in excess of, the appropriations made by the Executive Committee; to indorse checks and drafts for deposit, and sign checks for the purposes of the Association; to report to the Finance and Executive Committees each month the receipts and disbursements for the previous month, and at the end of the fiscal year, for the year, and to keep all books of account required by them; to conduct the correspondence relating immediately to his department and to perform such other acts as are necessary to the faithful execution of the duties of his office.

His books of account and vouchers for payments shall at all times be open to the inspection of any member of the Executive Committee, and shall be submitted by him each month to the Finance Committee for their examination.

It shall be his duty to present to the Standing and Special Committees and to the Executive Committee such financial business as needs their action.

ART. VI.—DISTRICT SECRETARIES.

The Executive Committee shall appoint such District Secretaries as they may deem expedient, who shall visit churches and in other ways disseminate information concerning the condition and needs of the Association throughout the districts assigned to them. They shall also collect funds, and perform such other duties as may be required. They shall keep in constant conference with the New York office, and every month shall send to it, for the Executive Committee, a report of their work the previous month and of the condition of the interests of the Association in their several districts.

ART. VII.—CHECKS AND PAYMENTS.

All checks upon the bank accounts of the Association may be signed by (1) the Chairman (or Vice-Chairman or Temporary Chairman) of the Executive Committee, (2) a Corresponding Secretary, or (3) the Treasurer. Any two of these signatures shall render a check valid, but no check shall be valid with one signature only. All transfers of stock, conveyances of real estate and other instruments requiring the seal of the Association shall be signed in the same manner.

All payments of the Association shall be made by check payable to order, except petty cash expenditures, which shall be paid by the Treasurer and at convenient times be aggregated, and a check shall be drawn to his order therefor.

No disbursements shall be made without authority of the Executive Committee.

ART. VIII.—CLAIMS FOR DISBURSEMENTS BY OFFICERS AND EMPLOYEES.

All claims for disbursements by any officer or employee shall be accompanied by vouchers, except for telegrams, postage and traveling expenses, and charges below twenty dollars in amount, all of which shall be certified by the claimant to the Treasurer, with the items.

ART. IX.—ORDER OF BUSINESS.

The following shall be the order of business of the Committee at its regular meetings:

1. Prayer.
2. Reading of the minutes of the last regular meeting and of intervening meetings.
3. Report of the Treasurer.
4. Reports of Corresponding Secretaries and District Secretaries.

6. Reports of Special Committees.
7. Unfinished business.
8. New business.
9. Executive Session.

The business of each special meeting shall be limited to the items mentioned in the call for such meeting.

ART. X.—AMENDMENTS.

These By-Laws may be amended at any time by a vote of a majority of the members present at any regular meeting, notice of such amendment having been given in writing at the previous regular meeting, and in the notices sent out for such meeting.

BY REV. WILLIAM HAYES WARD, D.D.

Instead of thy fathers shall be thy children.—Psalms 45:16.

The fathers! There is a sacred light encircling the name—I might almost say a sacred illusion. The fathers! They are the great and good men of old, Adam, Enoch, Noah, Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Joseph, Moses, Joshua, the fathers, patriarchs of the world's story and of the people of Israel. The fathers—they are the men that handed down to the Christian Church the uncompromising faith of Hebrew Monotheism, the old saints and prophets who died in the faith, who chose to suffer afflictions with the children of God, who wrought righteousness, obtained promises, stopped the mouths of lions, waxed valiant in fight, put to flight armies of aliens, were stoned, sawn asunder, tempted, slain; but of whom the world was not worthy, and who obtained a good report through faith. The fathers—they are the teachers of our Christian faith to the world, the apostles, the early martyrs and preachers of the Gospel, the men whom we designate by the term "Fathers," the Fathers of the Church, the long, high shelves of whose apologies, sermons, commentaries and creeds, testify to their diligence and faith, and to the honor in which their names were held. And there are later fathers, not all of them canonized as saints, but no less saintly, whom we honor as fathers of every renaissance or reform, who proclaimed in the name of the Lord the Lord's will, and who cursed in the name of the Lord when the profane sons of Eli defiled the sanctuary, or when greed and cruelty oppressed the Lord's poor. They are the men who delivered the Church from superstition, who gave liberty to their native lands, or who broke the fetters of the slave. We call them the fathers of the Reformation, the fathers of their country, the fathers of each successive reform; and as we look back on the history of their times, their majestic figures seem to fill all the background of history. The foreground in the picture, of our own day, we see crowded with base men and blackened with crime. The good with us seem often to be few, and we do not see many very heroic men. Indeed the good men seem of no remarkable stature, and to be doing a rather commonplace and not very successful work, and they are lost in the crowd of the vulgar and selfish and wicked. Will they shine out resplendent to the next generation? Yes, for it is a law of this moral world—and a moral world it is—that the good, and the good men, grow greater and more radiant as the years pass, and the evil, and the evil men, grow smaller, are dimmer from age to age, till we turn back and we see them not. They have disappeared, faded away, and in the place of the bad mob that in their day filled the world, we look back and we see larger than life, more noble, more glorious, made great by their own resplendent goodness, enlarged, like the shadow of a man on an Alpine summit seen against the clouds, those whom their age did not know, but whom we see and see alone, and whom we call the fathers. It is as when we turn our eyes from the barren hills and fetid swamps and weedy pastures about us, and see afar off a line of mountains filling the horizon. They and they only can be seen in their grandeur. Doubtless there are weedy pastures and fetid swamps and barren hills over there, but they are all lost to view in the distance, and only the high mountains appear, towering and grand, which were too near me that I should see them when I whirled along the track yesterday looking at the bank of the railroad cut. We have good and great men to-day, but we are too near our heroes and we do not know how great they are. The next generation will build their monuments. We look back and we see and honor those whom the last generation despised, perhaps persecuted. Oh, if we could only project ourselves to a distance for a while and see our own mountains! It would be a fair landscape. Sin may be eternal, perhaps—though we would have it otherwise, but the sinner shall pass away and his fame will be forgotten. "The memory of the just is blessed; but the name of the wicked shall rot."

We make a great mistake when we reckon the forces of evil by the deceptive process of numeration. The comparative forces of good and evil cannot be computed by merely counting them. It is quite too easy, and utterly misleading to go to the census, and there read that less than a third of the population of the world professes the Christian faith. It is only that third that is worth counting, and that third must be reduced again and again to get the real men of divine power, as Gideon reduced his unwieldy army. It gives a false impression when we balance the number of saloons against the number of churches, or the amount spent on intoxicants against the amount spent for the support of religion, or the cost of the armies and navies of Christendom against the cost of missions. Thus reckoned that which makes for wickedness is vastly more than that which makes for righteousness. Neither brute numbers nor brute weight measures force. I suppose Goliath's two-handed sword was a good deal heavier than David's sling-stone. Goodness is divine, and therefore it possesses an imperishable portion of God's eternity. The waves that beat upon that rock break but the rock breaks not. In the old days of our wise and good fathers, all were not wise and good. We think of them as all Puritan saints in old New England; they were not and never were. But those who were fathers of the faith gave direction to all the rest, and their influence is permanent. Last summer I made a pilgrimage to a half-maritime town in Maine where my grandfather went just one hundred years ago as its first pastor. They had built a large meeting house, and there were nearly a thousand inhabitants, but he could find only five men and not one woman to be the first members of the church, and it took six years to add five more by profession and letter. But those five church members were worth all the rest as power. It is their influence that has continued. When we speak of the influence of New England's settlers, we do not mean—we have forgotten—the roystering and drunken crowds that filled the ports, that worked in the potteries, that congregated at the trainings, that had to be restrained by severe laws. Half of the revolutionary soldiers from Rhode Island were Negroes, and very ignorant Negroes. England sent to Virginia not only planters from whom came the Washingtons and Madisons, but thousands of the lowest convicts. It is only the Washingtons we remember when we remember Virginia. We think of New England as all pious, but when early in the last century a company of horse came from Portsmouth to Newport to meet and accompany the new governor of the New Hampshire colony, he asked their commanding officer what was the custom of the country about saying grace at meals, and he got the answer, "As you approach Boston the graces will become longer and longer; but after you leave it they will become shorter and shorter till you reach your own jurisdiction, where there is no grace at all." Not even the merchants who settled the colony pretended to be religious. Yet who remembers that fact? There is a preservative power about goodness, and its memory and influence come down the ages, while in badness there is a moral decay which disintegrates and dissipates it out of the very traditions of men.

When, therefore, we read the promise, "Instead of thy fathers shall be thy children," we know that it is the good fathers that are meant, and they shall be followed by good children. The bad fathers—they were numerous in their time, many more than the good, but they have not endured. They are gone, their names forgotten. The good shall beget children for generations after their death; but the bad die and are childless ever after. Who shall care to recall and perpetuate their character? "The name of the wicked shall rot."

This American Missionary Association is entering the fiftieth year of its existence. Next October we shall celebrate our half century Jubilee. Was it a period of heroes, that period which only the old men among us remember, as far back as 1846? How do we think of those days? Who are the men that we recall of the times when the conscience of the country was asking what was the meaning of Christ's command, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself"? The historian of those days has one question to ask, What was the progress, the growth of that moral sentiment of the people, which declared that slavery in the United States must come to an end? The historian puts in the foreground the few men who took part in that conflict for liberty. If there was one Old Man Eloquent who stood alone, like a rock, by his seat in Congress and would defend against the fury of slaveholders the right of petition against slavery, then the historian of those days delights to recall the name of John Quincy Adams. When Joshua R. Giddings and John P. Hale, and a few more succeeded him, and helped the fight, we are proud of their names. If William Lloyd Garrison and his company of followers, in their zeal for liberty threw overboard our Holy Bible, we make haste, perhaps too much haste, to forgive even that, for we know that it was their willing martyrdom for liberty and right which led them astray, and that the name of him who loves his fellow men will be written down high on the list of those who love the Lord. How highly we must honor those who kept faith with both man and God, with Christ and Bible as well as with the slave, in the days when men did not know how to reply to those who said, and said with truth, that slavery is recognized and not condemned in the Bible, and that Paul sent back Onesimus as a slave to his master. Perhaps we do not yet quite understand how to meet the biblical argument for slavery. Do we remember clearly that the most authoritative and best authenticated bit of inspiration in the Bible is the decision of the first Council at Jerusalem, made after discussion between the two great parties in the Church, at which were present Paul and Barnabas and Silas and Peter and James and John, and the inspired writers of all, or nearly all the New Testament, and that their united decision was put in writing before any other part of the New Testament, and sent officially to all the churches, with the endorsement that "it seemed good to the Holy Ghost and to us." And do we remember what were the commands of that council, and whether they remained permanently binding? They were that believers should abstain from meat offered to idols, from things strangled, and from blood; and from fornication. Of these four only one, founded in moral right, remained permanent. Things strangled and blood were forgotten and never mentioned again. Meat offered to idols—in less than ten years

Paul, who had signed the decree of the council forbidding it, and had said that this seemed good also to the Holy Ghost, was telling his converts that they need not trouble themselves about it, except where it might offend a weak brother. If the most solemn provisions of a compromise between the apostles of the early church, approved by the Holy Ghost, could become obsolete in ten years, because the basal principle of Christian faith and the worthlessness of ceremonial law were better understood, if the Holy Spirit could teach the Apostolic Church that essential righteousness is so supreme over formal righteousness that even the decision of a council, approved for the time by the Holy Ghost, is temporary and passes away, then could not new light break out of God's Holy Word for our fathers of fifty years ago, and could not they have the fresh instructions of the Holy Spirit, still abiding in his Church, and still teaching them new applications of the old principles, and, out of the love of God and man, allowing what was not allowed, forbidding what was not forbidden by the Bible and in the Church two thousand years ago? Jesus made wine, and Paul sent back a slave, but we believe in total abstinence, and the Holy Spirit told Arthur Tappan, and Lewis Tappan, and the other pious founders of the American Missionary Association that slavery is, now, a sin, no matter what the Bible had to say about it in the old, rude times. The Holy Spirit taught that same truth to Garrison and his following of Come-outers, and they believed it and held that truth aloft. But they had been taught, and they were told by the overwhelming majority of the Church, that the Bible supports slavery and says, "Cursed be Canaan;" and what else could they do but denounce the Church and reject the Bible? It is to the eternal honor of the Tappans and Leavitts, the Finneys and Mahans, of the day, that they found a way, determined to find some way, by which they could hold the new truth and yet not reject their Bible. Perhaps their way was wrong; perhaps they strained their Scripture too much to make it condemn slavery, but it was a great thing that they could welcome the new truth without denying the old. It is a grand triumph of profound consistency, consistency that reaches to the very foundation rock of principle when a man can say, My Saviour drank wine, and for the very reason for which he drank it I will not drink it; St. Paul sent back a slave to his master, and for the very reason that made St. Paul do it, I will trample on the Fugitive Slave Law and will go to prison before I will do what Paul did. That is high consistency; the Woodses and Stuarts and Lords and Adamses of fifty years ago were not good enough interpreters of Scripture to attain unto it.

They could not attain unto it; and therefore, in this holy crusade they were forgotten. We may remember them honorably for other good deeds of theirs, but in the war of Liberty they have no crowns, no honor, no memorials. Oblivion charitably covers their failures. They were blind to the new truth, and the succeeding generations are blind to them. And yet they were, in their day, the multitude, and the Abolitionists were the few. The defenders of slavery were popular. Theirs was the press. The religious papers were all on their side, and so were the theological seminaries. If a man dared to attack slavery he was presumably an infidel, he was not fit for good society, he was the enemy of his country, he was condemned by the Church. On the side of the oppressor there were numbers and power. But all that "rout that made the hideous roar" are forgotten—only the names of the heroes remain. Do you old men recall the Castle Garden meeting called by the New York merchants soon after the enactment of the Fugitive Slave Law, called for the avowed purpose of showing to the slave holders of the South that these merchants had their principles as well as their silks for sale? At that meeting the most brilliant young lawyer in New York was one of the principal speakers in defense of that infamous law. That young lawyer has since been at the head of the New York bar, has been United States Senator and Secretary of State, and is now living in an honored old age. But he never reminds anyone that he, the son of a New England minister, prostituted his keen intellect to the task of cheering the bloodhounds that were chasing human beings whose only crime was that they fled from slavery. He does not boast of it now; he has been a sound anti-slavery man ever since it became popular, and you have all forgotten that he was then the enemy of the truth. Of course you have forgotten it, and I will not help you to recall it by mentioning his name. It is, I repeat, by the gracious dealing of Providence that such things are not held in everlasting remembrance. No man draws inspiration from a bad act or cares to remember the multitudes of those that turn aside from the rugged, narrow way into the easy meandering mazes of evil in which they are lost. "They are like chaff which the wind driveth away." "The Lord knoweth," and the world shall know and remember, "the way of the righteous," no matter how few they are, "but the way of the ungodly shall perish."

I have talked about the fathers; but it is not the fathers, good as they were, such as are remembered, that you and I are concerned with, but the children. This is not an historical society. We are looking forward, not backward. We are not annalists; we are prophets and apostles—that is, translating the words into plainer English, we are preachers and missionaries. What we need to pray for now is the fulfillment of the promise, "Instead of thy fathers shall be thy children" worthy children of such fathers as are remembered and continue.

Man's duty is to man; and they are the true children of the true fathers who best see man's duty to man, and try best to do it. There are certain duties that lie on the surface, those of parents, children, teachers, pastors, in their several relations, duties that we touch, duties that a blind man can discover. There are other duties, to see which requires vision, duties just out of reach, duties which God puts, not on us particularly, but on us generally, on those who have eyes to see them. To the performance of such duties he inspires men who hold the whole world kin, and feel their obligation, not only to their own family or parish, but to mankind, an obligation to do what other men leave undone. Such a man is the Presbyterian minister in New York who would have been praised as having done his whole duty if he had simply been the faithful preacher of Christ's salvation in the Madison Square Church, but whose anointed vision saw the misgovernment of our metropolis and that it was somebody's duty, and so his duty, no matter how he might be ridiculed and misjudged, to declare the sin of the people and overthrow their corrupt rulers. How easy it would have been for him to say that it was none of his business, preacher of the simple gospel that he was, that it would be condemning the passivity of his fellow ministers, that it was the temptation of the devil to seek notoriety; but his eye was fixed on the evil, and his conscience on his duty, and no abuse of the press and no exhortation of his flock could swerve him. He is a child of the fathers.

It is not my purpose at this time to count up the great evils of society and show what denunciations of present-day prophets they deserve and how they can be corrected. There may be general conditions of society which involve injustice. It may be—so some tell us—that we have built our whole structure of society and property and trade and production on a wrong basis, and that there is more meaning than we have yet learned in the words: "Wo unto you rich," and in the command, "Sell all that ye have and give alms." If that is so, I confess that the "dim suffusion" still "veils my orbs," and I cannot see it as others think they do, whose eyes, perhaps, have felt the miraculous touch. It is easier for you and me to see the terrible evil of drunkenness and the misery it produces to families and individuals. But there is another evil and wrong, which threatens the liberty and peace of our people, and the integrity of our institutions, and the equal rights of our citizens which is of such immense proportions, and yet so far removed from most of us, that we cannot help seeing it, if we have seeing eyes, but which, because removed from immediate touch, too many do not see, or see only dimly. It is the wrong and the danger in vast masses of our ignorant population, of what we call depressed races, holding vast tracts of our territory, and existing and multiplying under conditions of prejudice, illiteracy, superstition and immorality. God has put on the more fortunate the duty of aiding the less fortunate, and he has opened our eyes to see this duty.

I recall the triumph of the old abolitionists when the Civil War had delivered the slaves. What they had prayed for was achieved; their task was done; liberty was proclaimed, and now, in their old age, they could rest, for their eyes had seen the salvation of the Lord. I remember the peaceful content of Garrison's last days. His work was done. But perhaps they forgot that after the storm has drenched the desert, it takes long culture before the harvest can mature. They had done their part and might fall asleep, but another and longer duty rested on the generation that followed. What was liberty to those three millions of ignorant freedmen—ignorant of what freedom means, unmarried to their wives, untaught, immoral, victims of cruelty and lust, ignorant of family virtue, of the meaning of truth and honesty, ignorant equally of their rights and their duties, multiplying their numbers and their danger both to themselves and to their white neighbors and to their country? What should be done for them?

It is to the everlasting glory of the founders of this Association that their duty to the unschooled negroes and white people of the South was clearly seen. They saw that pure religion must be preached; but that, above all things, there must be given with it the blessing of sound education. They saw the meaning of the fact exemplified in the contrasted conditions of New England and the mountain region of the South. The first thing our New England fathers did when they had settled their households on the new soil was to found a college for higher education. The fathers of the mountain whites were pious men, Scotch and Scotch-Irish and English, and they worshipped God, but they did not understand the value of education, and they founded no college, and without educated leaders they were bound to sink morally as well as intellectually. The difference between Massachusetts and Eastern Kentucky and Tennessee is not their original stock, nor the religion of the first settlers, but simply and solely that one founded Harvard College and the other did not. Ignorance is not the mother of devotion. The adage is a lie.

When those States which had their multitudes of Negroes came back into the Union, it was under new constitutions which provided for the equal education of all their citizens, and those citizens were both white and black. I am not of those who say that it was a great blunder to give the suffrage to those freedmen, illiterate as they were. But whether I am right or not in believing that it is far safer for a State to make its people first all voters, and thus encourage and compel their education, whatever the temporary bad result may be, of one thing there can be no doubt, that it was a blessing, boundless and revolutionary, which provided for whites and blacks alike a system of free education in public schools. That was enough to palliate everything else. When I hear the sad story of corrupt legislation and public debts heaped up in those days of reconstruction, I say, Yes, it was very bad, but look at the public school system then inaugurated. Education will cure all those evils in time; they are but temporary.

Into this work of education this American Missionary Association entered with consuming zeal. Its fathers understood that it is educated leaders, preachers and teachers which the colored race must have if they will be saved. Fifty years ago the doors of the Southern States were closed against them, and they were driven for a while to other mission work in Africa, in Siam, in our own Western States, where they could mingle with their labor for the conversion of men a protest against slave-holding. But just as soon as their loud voice, and the voice of such as they, had wakened our people, and the protest became general, and had met the response of war, then this Association found its true field. It withdrew from its foreign missions and its Western home work, for it no longer needed to make a protest against the seeming complicity of older societies with slavery in their fields, and it summoned the Christian people of this land to the task of giving the best education and the purest religion, a religion of purity and honesty, a religion of righteousness and freedom, to the freed slave. It is to the eternal honor of this Association that its voice was heard first, and it led the way, and that the churches which supported it were the most generous of all in this new duty, and that from that time to this the American Missionary Association has been the foremost among all those which have labored for the elevation of the Negro. To this work it has summoned all the other Churches of the land. They have formed their Freedmen's Societies on the model of ours. We have had this honor and this favor of the churches and this success, because, by the favor of God, ours have been the fathers who saw the necessity; not merely the Tappans and Jocelyn and Whipple and Patton and Strieby, of the years before the war, but the uncounted multitude of good and wise men who, when the war opened, gave their voice and aid. It was a grand and wonderful crusading impulse which took possession of our churches, not for any denominational glory, or we might have taken a denominational name, but simply for humanity's sake, for country's sake, for Christ's sake.

Shall the zeal of the fathers be perpetuated by their children? Is the eager enthusiasm of the fathers exhausted, or is their task done? The task is not done and, please heaven, their children shall inherit and perpetuate their enthusiasm, if cooled a bit, yet hardened into the force of a steady purpose that the races, black, red, yellow or white, that have been depressed by generations of ignorance, barbarism or servitude, shall have all an equal privilege with the best, to learn and know and rise.

The war for the preservation of the Union was ended thirty years ago. The battle for the rights of God's poor is with us every day. The United States Government, which once forbade the Negro to vote, now forbids the Chinamen to vote. The Indian is still treated like a child, when not hunted as a savage. The Negro—his numbers have increased from three millions to six millions, and with all that has been done for him by public education and by the benevolence of the North, and with all the marvelous eagerness with which he has sought to elevate himself, the great Black Belt of the South is black indeed with ignorance and superstition and vice. And with all this it is proved impossible to keep the interest of the people up to fever heat on the subject of the rights and wrongs and needs of the Negro; and people say, We have done what you asked; we have made freemen of the slaves, they now have their equal chance, and let them work out their salvation for themselves, or let them perish; we have done enough; we have ourselves to look out for, our nearer brothers North and West; let their own Churches and schools and their own neighbors look out for them. So parties and Churches talk and feel. The party which elected the great Emancipator as President now forgets in its platforms to ask anything more for the Negro, and is organizing white men's parties in the South. Northerners who go South for business or residence forget their shallow principles, and are more Southern than the South.

Now this is not strange. It is nothing to discourage us. The fathers, who, like the two hundred of Issachar, that "had understanding of the times to know what Israel ought to do," were few, to count them, in their day, and they had the great multitudes against them. It is no cause of discouragement if they are few now. It is the succession we want, a succession of prophets; the rest hardly count. It is true that the Negro must make his own way by his own thrift and labor and education. But there is a higher truth than this selfish truth so loved of indolence, and that is the truth which is embodied in the word neighbor, and it is impressed in our Lord's question, "Which of them, think ye, was neighbor to him that fell among thieves?"

But a much graver consideration than that of popular indifference in the North is that which appears in the rise in the South of a more calculating policy to hold the Negro in ignorant subjection. With the political side of the question it is not my place now to deal, although we can have but one opinion on the subject. It is with the educational, and therefore the religious side of it, that I am at present concerned.

When freedom was first secured by war, the low and vicious whites, to whom the Negro had been but a brute to be oppressed and despised, laughed at the idea that by education and thrift he could become their equal. But he did become their equal. Thousands of them were educated and became successful property holders, intelligent teachers and lawyers, physicians and preachers. That meant equality, possibly superiority. There grew up a feeling of jealousy and hatred, not toward the Negro as Negro, but as an intelligent and prosperous Negro. This time was bound to come as soon as the Negro boy's prophecy, "Tell them we are rising," should be fulfilled. That time has come. The danger is not now from occasional outbreaks and lynchings, horrible as they may be, but from a cold-blooded policy of repression and subjection; not merely the danger of that violence and perjury which suppress the free ballot—for that can be endured for a while; but the purpose that the Negro shall not rise to equality of opportunity and station, and that he shall be prevented from acquiring the education necessary thereto Do you tell me that this is groundless fear? I reply, Look at the latest developments in South Carolina and Florida, for these are what give us concern. For the Negro, as for the white man, everything depends on education, the lower education which the States supply, by their scanty public schools, which hardly go beyond two of the three R's, and the higher education which our missionary normal schools and colleges supply, and out of which come the teachers. We can, we must, keep up these higher schools. But what would happen if some of these States along the extreme Southern line, where the Negro population is densest—South Carolina, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana—should conclude to shut up their public schools for the Negroes? Do you tell me that this would be inconceivable baseness? Not at all. For many years the more enlightened Southerners, like Bishop Haygood and Dr. Curry, have been using all their best influence to prevent the enactment of laws by which no money shall be paid for Negro schools except the comparatively little that comes from Negro taxation. So far they have succeeded, but it now looks as if South Carolina and Florida were determined to crush the Negro schools by some provision of law or constitution which shall reduce the amount given for their support. They say, Why should we white men educate the Negroes to be our equals? Let them pay for their own schooling. The South Carolina Constitutional Convention is called for the openly avowed purpose of robbing the Negro of his vote; and not only is it the next thing to rob him of his school, but the easiest way to rob him of his vote is to rob him of his school. They dread the educated Negro more than the ignorant one. We shall be happily disappointed if none of the devices proposed to reduce the appropriations to the Negro schools are put into the constitution. In Florida we all know what is the barbarous law already passed, a law which would thrust into one of those country prisons, vile beyond telling, all the teachers in our Florida normal school, and which makes it a crime for any school, public, private or parochial, to teach black and white scholars in the same building, or for white teachers to sleep or eat in the same house with their Negro pupils. The law of Florida not only sets up the caste line in its own schools, but it forbids us, you and me, to take down that line of division in the schools which we support, and forbids us to live according to the principles of the Bible and of the Declaration of Independence, which teach us that all men are of one blood, created free and equal, and under which the perpetuation of the distinctions of caste simply for the accident of birth is a crime against God and man. And not satisfied with this, the man whom the State of Florida has put at the head of its school system declares to the world that it is his purpose to secure yet other laws which shall forbid white people—and that means white people from the North—to teach colored pupils, and which shall give to colored schools only that money which their own taxes pay. It is not unlikely that both South Carolina and Florida will do this, and if so then probably Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana will follow. And then God help the poor Negro!

Yes, God help him, and God will help him! "The way of the wicked he turneth upside down." And we will help him. Our churches have bidden us to do it, and we will do it. Though hand join with hand, though legislature join with governor, though State join with State, though for a year, or a generation, justice be manacled, yet the eternal years of God belong not to wrong: they belong to Truth and Right. If the fathers are dead, here, in this presence, in the place of the fathers are the children. There shall be enough of them to carry on the succession and to complete their work.

In behalf of masses of men in our own land discriminated against by those on whose side is power, supplied with the scantiest education, and threatened with the loss of the little that has been allowed them; in behalf of brothers and sisters crowded out and trampled down, taught that they are an inferior race, forbidden to have ambitions, told that they must be servants if they cannot be made slaves, sunk into a baser, scarce human caste, for whose souls Christ died no less than for the souls of those that shut them out of their churches, who yet have the same aspirations as we and the same destiny, who if they overcome shall sit down with Christ in his throne, even as he also overcame and is set down with the Father in his throne—in behalf of these our brothers, and our fellow heirs, shame on us if we pledge them not the fullest measure of our sympathy and help. In behalf of this our country, their fatherland and ours, whose people we would have all intelligent and all righteous, and whose ignorance and vice would be its overthrow, remembering how our fathers vowed before God that slavery should be destroyed, and how they kept the vow, we register our vow, and call these our brothers to witness it, that no matter what old prejudice or jealous malice may say or do, no matter what legislatures may enact or constitutions impose, we, sons of the fathers, with the fathers' God on our side and helping us, will stand by these whom our blood has set free; we will supply their lack to the extent of our power; they shall have schools and colleges and seminaries which shall provide them leaders of their own race and shall allow them to prove to the world what power God has put in their brains, and what grace God has put in their hearts. Opposition shall not thwart us and indifference shall not discourage us. They shall be treated as we treat our own, with no curse of caste, as our equals before God on earth as in heaven; and from our schools we will shut out no child or man, white or black; but there all shall be one, as all are one before the great white throne.

And we shall succeed. It needs no special gift of prophecy to say it, and yet the spirit of prophecy is not dead among us; and we here, children of those who never knew discouragement in the conflict which at last they won, who could always foretell the Lord's victory, lift up our prophetic voice with the same assurance which made Isaiah say, "Thus saith the Lord, the Redeemer of Israel and his Holy One to him whom man despiseth, to him whom the nation abhorreth, to a servant of rulers; in an accepted time have I heard thee, and I will preserve thee that thou mayest say to the prisoners, Go forth, and to them that are in darkness, Show yourselves; and all flesh shall know that I, the Lord, am thy Savior, and thy Redeemer, the Mighty One of Jacob." Even so, God allows us to look with clear vision down the years and inspires us to say, Why does Carolina rage and Florida imagine a vain thing? The Lord who proclaimed liberty to the captives will bind the broken-hearted; his arm will bring salvation; and "all thy children shall be taught of the Lord, and great shall be the peace of thy children." We may see one State after another attempt to break down the system of public education which the issue of war gave to the slave, but it cannot succeed. Surely, and not very slowly, a better sentiment is moving southward. Neither Kentucky, nor Tennessee, nor Virginia, nor North Carolina, nor even Georgia or Arkansas could be frightened by any specter of miscegenation into the overthrow of their public schools. There has been a tremendous progress in these last thirty years, and that progress will not stop. The race once enslaved has begun to taste the sweets of knowledge and power, and nothing can prevent them from taking deeper drafts. Let two States, or five, try to beguile them from the fruit of that tree, and with a more eager pursuit they will seize it. That will be a day of black shame to any State that passes a law limiting the education and closing the schools of its despised race. As lately in South Carolina the Negroes took their cause out of the hands of politicians, and their preachers met and told them what to do when the whites were combined in convention against them, so once more, in a more serious emergency the Negro preachers with all their churches will arise, Methodists and Baptists, forgetting their jealousies, and they will say, Let the State withdraw its support and leave us but the skeleton of our public schools, and we, the black, the poor, will out of our poverty bid them continue; we will draft our young men and women to teach them; we will supply larger and better schools than the State gave; our children shall not grow up in ignorance. And we, on whose conscience God has rolled this burden, will go down and help them. We will take their boys and girls and make teachers of them; we will multiply the schools just as fast as the State closes them. Down on the blinded infatuation and folly of South Carolina or Florida we will roll waves and floods of influence and light. It shall come from every State; it shall hurry from every press; it shall rush from every pulpit; every railroad train shall speed with its angry protest; and the whole land with united voice shall command the schools to be opened and the people to be taught.

And who are ye, governors and legislators, and constitution makers, and superintendents of public instruction, that stand up and take counsel together against intelligence, liberty and justice? The common school you cannot suppress. If you will not support it, others will, till you have learned the rudiments of your duty to the State. The alphabet is too much for you to fight. You cannot put it down; it will down you. The letters that spell liberty and equal rights will stamp dishonor on your graves. Your league against God's poor shall not prosper, for we too have a league, a league with the truth and justice of God, a league which nothing can withstand.

Fathers and brethren, you are children of the fathers, and fathers of children whose generations shall not end. You are brethren of God's suffering, trampled ones, and therefore you are proved brethren of Christ. I need not summon you to the old courage and faith, for you have inherited it. Nothing will dishearten you; nothing will swerve your purpose. Here you will take counsel together, and not without

God. Your holy zeal for your lofty cause shall be mingled only with derision for the people who imagine a vain thing. The Lord of hosts is with us, the God of Jacob is our refuge. We are not alone, we are not few. Just as the fathers in the day when this Association was founded, few then, soon found themselves a host, an army marching through Georgia to the sea, so now you, fathers, already a larger host, shall find the multitudes of schools and the legions of churches all over the land massed about you, and you shall press on, beneficent and irresistible as the still, small voice of God, until we shall have one land and one people, all righteous, all intelligent, all allowed equal privileges, with free education and free worship, on week days crowding the schools and colleges, rich and poor, white and black alike; and on the Sabbath day old and young gathering on every temple-crowned hill to worship him who has made us all of one blood, before whom here we are all miserable sinners alike, but before whom above we shall all be alike kings and priests unto God forever.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON FINANCE,

Appointed at the Annual Meeting of the American Missionary Association held in Detroit, Mich., October 22-24, 1895.

The Committee have to report that they visited the office of the Treasurer of the Association, and after an inspection of the Treasurer's books, which were freely opened and explained to them in detail, are pleased to confirm the very satisfactory reports heretofore made by similar Committees.

The methods heretofore practiced in keeping the Treasurer's accounts, and caring for the securities and properties held by the Association are still in use without any material modifications—and for those who are familiar with the reports similar to this made in previous years, little more need be said concerning the business methods pursued by the Treasurer of the Association.

For the information, however, of those who are unfamiliar with the business routine of the office, your Committee desire to state that they have found the present practice in the Treasurer's office to be very satisfactory in the following particulars, which relate to the completeness and the clearness of the record of its transactions, and to the safe custody of its securities and properties:

The books are kept by double entry, are well and clearly arranged, and are as simple as the character of the items to be recorded will permit.

In the cash book are entered daily all receipts and disbursements of moneys, accompanied by whatever explanations are needed for their complete understanding. These transactions are, in due course, journalized and carried into the ledger.

Moneys received are deposited in banks approved by the Executive Committee, and cannot be withdrawn therefrom except upon appropriations made by the Executive Committee, and upon checks signed by two of the officers of the Association. Monthly statements of receipts and disbursements are prepared by the Treasurer, and after approval by a member of the Committee on Finance, are presented to the Executive Committee. Quarterly examinations of all receipts and disbursements including an examination of the vouchers and the checks drawn in payment thereof, are made by auditors elected annually by the Association, and certificates as to these examinations are duly signed by the auditors upon the Treasurer's books.

All securities representing investments held by the Association are kept in a safe deposit vault which is only accessible to the Treasurer when accompanied by another officer of the Association, two keys being required for that purpose and one being in the custody of each.

Real estate books are kept in which all real property held by the Association is shown and particulars recorded of the date of its receipt, the source from which it was derived, whether by purchase or by legacy, and if by purchase, the cost. They also contain a record of the expenses attending each piece of property and the income derived therefrom.

The records of legacies and trust funds are kept with such completeness of detail that the condition of each fund is clearly shown. The accounts of the Daniel Hand Fund are kept separately in books specially devoted to that purpose, and the income derived therefrom is kept in a separate bank account. As in the case of the Daniel Hand Fund, so in the case of all other trusts, the accounts are so kept as to show the character of each, the revenue derived therefrom, and the conditions accompanying the trust, if any there be.

Further, all the property accounts, certificates of stocks, bonds and other securities held by the Association, and the investments of the several funds, are subject to careful examination by the auditors, who make annual report that they correspond with the Treasurer's balance sheet and with the accounts therewith on his books.

Your Committee have great pleasure in expressing their approval of the system pursued in the Treasurer's office and of the care exercised in the official inspection and auditing of his accounts. In all that relates to its treasury and the custody of its moneys and its securities, and to the safeguards attached to its operations, they consider the methods practiced by the officers of the Association to be most excellent.

The accounts show:

The receipts of the year were $340,798.65, an increase of $33,251.49 over last year. Of this increase $21,061.10 was in collections, of which $20,287.21 was in payment on subscriptions for Jubilee shares, $5,447.73 was from estates, and $6,742.66 was from other sources. The payments for the year were $311,223.35, a decrease of $26,110.65 from last year. The debt at the beginning of the year was $96,147.81, and the debt September 30th is $66,572.51, a decrease of $29,575.30.

In addition to the above there has been received during the past year on account of the Endowment Fund a balance of $250 from an estate.

From the Daniel Hand Fund Income Account there has also been received $68,830.44 which with the $5,918.99 on hand at the beginning of the year makes a total of $74,749.43. Deduct the expenditures during the year of $70,567.20 and there remains on hand September 30th, 1896, the sum of $4,182.23.

In connection with the close of the first half century of the Association's existence it is interesting to note that:

The current receipts of the Association the first year were $11,328.27, and the fiftieth year $340,798.65. The largest receipts in any one year for current work were in 1891–1892, the forty-sixth year, the year previous to the present period of financial stringency, and were $429,949.37.

The Endowment Fund, known as the Daniel Hand Educational Fund for the Colored People, is reserved here for special mention as one of the significant events in the recent financial history of the Association.

At the annual meeting in Providence, R. I., October, 1888, the Executive Committee reported the gift of Daniel Hand of $1,000,894.25 to be known as the Daniel Hand Educational Fund for Colored People, the income only to be used for the education of colored people of African descent residing in the recent slave States of the United States of America.

This, we believe, is the largest gift ever made in this country by a living donor to a benevolent society. In the will of Daniel Hand a bequest was made of additional amounts under the same terms and conditions as the original trust.

The Association has received from the estate of Daniel Hand during the past year securities amounting to $305,025 face value.

In view of the fact that the receipts during this last difficult year have enabled the Association to avoid a debt upon the work of the year, and also of the fact that the subscriptions to the Jubilee Share Fund have greatly aided to make possible a reduction of the debt to $66,000; it is earnestly hoped that the coming year will witness the entire extinction of the debt. Other great national benevolences which seem to have suffered from this cause are now free from debt. It is evident from the increased receipts for the past few months that the churches are turning toward the American Missionary Association to afford corresponding help to its imperiled work. The rapid increase of subscriptions for the Jubilee Share Fund is encouraging. No better method can be found than that of special subscriptions toward this fund for obtaining the object in view. These subscriptions, whether from individuals or from churches, can be made aside from the regular contributions on which the Association must depend for support of its current work. With the coming of better times it is certainly not a difficult task for the 5,500 churches of our fellowship with their 600,000 members to raise the necessary amount. If every pastor and each church committee will take up the responsibility, the work can be done within the next few months. It is well begun in the $20,000 already contributed to the Jubilee Share Fund. With one united effort the next few months will witness the wiping out of the last vestige of this debt and putting the great work of the Association on a new basis of efficient and prosperous service.

Dated New York, October 14th, 1896.

OF THE

FOR THE YEAR ENDING SEPTEMBER 30TH, 1896.

GENERAL SURVEY.

The Executive Committee takes pleasure in reporting to the Association, convened at its semi-centennial meeting, concerning the support received and the work accomplished during the fiftieth year of its history. At the close of last year our payments had exceeded our receipts by $30,000, and this deficit added to those of previous years aggregated to a debt of $96,000. We can now report that, both by increased receipts and by further reduction in expenditures, we have this year not only met our expenses, but have reduced the debt to $66,000. We are glad to report that the Association has received in contributions and legacies over $26,000 more than last year. Of this amount above $20,000 has been subscribed and paid into the "Jubilee Share Fund." A large proportion of these shares has been taken within the last three months of the year, and we are earnestly hoping that the raising of the whole fund will now be soon completed and that the Association will be enabled to go on in its work without the burden of a debt. The severity of our retrenchments may be understood when it is known that last year's expenditures were $75,000 less than those of 1893, three years ago. The means now being used are greatly inadequate to the imperative needs of the service. But the present policy of retrenchment must necessarily be continued until the Association is out of debt.

As to the work of the Association, we would respectfully report that the last year has been one of efficient service and most encouraging returns in all the various departments in which our means permitted carrying on missionary service.

The object of the Association is broadly stated in its constitution to be the conduct of Christian missionary and educational operations. At the present time these operations are conducted in behalf of five different races in our common country. They consist of the establishment and support of missions and churches, and of schools, reaching from the elementary school through high schools, normal schools, and colleges. These lines of work are carried on among eight millions of the colored people through all the South, among two millions of white Southern people of the Appalachian highlands, among the Indians in the Dakotas, Montana, Nebraska and Washington, among the Eskimos of Alaska, and among the Chinese of the Pacific Coast.

In our survey of the Southern educational work we remember that we are taking account in the present of the policies and conduct of the patient years of the past. Our theories are the children of our experiences. Therefore as we note the present state of our work we find it interwoven with our theories and their reasons.

The American Missionary Association took on its peculiar character when four millions of slaves were legally recognized as belonging to the human race. Then began the evolution of the Negro people, calling into exercise their latent powers, and opening their life to freedom of choice and endeavor. If the movement in this great historical process sometimes has seemed slow, and often beset with anxieties, the advance nevertheless has been steady. Enough has been wrought out to assure us that the people who began with nothingness, shall yet have a worthy place among the races of the future.

It is true the Negro people have increased in numbers more rapidly than the provisions have increased for their education and elevation. The last census tells us that the number of Negro people who could not read and write in 1890 was the same as when the race was emancipated in 1863. But it also informs us that within this short period more than four millions have ceased to be ranked in the illiterate class, and that nearly one-half of the total number of the present eight millions have had the advantages of schools to some degree, while the illiteracy of the race was reduced nearly 14 per cent. within the preceding ten years. Measured from the depth from which the race has come the present condition of four millions is phenomenal.

There are those who yet measure the possibilities of this race by what it was when it emerged from the barbarism of slavery. They judge its capacity by those who are now living in ignorance and weakness.

Meanwhile, those who study the development of races understand that no people hold the correct measure of its possibilities in its lower strata. Nor are the true standards of judgment even in the ordinary attainment of those who have risen above illiteracy. We measure the capacity and possibilities of every race by its higher attainments; not by what it has not attained.

On this scale, the pure racial qualities of the Negro are abundantly justifying the policy and the features of our educational work. Thousands have established their capacity to take on a generous education, and of these a fair proportion have risen to positions where they are proving their right to teachership and leadership, often under most adverse conditions. Many who began in extreme humbleness are reaching into high places and are standing strong with their brethren of other races in the development of superior powers. We have gone far enough in our work to know that when justice shall come in the land and the people shall do judgment, that which has already been accomplished for and with the Negro people will be recognized as one of the great achievements of this century.

ELEMENTARY SCHOOLS.

The missionary and educational policy of the Association has a cumulative confirmation in its history. It began with very many purely elementary schools for an elementary people. There are now but twenty-five of these under our care, though there are primary grades for elementary instruction with forty of our graded and normal schools.

This elementary instruction is still carried on in some degree by the Association, because among the four untaught millions there remain all the existing facilities of every kind. The Southern States have to a considerable degree in their public-school system provided in most cities, in large towns and villages, for a measure of secular elementary instruction of colored children, and wherever the provision of the public schools becomes at all adequate for the elementary education of colored pupils, it is our policy to remove our schools of lower grades from such vicinities to places that are darker and more needy.

GRADED AND NORMAL SCHOOLS.

With the assuring evidences of capacity and with the certainty that the race would need and must have educators and leaders from its own ranks, grammar and normal schools with rapid steps succeeded our primary and elementary schools. These have grown into centers of great light and power. It is not from lack of appreciation that we fail to name them. There are forty-three of these in number.

In different localities in twelve Southern States, pupils numbering several thousands every year are taken through the intermediate, grammar, and normal courses of instruction and graduates go out yearly to such work in life as they may be able to secure. Many avenues are closed to them which they are prepared to enter, and would enter if only the Ethiopian could change his skin. As it is, the verdict of candor from observant Southern people comes to us that most of the pupils educated in our schools do honor to their instruction and to the principles which have been interwoven with their school life. Many who go out from these schools become useful teachers in rural communities, and in country districts, and though humble, are yet potent forces in uplifting the lowly, who otherwise would have no teaching worthy of the name. The faithful and excellent teaching in our graded and normal schools by elect Northern teachers brings frequent and cordial recognition from many good people of the South. The numbers of those who bear the testimony of appreciation increase every year as they witness the fruitage of our work and understand it better. These schools are crowded with pupils, and many who need these chances are denied them from lack of room.

The single instance of hostility to this school work—so far as we know—has developed in Orange Park, Florida. While many of our schools at the present time are visited on occasions of interest by Southern white people; while Southern educators and public men in many cases act officially as our school visitors, and in several of our schools as trustees; when Governors of States freely commend our work, and local editors give it generous notices in their papers, voicing the public sentiment in commending our methods and results, it has been reserved for the Superintendent of the Public Schools of Florida, officially, to attack our normal school in that State. Through his influence an act has been provided by the Legislature directed against this school which the entire press of the enlightened portions of the country and the Christian people of various communions have pronounced with one accord to be infamous.

This case being before the court in Florida at this date, we may properly recall it. In November last the National Triennial Council of Congregational Churches declared by a unanimous vote that "this enactment is repugnant to Christian principle," and called upon the Association to "resist it in all lawful ways."

On the 10th of April following, six teachers and the pastor of the church, who taught Bible lessons in the school, were arrested for the alleged crime of teaching young people of two races at the same time under the same roof. The white patrons of the school residing in Orange Park were likewise arrested, and we were forced to close our sessions for the remainder of the unexpired school year. Arrangements have been made, however, for the continuance of the school, under whatever conditions we may be forced to accept, until the decision of the courts. It may be that these oppositions of injustice will furnish the occasion for another movement toward a better apprehension of justice, and of its practice. All who have interested themselves in this contention feel that it has roots which are very deep.

COLLEGES.

Our grammar and normal schools were followed in turn with a limited number of higher institutions for a class from which should come those who should prove the capacity of the race. These were Fisk University, in Tennessee; Atlanta University, in Georgia; Straight University, in Louisiana; Talladega College, in Alabama; Tougaloo University, in Mississippi; and, somewhat later, Tillotson College, in Texas. These higher institutions have justified the wisdom which has established and which has provided for them. What was begun theoretically has become demonstration.

At the 250th anniversary of Harvard College a profound student of public affairs, James Russell Lowell, in a famous address, said: "What we need more than anything else is to increase the number of thoroughly trained minds, for these, wherever they go, are sure to carry with them, consciously or not, the seeds of sounder thinking and of higher ideals. The only way in which our civilization can be maintained, even at the level it has reached—the only way in which that level can be made more general and be raised higher—is by bringing the influence of the more cultivated to bear with greater energy and directness on the less cultivated, and by opening more inlets which make for refinement of mind and body." This is the testimony that runs along the history of education. Our New England fathers cherished sound learning for Christianity's sake. Our Congregational churches made it their doctrine and history. But if this is wisdom, and continues to be an ever-present necessity for a people which have cherished higher education for centuries, not less is it wisdom and necessity for a race undeveloped, where the need of this affiliation of learning and religion is absolute. No people can rise who are shut in to limited and partial privileges.

Indeed, except for institutions like these the public school system of the South for the colored people could not be carried on with any degree of worthiness. But the public schools do not exhaust our reasons for our higher institutions. Our reasons are in our pulpits. They are in necessary professions. They are found among the bankers and builders and editors and printers. They are rapidly raising the rank of their race. This is very practical; for, when we consider the question of practicality in the salvation and elevation of a people, we realize that our fathers were right to conclude that the idea of education is short-sighted and bad which considers knowledge to be practical only as it can be made at once to grind corn, or can be measured by merely materialistic values. Accepting the fact of the decrees which decide the capacities of men and their limitations, so that the rank and file must be prepared for and engage in manual labor of some kind, it remains true that those who can impregnate the minds of people about them, who can quicken their thoughts, who can rouse lower intellects and energize them, who can change their low views to higher ones and give larger and truer ideas of life and the world, here and hereafter, and make their lives more vital with thought for daily wants and uses, will be found to have had a very practical education.

Moreover, by forces not material are the material forces penetrated and stirred. When we see how the thoughts of men are harnessed into service in the places of industry, then we understand that there is no arithmetic with figures enough to compute the mere money value of the thoughts which are the secrets of materialistic accomplishment. In education we cannot forget that the world's advance in wealth, as in everything else, comes from those who know how to think, and that those who develop the thinkers develop the workers. The greater the intellectual wealth of a people, the greater will be the aggregate of materialistic wealth, and the developed material prosperity will come more rapidly and surely with better-developed men. Low-grade men are content with low-grade things. Along all the lines of materialistic development the great need of the Negro people to-day is men of trained thought, thinking men, men of larger vision, and more comprehensive minds, who can and will uplift and establish the material as well as the intellectual and spiritual standards of the race. Therefore we are confident that the shortest path in the development of the colored people is in the more perfect development of their intelligence, in the more complete command of their mental powers. With this there comes a better industry in their habits, for ignorance and indolence are twins. We know also—and all experience stands back of this knowledge—that a low mental life tends to a low moral life, and that both of these conditions are a natural prey for oppressors and for all who do not wish to do justly.

Two of the institutions planted by the Association have become independent and are now wholly under the care of their own trustees. These are Hampton Institute and Atlanta University. We rejoice in their great usefulness, and we look forward hopefully to the time when our colleges shall so secure funds under their own control that they shall cease to be dependent upon the Association.

With this long look forward, however, we have not been unmindful of the temporal interests of the race in the immediate present. Industrial training has gone hand in hand with higher learning from the beginning. In all of our schools instruction is systematically given in various skilled industries for such educative development as these may confer, and as tributary forces to intellectual and spiritual upbuilding.

Our educational work, however, as a missionary society finds its highest expression in our theological schools. It is not enough that the Bible is a daily text-book and that the day schools have their societies of Christian Endeavor.

Every year gladdens the hearts of those engaged in the schools with hopeful conversions and evidences of Christian growth, but the gospel ministry among these people needs educated minds specially trained. Through our excellent theological schools the quality of the churches is being changed and the character of the Negro people themselves, and it is because of these schools that we can prosecute church work effectively.

This completed educational year has been one of much satisfaction, but the inability to meet the necessities of our work has been a painful experience.

MOUNTAIN SCHOOLS.

Schools	19
Pupils	2,405

These nineteen mountain schools are included in the general statistics, but this separate mention is made that the work may be more easily traced.

The same fundamental principles have characterized the work of the Association among the mountaineers as in other departments. These schools have been no mushroom growth, nor have they been hothouse plants forced by artificial methods into the largest possible growth. Indeed both in number of schools and in the enrollment of pupils these mountain schools have been restricted rather than forced. Although the work among the American Highlanders began in the earliest years of the Association's history, a comparatively brief period covers that which is aggressive and permanent. These mountaineers are the youngest children of our Association. In the development of this work it is a constant study to plant the schools so that they will reach the largest constituency. In planning this work it is necessary to decline many applications and select a few, each of which shall be at a strategic point.

In the careful and conservative development of the field, schools have been planted in five mountain States. The limit of the work is fixed by necessity arising from the lack of funds and not because of the lack of opportunities in most needy communities.

In the development of the individual school the same conservatism has obtained. Elementary education is first introduced, as this is first needed. These elementary schools not only educate the pupils within the limits of their own grades, but naturally create a desire for educational advantages, larger and more complete. These elementary schools increasing in grades grow into normal institutes. Our chief work among these American Highlanders has been and is to train teachers and give them a leadership of their own people. The academy, which has been, perhaps, an important factor in the social and intellectual development of New England, has a large place in the work among the mountaineers. Of the nineteen schools among the mountains, nine are academies. These academies lack greatly the proper appointments for such institutions. Economy of financial administration compels this condition, but it is by no means economy in the solution of the educational problems we have upon us in this vast mountain region. But, with these schools naturally developing, there is stirred in the minds of the brighter pupils a desire for still further intellectual training. Great results are already apparent in this educational work in the mountains. Hundreds of teachers who have been trained in normal methods in these academies are teachers in district schools. The so-called blab school of a few years back is being metamorphosed through these teachers into the decent district school. The principals of some of our own American Missionary Association schools are native mountaineers, who as lads were trained in our own institutions.

Thus through these schools, covering grades from primary to complete normal, an educational leadership is being gradually formed, and the wide and far-reaching influence of these institutions in the mountain districts can scarcely be appreciated by those unfamiliar with these conditions. Our mountain academies and seminaries for girls are effecting changes in the whole educational system of these mountain States.

MOUNTAIN CHURCHES.

Churches	56
Membership	1,601

The mountain churches have increased in number for the past year by the addition of six. Great care has been taken in their organization. Congregational councils are a new feature of ecclesiastical development in these regions. Such councils, however, have been gathered and have impressed upon the people the fellowship of the churches, together with the lesson of the independence of the local church. We are happy to report that churches are developing self-direction and self-support. In several cases the new "church house" has been erected entirely by the offerings of the people without drawing upon the treasury of any benevolent society. Missionary work in surrounding neighborhoods has been a special feature in the efforts of these churches during the year. Almost every mountain church has been the center of this missionary activity. Some of these missions have already developed into churches. Others are still being maintained with the prospect that soon they too will desire the more systematic organization and closer fellowship that come through the church bonds.

An interesting movement among the young people of the mountains has manifested itself in the organization of Christian Endeavor Societies. The superintendent who acts jointly for our Association and the Sunday-school and Publishing Society has found these Endeavor Societies very effective in carrying on gospel work among these Highlanders. During the year twenty-five Endeavor Societies have been organized under the direction of this superintendent and the missionaries at the various stations. In many cases these Endeavor Societies are the only organized Christian effort in the mountain hamlets. In other cases they supplement Sunday-school or church work. Presenting as they do the idea of Christian service rather than Christian enjoyment, they at once become centers of positive and aggressive religious work.

In many of these churches interesting revivals have been in progress during the year. In many cases our small missionary churches have proved too contracted to accommodate the large numbers that gathered to these special services. The church work in the mountains lacks a sufficient number of pastors. The faithful men engaged in the ministry of the work of this mountain region supply from two to six churches each. The roads are very difficult, and in a portion of the year almost impassable with floods and washouts. Services can be held but infrequently where so large a territory is covered by the ministry of a single man, but the people are faithful and earnest and show remarkable aptitude for the conduct of their own meetings during the absence of the pastor. If we could, however, increase our ministerial force in the mountains so as to meet the increasing demands for preaching that come from many regions, vastly greater progress could be made in the church work. Still we have great reason to rejoice in the increase during the past few years. The church membership of these Congregational churches in the mountains now numbers 1,600. This is an increase of 60 per cent. in the membership of these mountain churches during the past three years.

CHURCH WORK IN THE SOUTH.

Churches	218
Church Membership	10,708
Ministers and Missionaries	127

These statistics of the Church Work in the South include that of the mountain people, as well as that among the Negroes.

Six years ago, after a careful study of the field both by our missionaries and from the central office, the Executive Committee voted to make increased effort for our church work, and especially prepare efficient and worthy ministers in our own schools, trained to work with Congregational principles in our Congregational ways. A considerable addition to the force for Biblical and theological instruction in our higher schools was made in order to carry out the purposes of this vote. But these plans for enlargement have been interrupted by the sharp contraction forced upon the Association through its decreasing resources. We have had to report the necessity of making the best of agencies and forces already in the field without such increase in their value as had been hoped for.

Notwithstanding these adverse circumstances our church work has made wonderful progress, and we report as organized this year twenty-six new churches. Our training-schools for ministers among the colored people are now able to furnish us with missionaries who can be relied upon to meet the new openings pressed upon our attention by appeals from these vast mission fields. We can enter on the borders of this immense home mission work which ought to be done for these four millions of Negro people in the Black Belt of the South. More than three-quarters of them are not found in the cities, towns and villages, but live on the plantations. Mr. Bryce, in his admirable work on America, has called attention to the enormous difference between the colored churches of the cities and towns and those of the back districts. The rank superstitions, the beliefs in necromancy and witchcraft, the wild orgies of excitement, the utter divorce between the moral virtues and what is called religion, which obtain among the millions of the plantation Negroes of the South, are but little understood. By one who knows it, the Black Belt has been called the great Dismal Swamp, the vast black malarial slough of the American republic.

We hope that our churches will soon be awakened to the vastness and promise of these home mission fields which they have put in charge of the American Missionary Association, and that they will speedily furnish not only the means for more ample support of our educational service, but also for the broadening of our distinctive church missions. The day has come for the planting of free Congregational churches among the shadowed millions of the South.

The uprisings in various localities toward the establishment of free churches, and the appeals which we receive for the introduction of the free Congregational polity have been continued through this year as through last year, but we have been unable to meet these appeals with the necessary missionary aid. With the dawning of brighter times we may expect to see a large advance in the growth of Congregational churches among the colored people of the South.

The present year has been one of most earnest effort among the members of our churches to increase the support of their own work. The Association has been under the necessity of throwing upon the churches more responsibility in this direction. Usually this has been met by largely increased endeavors on the part of the people. The reported amounts raised in church support fall considerably short of the real support which has been given. In a great many instances support was furnished in provisions and fuel, and labor, which has not been reckoned at its money value.

Not only does the last year bring to us accounts of increased local support, but it also details many interesting scenes of revival experiences through a large number of our fields.

INDIAN WORK.

Missionary Out-stations	26

Great progress has been made in improving the environment of the Indian in recent years. He can now hold his property in severalty and become a farmer or herdsman as he chooses.

Citizenship is also within his grasp, with proper and wholesome conditions. A larger protection under the United States laws is offered him. With the exception of laws governing his marriage relation and divorce, which are largely left at present to the agents, much to the injury of the Indian, little more can be done to improve his legal status.

The old tribal relationship is rapidly passing away. With the disintegration of this system the dignity and manhood of the Indian, as an individual, are established. Each Indian can now build and occupy his own cottage home, cultivate his own acres, enjoy the rights of citizenship reasonably secure from interference or injustice from his pale-faced brother. There are still existing dangers in the Indian system which must be taken in hand by the general Government and corrected. But, in general, politics and even statesmanship have effected nearly all they can in improving the outward conditions of the Indian.

In this changed environment two things must be borne in mind: First—that the largest factor in bringing about this improvement in the condition of the Indian has been the persistent and self-sacrificing work of the missionary. Little would have been accomplished at Washington except as the few earnest and noble statesmen have been reinforced by missionaries and missionary societies in their efforts to secure justice for the Indian. The potent and permanent factor in this betterment of the Indian's physical condition has been the influence of men and women who sought for Christ's sake to bring His gospel to him.

Another important fact is that the work which lies before us now requires a vast amount of patience, courage, and perseverance. These changes that have taken place are apparent and manifest. They can be seen; are concrete and definite. But they do not necessarily affect his character. This must be changed in order to his real improvement. That which has been done furnishes opportunity, but only as the Indian improves this opportunity himself can any good result. This larger opportunity only emphasizes the necessity of larger effort to bring the Indian to the recognition of his increasing privileges and to the worthy exercise of his rights.

The serious problem in the Indian field for the past few years has been how to do this work, rapidly increasing in its opportunities and necessities, with a steadily decreasing amount of funds with which to do it. This has been an effort to cut a very small piece of cloth for a very large garment. In this effort there have been many trying experiences. These have fallen especially upon our central schools, the Santee Normal Training School, Oahe Mission School, and Fort Berthold Home School. The decrease in the number of pupils reported in these schools arises solely from the fact that we have not had sufficient money to carry on the work for a larger number. An analysis of the statistics will show that during the past four years the amount of funds available for educational and missionary work among the Indians has been reduced from $57,880 to $35,000. The withdrawal of so large an amount as $22,000 a year for these years from this department, made imperative in pursuance of the policy that we shall no longer receive Governmental aid, has involved a great sacrifice of work.

Just as these large opportunities were opening in this field came this retrenchment. The result is seen in the decreasing enrollment of these central schools. The progress of the work in out-stations has been remarkable. Indians, young men and women, trained in our schools, have entered with devotion and heroism upon mission work in many Indian villages. But this out-station work cannot be long sustained if the central missions and schools are so seriously depleted. Santee Normal Training School prepares this Indian leadership for Indian people. This school, however, has been reduced in its enrollment from 241 pupils in 1893 to 93 in 1895–96. Government schools cannot furnish for these Indians a Christian leadership. There must needs be Christian institutions. In every department of our work the same principle holds good. To train a Christian leadership for any people there must be Christian schools. So evident is this principle that it needs no argument. The following quotation from a letter written recently by ex-Senator Dawes adds the emphasis of his name and wide experience and great service in the Indian field to this fact:
